House Committee Will Debate Abbreviated Measure Today.

Tactics Discussed At White House

Rep. Ramspeck to Offer Counter Proposal of Moderation.

By Robert C. Albright.

Two moves to compromise the Administration's deadlocked wages and hours bill will be outlined to the House Labor Committee this morning at a special meeting called by Chairman Mary T. Norton.

It was learned that an entirely new and greatly abbreviated bill is being prepared by legislative draftsmen as a basis of discussion. The bill will not be completed until later this week, but Mrs. Norton will go over details with the committee.

A counter proposal, striking an entirely new and more moderate approach to the wage-hour question is expected to be presented at the same meeting by Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, a ranking member of the committee.

Both Chairman Norton and Representative Ramspeck called on the President at the White House last week, when both proposals were said to have been discussed. Neither member last night would discuss the nature of their suggestions, or the President's attitude.

Bill Will Be Shorter.

It is reliably understood that the President is pressing for passage of some form of wage-hour legislation before adjournment, but is not insisting on any hard and fast method. He is represented as urging the incorporation of at least the wage standard principle into Federal law.

The bill now being drafted for presentation to the committee by Mrs. Norton is said to be agreeable to the President, but it was indicated this does not mean some other form would not be equally acceptable, provided the wage principle was provided on a national basis.

The new bill is expected to be greatly shortened, eliminating much of the language that appeared in the bill which passed the Senate last session, and the House print that was later sent back to committee.

Single Administrator.

It is understood the new measure would provide for administration by a single official, with the advice of a nine-man labor board, which would make recommendations for wage-hour standards for each industry after hearing the case for employer, employe and the public, affecting each group.

The same wage-hour standards—as high as 40 cents an hour and a week as short as 40 hours—would be provided in the new draft, with the administrator permitted to fix differentials as between industries and sections.

The long list of exemptions carried in former House and Senate bills would be completely eliminated, and industrial exemptions

Hoover State Secretary Gets Post Held by John B. Moore.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt appointed former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson and Michael Francis Doyle, of Philadelphia, members of the permanent Court of Arbitration yesterday.

Doyle succeeds the late Newton D. Baker. Stimson will take the post formerly held by John Bassett Moore, whose term has expired.

The Hague conventions of 1899 and 1907 provided the adhering nations should appoint not more than four nationals to constitute a panel of judges from which arbitrators are selected for any dispute referred to the court.

Other Americans members of the court are Judge Manley O. Hudson, also a judge of the Permanent Court of International Justice at The Hague, and Green H. Hackworth, State Department legal adviser.

House Passes $250,000,000 Relief Measure

Bill Is Amended to Deny Assistance to Alien Unemployed.

By the Associated Press.

A $250,000,000 supplementary appropriation for emergency relief for the next four months went through the House yesterday by the overwhelming vote of 352 to 23. It now goes to the Senate.

Republicans and Democrats alike voted the fund after the Works Progress Administration reported the business recession would add 500,000 persons to the current total of about 2,000,000 on relief rolls and that available money would be insufficient.

The House easily defeated an attempt by Representative Voorhis (Democrat), California, to increase the appropriation to $400,000,000 and a proposal by Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas, that any of the money allocated to construction be transferred to the Public Works Administration. Dies' amendment was sponsored by the American Federation of Labor.

Earmarking Declined.

A moment before the final decision, Representative Taber (Republican), New York, got only a smattering of votes for his motion to send the proposal back to the Appropriations Committee.

The House declined to earmark the fund. It accepted, however, an amendment by Representative Lanham (Democrat), Texas, to deny any portion of it to aliens who have not signified an intention to become citizens or who legally cannot become citizens.

Representative Bacon (Republican), New York), tried unsuccessfully to write into the bill a stipulation that none of the money could be used for political purposes. He said members had heard of attempts to use WPA money in an "obvious attempt to influence elections."

Prohibitions Defeated.

Majority Leader Rayburn, of Texas, raised the point of order that Bacon's proposal was not germane and Representative Walter (Democrat), Pennsylvania, who was presiding, sustain i h.

The House also defeated attempts by Representative Wood (Democrat), Missouri, to forbid use of the money for construction of buildings costing more than $25,000 and by Representative Beiter (Democrat), New York, to prohibit purchases of heavy construction equipment.

'Chute Expert's Suicide Puzzles Two-Week Bride

William Francis Scott, 44, greatest parachute jumper in United States Navy annals, died of poisoning here yesterday. His body was found by his bride of two weeks in their home, 528 Ninth street southeast.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide last night after police found two notes addressed to the 21-year-old bride saying, "It is beyond my capacity to comply with what the world expects after breaking all parachute jump records at one time" and "I want to be with my mother."

Scott, who established the Navy's record with a parachute jump of 15,200 feet in 1928, had been in a depressed state since death of his mother last year, friends said.

The body was found in a second floor bedroom shortly after noon by his wife, the former Josephine Rosenfield, as she returned home with her sister after spending the night at the home of her parents, 417 I

Kennedy Flays Miss Perkins' Maritime Stand

Calls Her Argument Opposing Mediation 'Complete Fallacy.'

By Edward T. Folliard

The battle between two of President Roosevelt's chief lieutenants, Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, of the Maritime Commission, and Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, went another round at the Capitol yesterday.

In a fighting mood, Kennedy told the Senate Commerce Commitee that Miss Perkins' argument against mediation machinery for settling maritime labor disputes was "strange" and a "complete fallacy."

To tolerate the present chaos in the field of maritime labor, he said, was to "invite complete destruction of the American merchant marine."

Miss Perkins had warned the committee that the maritime industry was not "ripe" for mediation machinery. Unlike the railroad workers, she said, the sailors and stevedores were "not fully organized." That also is the argument of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

"I submit," Kennedy told the committee, "that if the maritime industry is not 'ripe' for conciliation and mediation of its labor disputes, then it is over-ripe for ruin."

Kennedy, who resigns his chairmanship today to become Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, prepared his answer to Miss Perkins after a long nocturnal conference with President Roosevelt. Consequently Administration followers on Capitol Hill could draw their own conclusions.

President Roosevelt thus far has refrained from siding openly with either Kennedy or Miss Perkins.

U.S. Calls Capone 'Lucid' in Spite of His 'Disturbances'

Justice Department officials said yesterday that Alphonse Capone, serving a ten-year sentence on Alcatraz Island for income tax evasion, was suffering from "mental disturbances."

In their first formal announcement of the former Chicago gang leader's condition, department officials said:

"Al Capone at the present time is in the hospital at Alcatraz. He is suffering from intermittent mental disturbances.

"For the greater part of the time his mind is lucid. His condition is in no wise due to his confinement but grows out of conditions originating prior to his incarceration."

The Justice Department has no immediate plans, the statement added, for transferring the former beer baron to any other Federal institution.

Crop Control Bill Is Signed By Roosevelt

One More Battle Won for Lasting Farm Policy, He Declares.

Says Events Proved He Took Right Course in 1933 Decision.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt signed the farm surplus control bill yesterday.

The legislation, which was three months in the making, establishes a system under which the Secretary of Agriculture, in co-operation with farmers, may prescribe limitation upon the quantity of wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco and rice that may be marketed free of penalty when price-depressing surpluses accumulate.

In a formal statement issued at the time of signing, Mr. Roosevelt declared the measure represented the "winning of one more battle for an underlying farm policy that will endure."

Significance Stressed.

Secretary Wallace, in a statement issued after signing of the measure, described it as "one of the most significant pieces of farm legislation ever enacted."

A few minutes after word reached the Capitol that President Roosevelt had signed the new farm bill, Representative Barton (Republican), New York, introduced a bill to repeal it.

"This," said Barton, "is probably the quickest repeal move in the history of American legislation."

The New Yorker, elected on a repeal-a-law-a-day platform, said:

"Few people realize how bad this law really is. To the cotton farmer it means slow death. . . . The New York State dairy farmer is going to find that this law puts competitors into business against him by subsidies from the public till."

President's Statement.

The President's statement follows:

"Today, as I sign the agricultural adjustment act of 1938, my mind goes back five years to the day in March, 1933, when I recommended to the Congress the passage of the original adjustment act to rescue farmers from the intolerable plight of the depression. At that time I recognized frankly we were taking 'a new and untrod path.' But events have shown that in rejecting inaction that time and in determining to face the problem and meet it directly with a farm program which could be improved as circumstances required, we chose wisely. Great progress has been made since the agricultural adjustment act of 1933 went into effect.

"Gradually, through these years, the basic principles of national farm policy have become clear. By experience we have learned what must be done to assure to agriculture a fair share of an increasing national income, to provide consumers with abundant supplies of food and fiber, to stop waste of soil and to reduce the gap between huge surpluses and disastrous shortages.

"The Nation is now agreed that we must have greater reserves of food and feed to use in years of damaging weather and to help iron out extreme ups and downs of price. We are agreed that the real and

Traffic Law Not for Congressmen

At Least, That's the Word Among Capital Police as Legislators Instill Fear for Jobs.

The word has gone out to Washington police not to try to arrest members of Congress for any traffic violation.

Certain members of Congress are after the jobs of certain Washington police officials—high and low—and the police, trying hard to bring order out of chaos in the District's tangled traffic situation, are facing a dilemma that has the department's morale at low ebb.

Law means nothing when lawmakers park.

A Post reporter was eyewitness to two incidents yesterday, and was told about a third, in which the taxpayer of Washington would be heavily fined, even sent to jail, but in which the lawmakers, deliberately breaking Washington traffic laws, defied police to do their sworn duty.

Last night a car drove up on the south side of G street near the Keith Theater exit and deliberately stopped in a "No Parking" space. A policeman standing nearby walked up to the driver, who was accompanied by five friends.

"You can't park there," the policeman said, politely.

"I am a member of Congress," the driver said, over his shoulder.

It's Quite a Joke to Some.

The policeman walked around to the back of the car, as there were no license plates on the front, and noted the Mississippi license and Congressional tag.

"Rather taking advantage, aren't you, sir?" he said to the Congressman.

"Listen, brother, I don't want to be contrary, but you just watch me park there," was the rejoinder of the honorable lawmaker, while the rest of the party with him snickered. They all laughed light heartedly as they strolled into the theater.

Earlier in the day, a car was stopped at Fourteenth and E streets, bearing 1937 District tags. A policeman stepped up to the driver.

"When are you going to get 1938 tags?" he asked the driver.

"I am a Congressman and I will get my tags when and where I damn please," was the answer.

Apologies Accepted.

Another policeman went to his precinct headquarters to appear against a driver he had booked for making a left-hand turn at a corner where it was forbidden and for driving without a permit. As he entered the room, his superior said to him, "the Congressman will accept your apology." He looked across the room and there sat the man he had given a ticket, smiling complacently and puffing on a big cigar.

It has been common talk among policemen for days that any one arresting or "annoying" a Congressman for traffic violations would be "sent to the sticks."

So it is a great day for Cicero Fulpan, the hillybilly lawmaker, who wouldn't dare to park overtime in a Mississippi crossroads town, but who can, and does, break Washington laws with impunity.

And the police will have to content themselves with arresting taxpayers for traveling more than 22 miles an hour in Rock Creek Park.

Langdon Back In Irons to Face Limerick Trial

Former D. C. Policeman Is Held Incommunicado on Trip From New Haven.

Manacled to detectives, flanked by a guard of uniformed policemen and United States deputy marshals, Robert Langdon, one-time member of the Metropolitan Police Department, arrived here from New Haven, Conn., last night to answer charges of murdering Beulah Limerick, Washington's "whoopie girl" of 1930.

Held incommunicado in a Pullman drawing room of a Pennsylvania train during the trip from New Haven, Langdon was dragged from Union Station by Lieut. Floyd Truscott and Detective Sergt. Earl Hartman as reporters sought details of the case.

Jury Declares Wright Insane When He Slew

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, Feb. 16.—Paul A. Wright, 38-year-old aviation official, was given his conditional freedom late today when the same superior court jury which had convicted him of manslaughter decided he was temporarily insane at the time he shot down his wife and best friend in his home last November 9.

After the verdict had been read, Judge Ingall Bull addressed the little group, huddled over the counsel table:

"This man appears to be sane at the present time, but as prescribed by law, I am ordering him into the custody of the sheriff, until his present sanity is determined."

The jury deliberated approximately 16 hours. Under the verdict Wright was remanded to the sheriff for a hearing before the county lunacy commission to establish his present sanity.

Since no issue was made as to his present mental state, the hearing will be nothing more than a formality, and Wright will then be given his freedom.

1,300 Marines Quit China for Manila

Shanghai (Thursday), Feb. 17 (U.P.).—Thirteen hundred Marines of the United States Sixth Infantry, accompanied by Brig. Gen. J. C. Beaumont, sailed today for Manila.

Rear Admiral Harry A. Yarnell, the United States commander, Brig. A. P. D. Telfer-Smollett, the British commander, and the French and Italian commanders bade them farewell. Japanese authorities arrived too late to see them off.

Tired Londoner Snores As Queen Visits Home

London, Feb. 16 (A.P.).—Watchman Joe Thomas, who works nights, today snored peacefully through a surprise visit Queen Elizabeth paid to his two-room flat. The Queen, visiting London areas in which slum clearance is in progress, knocked at many doors and chatted and laughed with the housewives.

Oxon Hill, Md., Youth Caught Fleeing Franco

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Gibraltar, Spain, Feb. 16.—A dramatic and desperate attempt to escape from a military hospital in La Linea by swimming the Straits of Gibraltar tonight brought Guy Wilkinson Stuart Castle, 22-year-old Oxon Hill, Md., youth to the probability of a court-martial on a charge of deserting the forces of Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

Castle, only American in the Fascist leader's insurgent foreign legion, has been in the hospital for weeks, his legs riddled by machine gun bullets which tore into him in the Jarama Valley. Last Friday he stole from his hospital bed and plunged into the sea, in an attempt to swim the British-controlled Gibraltar to join his mother, Mrs. Harriet Bayne Castle, who had come here to plead with Gen. Franco for her son's release.

Castle battled the cold water despite his wounds, but pulled himself to the bank in the darkness only a few yards from the British line in Algeciras.

Barking watch dogs led alert rebel sentries to him.

4 on Floe Tell Rescue Fliers They Will Stay

By the United Press.

Moscow, Feb. 16.—Four Russian scientists marooned on an ice floe off the Greenland coast late today greeted an airplane, which arrived to rescue them, with an announcement that they are prepared to remain on the ice to complete their observations.

Dr. Ivan Papanin, leader of the four men who have ridden through Arctic storms for eight months and 18 days, said they were fully able to remain another three months if necessary.

As result, plans for actual removal of the men were delayed and the rescue plane flew back to the Soviet ice-breaker Murman to report and ask the advice, by radio, of the Great Northern Sea Route administration in Moscow.

Later the plane shuttled back over the 12-mile stretch of thick ice separating the Murman from the scientists and settled down alongside Dr. Papanin's camp until morning.

Alcatraz—An Inmate's Story

If any statement has appeared in these articles, of which the following is the last, that is untrue or colored, The Post will be pleased to publish the Government's answer.—Editor's note.]

By William Malcolm Ritchey, former Alcatraz prisoner, as told to Howard F. Wentworth.
Copyright, 1938, by The Washington Post.

The only outside news you get in Alcatraz is bad news. You get that whether you want it or not. It's just part of the system.

In other institutions, inmates are permitted to receive mail containing news of friends, family and the outside world. In Alcatraz, the censorship of mail doesn't even permit you to receive the original letters.

You get mail, all right, but you get only what the warden wants you to get. All letters are recopied—by typewriter—on plain sheets of paper. If the letter happens to be two pages long, you are lucky to get two paragraphs.

And that is usually bad news. I mean, if one of your folk dies, you get the message. But if your sister has a baby or your brother makes a lot of money or something, you never hear of it. You never see the handwriting—not even the envelopes. The handwriting of a member of your family or a friend means a lot, it reminds you of better times. They don't want that reminder in Alcatraz.

All original letters are supposed to be saved and given to the prisoners when they are released. But they usually just "forget" to give them to you.

Censored magazines are allowed, but no newspapers and few books. Once, about a year ago, a newspaper got inside the prison walls.

Paris, London To Urge That Austria Stay Independent

Firm Note to Hitler Will Insist He Reassure Democracies.

German 'Invasion' Eastward Feared

Fuehrer's Vienna Coup Stirs Europe; Prague Rushes Forts.

The Austrian Crisis.

Fearing that Hitler's thrust for power in Austria heralds German aggression toward the east, Great Britain and France last night agreed to make representations jointly in Berlin and Vienna, asking assurances that Hitler intends to preserve Austrian independence.

The German dictator is personally pressing his peaceful penetration, it appeared in Berlin, where it was indicated both Hitler and Field Marshal Goering will go to Vienna to confer with the Nazi key leaders.—Page 4.

Meanwhile, Hitler's man in the Austrian cabinet, Dr. von Seyss-Inquart, hurried to Berlin to consult his chief when Chancellor Schuschnigg provoked a new crisis by resisting Hitler's demand for Nazi control over the Austrian army.—Page 4.

The developments in Austria constitute a surrender of sovereignty, according to an editorial analyzing the situation (Page 8.) Barnet Nover (on Page 9) suggests that the truncated little country actually may be on the way out as an independent power.

Firm Note Mapped.

By the United Press.

London, Feb. 16.—Great Britain and France, fearful that Nazi penetration in Austria may be the groundwork of a German invasion eastward, agreed tonight to lodge joint representations in Berlin and Vienna asking assurance that Fuehrer Adolf Hitler intends to preserve Austrian independence.

The parallel action, supposedly on French initiative, came after Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden flatly stated in the House of Commons he had "reason to believe" Hitler's ambitions in Austria included more than the mere injection of Nazis into key cabinet posts.

Wide Alarm Stirred.

French diplomats at Paris asserted Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy violated his sworn promise to uphold Austrian independence by giving Germany a free hand in Austria. They conceded, however, that France is powerless to take and direct action. Although Nazi penetration in Austria threatens France's ally to the east, Czechoslovakia, France was wary of any strong action which might involve her in a single-handed war.

Not since Hitler's march into the Rhineland on March 7, 1936, in defiance of the Versailles Treaty, has a Nazi "fait accompli" stirred such alarm and bewilderment.

Private advices received in London tonight, coincident with Vienna dispatches that fresh demands by Hitler had upset the Austrian negotiations, said Der Fuehrer was insisting upon:

Closer Austro-German military co-operation.

British Cabinet Meets.

The British cabinet met twice to digest the latest reports of the situation, first at No. 10 Downing street and at 5 p. m. in Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's chamber in the House of Commons where Eden emphasized the alarming potentialities of the German coup.

Eden announced he believed the "reconciliation" reached by Hitler and Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria last Saturday at Berchtesgaden included "understandings."

Senate Rejects 2d Attempt to End Filibuster

Refusal to Vote Cloture Is Virtual Death Warrant for Bill at Session.

For the second time in three weeks the Senate yesterday refused to shut off the Southern filibuster against the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill.

Refusal to vote cloture virtually sealed a death warrant for the bill, so far as this session is concerned. An effort will be made to lay the controversial measure aside permanently either tomorrow or early next week.

The sidetracking motion will be offered after the Administration's $250,000,000 emergency relief appropriation is reported to the Senate. The relief measure will be considered and possibly completed by the Senate Appropriations Committee today. When it is called up in the Senate it automatically would displace anti-lynching.

The vote against cloture, following an hour's bitter debate, was 46 against and 42 for. A two-thirds vote is needed to shut off debate, and the cloture motion polled less than a majority. But anti-lynching bill sponsors registered gains over the last cloture vote on January 27, when the vote was 37 for and 51 against.

"Every Senator has expressed his horror of lynching," Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, told colleagues before the vote. "I plead with you to vote for cloture, so that the debate may be brought to a prompt conclusion. In the present circumstances, a vote against cloture is bound to be regarded as a vote against the bill."

Thirty-eight Democrats, three Republicans (Capper, Davis and Townsend) and one Progressive (La Follette) voted "aye" on the cloture motion. Thirty-four Democrats, ten Republicans, one Farmer-Laborite (Shipstead) and one Independent (Norris) voted "no."

Switching from "no" to "aye" since the last vote were Senators Ashurst, of Arizona; Gillette, of Iowa, and Lewis, of Illinois (Democrats), and Townsend (Republican), of Delaware.

Intimidation Charged.

Of the Senators not recorded in the January 27 vote, Green, of Rhode Island, and Hughes, of Delaware (Democrats) and Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, voted for the motion yesterday, while Senators Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, and Shipstead voted "no."

In the brisk debate preceding the vote, Southern speakers denied they were filibustering and charged anti-lynching bill sponsors with attempts at "intimidation." Senate Majority Leader Barkley hurled back the charge of "filibuster" and called on the Senate to break it and bring the bill to a vote.

There was a lively exchange between Barkley and Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary, a supporter of the bill but an opponent of cloture. McNary remarked that the bill might have been easily passed if the White House had given it encouragement.

Cry "Cheap Politics."

"The Senator from Oregon is trying to play a little cheap politics," hotley retorted Barkley. "If he thought the White House had a hand in it he'd be the first to raise the cry of White House dictation."

McNary had been ribbing Barkley for "blaming" Republicans for failure of cloture, when Republicans control only 15 votes in the chamber and Democrats have a 77 majority.

Barkley said he was not "blaming" the Republicans, because "for the last five years you haven't had enough members on your side of the chamber to act as pallbearers at your own funeral."

Sarcastic Rejoinder.

To McNary's contention that cloture would give the Democrats power to trample minority rights, Barkley said Senate Republicans had not been "trampled" but "we had to put some Democrats over on your side to make you look respectable."

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, called the anti-lynching measure a "hooded bill, masking its long bony, skinny implications." He read editorials to support his contention that Southern Democrats have confined their debate to the merits of the bill.

He said Senators refused to be "intimidated" by Wagner's assertion that a vote against cloture was a vote against the bill. "If any Senator is frightened," he said, "he hasn't the moral fortitude the Senator from Texas thinks he has."

Ellender Takes Floor.

Senator Allen J. Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, who has been speaking against the bill all week, resumed the floor following the debate, discussing statistics of Southern progress in educating colored persons. Wagner told reporters he will not consent to dropping consideration of the bill.

"It is a curious argument indeed that this filibuster is justified on the ground that unlimited debate is essential to democracy," the New Yorker told the Senate. "If the demonstration of unlimited debate which we have experienced here is any illustration, then democracy is indeed imperiled. The cause of democracy is subverted, not advanced, by this demonstration of its utter inability to function."

Freight Rate Boost Held Pump Primer

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Feb. 16.—American railroads, if granted their request for a 15 per cent freight rate increase, could spend $500,000,000 above present budgets for new equipment and rehabilitation, Carl R. Gray, jr., executive vice president of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway, said today.

Such large scale expenditures would be "pump-priming" for industry and business in general, he claimed.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

Administration moves so far this week indicate a new plan of strategy in connection with the industrial recession. The President and his aides, after several false starts in recent weeks, apparently are seeking to coax back prosperity through psychological gestures. They are apparently trying to create an atmosphere of inflation without, however, doing anything inflationary.

WALTMAN.

Thus Mr. Roosevelt spoke at his press conference of the need for higher prices. Talk of higher prices creates a buying pyschology, just as talk that prices are too high, such as we had three weeks ago from the White House, creates sales resistance, since most people prefer to buy when prices are lowest.

Thus Monday Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau announced abandonment of the gold sterilization policy unless the inflow of gold metal is in excess of $100,000,000 quarterly—which it is not likely to be, for some time at least. This was a move toward expanding the credit base and certainly could not be regarded as deflationary. Whether it is inflationary depends on a number of other factors.

Neither of these moves appears in itself to be harmful from orthodox standards. Little can be said in criticism of them, except this, that gestures toward inflationary trends and talk about them create a popular expectation which may grow in volume until the Administration actually is forced to take steps which really mean something.

Once the President reiterates his desire for the restoration of the 1926 price level, as he did Tuesday, he opens the way for Senator Elmer Thomas and other Capitol Hill inflationists to demand that powers of the Federal Reserve authorities be used in an effort to bring about that objective. The Senate inflation bloc does not need much encouragement to commence whipping up public sentiment for their schemes—and then the fat will again be in the fire.

Be that as it may, a few psychological pills when everyone is in the doldrums may be beneficial. What this writer does not understand, however, is why, if the Administration wishes to resort to psychology, it does not make more of the opportunity afforded it by the pending tax bill. Enactment of that measure would have a favorable psychological effect as well as real relief in places where it is needed.

In modifying the gold sterlization policy, Administration spokesmen pointed out that it would contribute to an expansion of the credit base and assure continuation of easy money conditions. They have contended that one of the underlying reasons for the present recession is the failure of private credit to flow into industry.

Why? Is it because there is a scarcity of available credit, or a money stringency? The facts are just the reverse. The banks, figuratively speaking, are bulging with idle money. Interest rates are the lowest in many years. The trouble is not that more credit is needed, but that there is no will to use credit now available. Private capital is unwilling, in some instances unable, to function as it should because the New Deal has imposed on it a variety of chilling restrictions. Indeed, private capital has come close to being placed in a straight jacket.

The existing taxes on capital gains and undistributed profits are among the measures which have chilled private capital. There have been others. But modification of these taxes, as proposed by the President, as proposed by the Treasury and as proposed by a Ways and Means sub-committee, would at least afford some relief to capital, give it a little more elbow room and encourage it to function more freely.

Some New Dealers deny that the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes have had the detrimental effect on industrial activity which business and financial spokesmen have attributed to them. For the sake of discussion that point may be conceded without lessening the importance which revision of these taxes would have.

The important thing is that the business world believes these taxes are harmful. The big businessmen think so, the little businessmen think so. Not only do they think so but they feel deeply about it. It is the foremost complaint they have uttered against the New Deal for the last six months. It is the one specific criticism of the New Deal on which all its critics agree.

Thus enactment of the pending tax bill would have a far-reaching psychological effect. It would cause business to feel that it had won a victory against the Government strait-jacket and that it had been to some extent unshackled, whether actually so or not. It would be the first concrete indication that the Treasury no longer is wedded to the idea of using tax bills to effectuate social and economic reforms, but has become interested in tax bills as raisers of revenue. As a psychological palliative it surely has more potency than what the Administration has been doing this week.

Yet nothing has come from the White House in recent weeks to indicate any impatience with the slow, leisurely manner in which the tax bill is moving. Nor have the Congressional leaders indicated any impatience. For three months now, as Robert C. Albright pointed out in The Post yesterday, this bill has been under consideration and it remains in the hands of the Ways and Means Committee Democrats.

This writer is not partial to hasty consideration of legislation, especially tax bills. Nor does he believe that Congress should pass without the closest scrutiny and consideration proposals coming from the executive branch of Government. Such is the way a democracy functions, but democracy is perverted when, in a time of crisis, the legislative branch takes its own good, sweet time in regard to essential measures on which there is general agreement.

The pending bill is not an ordinary tax measure. It is in effect an emergency piece of legislation, designed to relieve serious defects in the tax law and to restore confidence of business in its ability to function at a reasonable profit. Congress should realize what is happening out in the country and, at least, do its part to help the situation.

Beer Truckers Strike Ended After Six Days

Settlement of the six-day strike of beer and soft drink truck drivers with each side "giving in a little," was announced early last night following a conference of representatives of the union and eight distributing companies affected by the walkout.

Terms of the agreement, as announced by the union, provided for a minimum 60-hour week and a weekly wage of $18, with 6 cents commission for each case of bottles sold. The wage terms were a complete victory for the union, while hour specifications were six more than the workers had demanded.

The strike, called Friday by the Beer and Soda Drivers, Chauffeurs and Helpers Local, No. 67, affected more than 100 drivers and was marked by outbreaks of violence when striking drivers or sympathizers halted trucks and attacked nonstriking drivers.

Yesterday Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown agreed to supply police escorts for each of the distributors' trucks when company spokesmen protested that their drivers and property were endangered by the acts of violence.

Distributors agreed to cut down the number of operating trucks to 39 to enable Brown to supply officers to guard each truck. Companies also agreed to furnish cars and chauffeurs for the police escort.

Union representatives attending the conference yesterday at the Hamilton Hotel were Henry Myer, agent for Local No. 67; Robert Lester, business agent for the Bakers Union; Robert Elliott, vice president of the union; James Holden, union representative; Frank Litzler, president of the union and John Kean, attorney.

Representatives of distributors were Wash B. Williams, A. D. O'Connor, H. Reiner, Edward Zupnick, H. E. Dyer, John Pappadeas and E. Crawford.

Strike Threat 'Truce' Is Won By Chautemps

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Feb. 16.—Premier Camille Chautemps' government tonight sought means of preventing another great strike wave as it won an eight-day "truce" from 70,000 northern metal workers.

Eight unions in Valenciennes demanded an immediate strike in a drive for wage increases, but bowed to the decision of 25 other unions in the north to allow Minister of State Louis Oscar Frossard to try again for a compromise.

Frossard and Minister of Labor Paul Ramadier put ministry of labor experts to work to solve the difficulty convinced that if they could prevent a strike in the north the position of the General Confederation of Labor against the government might be changed.

The national committee of the confederation published a resolution demanding resumption of social reforms instituted by former Premier Leon Blum's People's Front government.

The organization called for control of banks and foreign exchange, nationalization of insurance and transport companies, old-age pensions, a national unemployment fund and a labor code with a sliding wage scale.

Before today's "truce," 30,000 northern steel workers had given the government until tomorrow to try to persuade employers to grant wage increases.

The workers demanded boosts amounting to 11.5 per cent. Their present base wage is 5½ francs (18 cents) an hour.

Senator Will Seek to Have Provision Incorporated in Supply Bill.

The parking meter yesterday again raised its head in Senate hearings on the District supply bill, and Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, said he probably will try again to have a provision authorizing a trial installation incorporated in the bill.

For the last two years similar proposals have been blocked in both the House and the Senate, either on points of order or by majority vote.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer recommended that the meters be given a trial and also asked for assignment of more police to traffic duty.

Asks Added Officers.

Mrs. Ernest Howard, of the Federation of Women's Clubs, asked for 75 additional policemen.

Senator Thomas received from Auditor Daniel J. Donovan a report showing that $13,000,000 was spent for all forms of relief in the District by private and public agencies in the current fiscal year.

Details of the report, which will be used when social welfare groups are heard early next week, were not made public, but it was said that the tabulation included all forms of aid to destitute. These include unemployment relief, WPA expenditures, social security benefits, and Community Chest collections.

Charge for Movies.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, and Henry L. Quinn, of the Board off Education, explained how motion pictures are shown in a half dozen schools during recess and lunch periods and for which pupils are charged from 5 to 15 cents.

While not approving the activity, Senator Thomas said he would take no steps to stop it.

The subcommittee recessed until tomorrow. Indications are that hearings will be closed about next Tuesday.

Garner's Gavel Passes Bill to Pay RFC's Debt

By the Associated Press.

Vice President Garner's famed gavel sent to the White House yesterday legislation to relieve the Reconstruction Finance Corporation of a $2,653,840,000 "bookkeeping" obligation to the Treasury.

The amount represented advances which the Treasury made to the RFC for expenditure on relief and the activities of various Federal agencies.

The bill was called up by Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia. Glass started to say, "Mr. president—," but Garner interrupted him.

"Is there objection?" he asked. "The chair hears none."

"Bang!" went the gavel, and the bill was passed. Glass smiled and resumed his seat.

Capper Charges 'Court Packing' at Proposal to Create 27 New Federal Judgeships.

The cry of "court packing" was revived yesterday before the special Senate committee appointed to study judicial reform proposals by Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas. The committee was considering a plan to create 27 new Federal judgeships, one of them an additional district judge for Kansas.

Senator Capper declared angrily the Kansas proposal was no less a "packing" scheme than the bill to enlarge the Supreme Court. Senators Pepper and Andrews, both Democrats and of Florida, said, however, they would welcome a new district judge for Florida and an added judge for the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals there.

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, also said additional judges were needed in both the western and eastern districts of his State.

After a brief statement by Senator McAdoo (Democrat), of California, the Senate voted yesterday to extend the lending authority of the Disaster Loan Corporation through 1938 to aid in the rehabilitation of flood and storm-damaged California communities. McAdoo, author of the extension proposal, said no new appropriation of Federal funds would be required. The bill now goes to the House.

A pending bill to limit freight trains to 70 cars was called "a most undesirable measure" by spokesmen for the United States Chamber of Commerce at a hearing before the House Interstate Commerce Committee. The same sentiment also was expressed in a letter sent to the committee by George H. Davis, president of the Chamber of Commerce. Representatives of chambers of commerce from a dozen cities also condemned the bill.

Members of the Foreign Affairs committees of Congress, together with President Roosevelt, were petitioned yesterday by a committee of 60 American educators, editors, labor leaders and churchmen, to amend the neutrality act so as to render it inapplicable to Spain.

The letter, also signed by Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of State, and William E. Dodd, former Ambassador to Germany, said the result of applying the neutrality act to Spain has been to aid the insurgents.

A $2,000,000 appropriation for control of grasshoppers and other insect pests was passed by the House yesterday and sent to the Senate.

Ruhland Heads Milk Committee

Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday was appointed chairman of a special committee to consider a set of proposed amendments to the District milk regulations by Commissioner George E. Allen.

The committee will include one representative each from ice cream mix manufacturers, counter freezer manufacturers, western milk and cream manufacturers, local milk and cream manufacturers and Consumers Council.

A member of the Corporation Counsel's office will be present at each meeting of the committee.

"Thomas Re-grew My Hair"

Says Mr. Donald McClelland

• • These photographs show three views of Mr. McClelland before he started Thomas treatment, and three views taken 5¼ months later. Note that all of the bald spots have been completely filled in with new, vigorous, growing hair. Mr. McClelland's baldness was of the type known as "alopecia areata".

All of the 14 local causes of baldness (responsible for almost 90% of all baldness) respond to the Thomas method of treatment. Dandruff disappears; abnormal hair-fall stops; and hair growth is promoted on the thin and bald spots. Guess work is banished when you place your scalp problem in the hands of a Thomas expert. He first determines the exact cause of your hair loss, and then adapts the reliable, proved Thomas treatment to overcome that cause. Your scalp is soon restored to a normal healthy condition, conducive to the natural growth of hair.

More than 1600 other persons are benefiting each day from Thomas treatment. You, too, can have a good head of hair. No charge is ever made for consultation or a complete scalp examination (always in private). Call today and learn the truth about your hair and scalp.

Buying Rivals 'No Surrender,' Says TVA Head

Morgan Denies Public Will Lose Under His Policy of Utility Purchase.

By Sidney Olson.

Chairman Arthur E. Morgan of the Tennessee Valley Authority, in a letter dated February 9 and addressed to 13 Senators and 22 Representatives, vigorously denied that his policy for public acquisition of power systems "is a surrender of the public interest and is unduly favorable to the utilities."

The letter, which came to light yesterday, approves almost wholly power-acquisition principles laid down by J. D. Ross, Bonneville power project administrator and former member of the Securities and Exchange Commission, in a letter to a Knoxville citizen, John B. Neal, of January 29.

Chairman Morgan stated:

"In its fundamental spirit Mr. Ross' proposals are strikingly at variance with the policy now in operation in the TVA."

Policies Identical.

He declared that this "sound policy," advanced by Ross, whom "no one can accuse of being subservient to the utilities," is "substantially identical" with his own policy, "a policy which was then and is now opposed by the TVA director who, invariably supported by the third member of the board, dictated the power policy."

This reference was Morgan's only slap at David E. Lilienthal and Dr. Harcourt Morgan, the other board members, with whom he has been feuding for many months.

Ross' solution, of wide interest because of his success as head of the Seattle municipal power project, is based on an original buying offer from the public agency, with the price based on the property's value as a going concern, not merely its physical valuation.

How to Analyze Value.

Ross said: "The principal question is the value that can be given to buy out a competitor. This considers a study of the gross income, the net income, the cost per kilowatt and kilowatt-hour for generation, transmission and distribution, the original value and depreciation that should be applied to it, and the present physical value."

Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, the father of the TVA, and who received a copy of the Morgan-Ross letters from Chairman Morgan, said yesterday:

"The letters do not tend or help to settle the controversy."

Not Ready to Sell.

"They set forth a basis for public purchase of power systems. But you cannot buy unless the other fellows are ready or willing to sell. The private power companies in that area, despite the so-called offers of Wendell Willkie, president of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, are not ready to sell.

"Ross assumes that negotiations will be successful wherever one side wants to buy and one side wants to sell. The private companies, it is evident, want to sell the public wind and water at a fabulous price.

"The Ross formula is fair and just, where both sides seek justice. But it must be remembered that Wendell Willkie, more than any other man, killed the provision in the amended TVA act that would have allowed the TVA to buy entire systems. It is his own fault that he is in this position today.

Cites Vote of Cities.

"All of the cities in that (TVA) area, by overwhelming votes of as much as 17 to 1, have registered their desire for publicly-owned power. They are eager to buy out the utilities at fair prices, despite the vicious legal record of delay and obstruction the utilities have made.

"This impasse will be solved when the utilities consent to let Congress pass legislation enabling the TVA to operate as it should.

"Until the utilities change heart, I say let 'em sweat."

Ross' policy aims at the elimination of rancor and prejudice, the avoidance of general lien bonds that mortgage property and at the transfer of risk to bankers, as follows:

"We soon found that two competitors at swords points cannot negotiate a purchase properly and set aside prejudice and pride. We also found that though the purchase would be an exchange of bonds, considerable cash was required for interconnecting the property after the purchase. To overcome these difficulties we turned to a strong financial syndicate to go to the principals back of the local company and negotiate discount with them for a purchase, agreeing also to furnish the cash needed for legal work and to rehabilitate and interconnect the two systems after the purchase.

Steered Clear of Bonds.

"Public power is eminently able to pay its own way, so we steered clear of any system of general lien bonds that would put any mortgage on anyone's property. Payments would be made in utility revenue bonds only. The bondholders then look only to the revenues from the sale of light and power for their interest and redemption payments.

"The use of revenue bonds in turn, now transfers the risk from the property owner to the banker. This is a tremendous advantage in that since the bankers take the risk they will refuse to pay a price for the company's property that will not be reasonably certain to pay out as interest and principal becomes due."

Lilienthal, meanwhile, in a speech made yesterday afternoon in Milwaukee, Wis., before the Women's Court and Civic Conference, insisted that electricity is the people's business and that, with notable exceptions, it is not being conducted as the people's business.

Job Seems Clear.

He said that "the job that lies ahead seems clear.

"It is not solely a question of fair rates or proper accounting or preventing stock swindles or abolishing holding company fees. These are all important changes. But they are only a part of an entire program, the purpose of which is nothing less than to restore public control of this essential of life.

"Electricity must become an instrument of democracy."

Court Change Foes to Fight For Van Nuys

By the Associated Press.

A group of Democratic Senators, all bitter opponents of last year's court reorganization bill, stood ready last night to help Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, in an independent battle for re-election.

Cast out by the State Democratic administration after he opposed the court measure, Van Nuys announced earlier in the day that he would run nevertheless, and called upon his supporters in Indiana to form a "committee of 100,000" to advance his candidacy.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, a leader of the struggle against the court bill, made known he was ready to campaign for Van Nuys. Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, declared at least 20 Senators were anxious to help the Indiana man.

On the other hand, Senator Minton, of Indiana, an ally of the State organization headed by Paul V. McNutt and Gov. Clifford Townsend, asserted Van Nuys' action would be construed as "reading himself out of the party."

McNutt Reaches United States.

Townsend said Van Nuys' announcement "represents his general attitude of rugged individualism" and that the "Senator would be happier today if he had been more zealous in trying to follow the majority of the people whom he was elected to represent."

Paul V. McNutt, United States High Commissioner to the Philippines, arrived at Alameda, Calif., yesterday aboard the Hawaii Clipper en route to Washington, where he will discuss the Philippine situation with President Roosevelt.

The Washington political community was interested in the situation, not only as an Indiana outgrowth of the split in the Democratic Party, caused by the court bill, but also because of its national complications.

Sends Letters to Voters.

McNutt is generally regarded as a candidate for the Presidency. If he attempts to punish Van Nuys for opposing the court bill, he will "leave himself wide open" for reprisals by foes of that measure the country over, friends of Van Nuys declared.

Van Nuys' announcement was in the form of a letter sent to thousands of Indiana voters, which stated:

"Certain persons in politics in Indiana have issued decrees calling for my elimination as a candidate for Senator.

"I received my office from the people, and I will retire only if the people deny me the privilege of re-election. No official, no clique, no politician or set of politicians, can dictate my retirement from Indiana public life without first submitting it to the people themselves."

$6,036,370 WPA Funds Used on Navy Air Force

By the United Press.

Goverment statisticians reported yesterday that aircraft costing $6,036,370 were added to Navy and Coast Guard equipment through PWA allotments between 1933 and 1937.

This, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said, was part of approximately $100,000,000 worth of land, water and air transportation equipment now in use as a result of the four-year public works program.

Bulkley to Seek 'Superhighways' Vote This Session

Encouraged by favorable White House comment, Senator Robert J. Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio, said last night he will seek enactment this session of his bill for construction of self-liquidating cross-country Federal super-highways.

Hearings on his bill before the Senate Bank and Currency Committee were set for February 23. Chairman Henry B. Steagall, of the House Banking Committee, has introduced a similar bill in the House, on which hearings will be held.

Asked if the highway legislation is on the Administration's legislative agenda for this session, House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn said it is not on the program discussed up to this time at leadership conferences. The President Tuesday expressed sympathy with super-highway proposal, costing an ultimate $8,000,000,000, and said he is having the plan studied.

McAdoo's Ex-Partner Asks Million for Libel

Los Angeles, Feb. 16 (U.P.).—William H. Neblett, former law partner of United States Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, today filed a $1,000,000 libel suit against John B. Elliott, Democratic leader; Pierson Hall, former United States attorney, and several others, charging he had been the victim of campaign slander and villification.

The action was based on a statement last Tuesday in which Neblett allegedly was connected with an asserted plan to influence granting of a number of Federal Government contracts.

Files Suit for Divorce

Charging cruelty, Mrs. Harriett Stearn Strauss, 2029 Connecticut avenue northwest, yesterday in District Court filed suit for a limited divorce from Julius G. Strauss, who, she said made some $30,000 a year as an attorney representing "vast sugar interests."

The couple has two children and the wife asked for their custody and for alimony.

Curley Assessed $37,575 on Claim By City of Boston

Boston, Feb. 16 (U.P.).—Superior Judge Frederick W. Fosdick today ordered former Gov. James M. Curley and Joseph Santosuosso to pay the City of Boston $62,625, including $50,000 allegedly retained by them in improper settlement of a damage suit against the city.

The city charged that Curley, while mayor, received $50,000 of $85,000 paid in 1933 to settle a property damage claim of the General Equipment Corporation resulting from a subway extension project. It charged that Santosuosso, twice Democratic candidate for secretary of state, received legal fees of $20,000. Curley was assessed $37,575 and Santosuosso $25,050.

Hebrew Leader to Talk.

Dr. Bernard Berger, associated with the Palestine labor movement Histadruth, will speak on "The Jewish Maritime" at regular weekly service at B'nai Israel Synagogue at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow.

Austrian Crisis Near as Hitler Extends 'Coup'

Schuschnigg Upsets Plan of Nazi Chief to Control Army.

Vienna (Thursday), Feb. 17.—Relations between Germany and Austria headed toward a fresh crisis early today as Fuehrer Adolf Hitler apparently sought to extend his Austrian cabinet "coup" to include Nazi control of the armed forces and his key man in the Schuschnigg government hurried to Berlin.

Minister of Interior Dr. Arthur von Seyss-Inquart, placed in the cabinet 24 hours ago when Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg capitulated to Hitler's demands, left for Berlin in response to several urgent telephone calls.

The semi-official Reichspost said the Nazi minister went to Berlin to "inform the German government as a representative of the Austrian government of the execution of the agreed measures."

Seeks Hitler's Advice.

It was generally believed, however, that he sought Hitler's advice on means of coping with Schuschnigg's apparent efforts to prevent "Nazification" of the Fatherland Front. Austria's only legal political organization since 1934.

Dr. Seyss-Inquart late yesterday became chief of the Fatherland Front's section "for co-ordination of the national elements" and selected a committee of three, including Herr Jury, one of the outlawed Austrian Nazis.

This plan was upset when Schuschnigg announced that Guido Zernatto, secretary of state for the Fatherland Front, had been appointed as the organization's deputy leader under Schuschnigg.

Zernatto, foe of the Austrian Nazis, thus became virtually the supreme leader of the front because of Schuschnigg's preoccupation with other matters of state.

Schuschnigg Nomination.

Schuschnigg apparently sought to convince the Austrian population by the appointment that the Fatherland Front, and not the Nazis, still dominate the new government.

The situation was complicated by:

Stern police measures to prevent disorders as prison gates are thrown open for thousands of Nazi "martyrs" and other political prisoners under a sweeping amnesty decree signed by President Wilhelm Miklas and effective at midnight.

Hitler's reported plan to place a Nazi in the still vacant post of minister of defense, surrendered by Schuschnigg.

Speculation that an outright military alliance between Austria and Germany might be developing.

Reports that Germany was making no move to reduce military forces across the Bavarian frontier on the northwest, contradicting German official statements that there was no such troop concentrations.

It was learned that Hitler, having placed Nazis in key cabinet posts—after forcing a midnight capitulation to his ultimatum by Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, of Austria—offered the names of two pro-Nazis for the vacant post of minister of defense.

Schuschnigg surrendered the war ministry in the cabinet shake-up announced early today, and Gen. William Zehner—an ardent opponent of Nazism—was retained merely as secretary of state for defense.

The situation was made more tense by reports that Hitler showed no indications of reducing his threatening troop concentrations across the Bavarian frontier on the northwest.

[German officials in Berlin explained that accounts of troop concentrations on the Austrian border probably arose from the jittery state of mind of persons who mistook ordinary winter maneuvers of German Alpine troops for "tremendous concentrations" along the border, according to Associated Press dispatches from the German capital.]

A former Austrian general and Nazi sympathizer, Karl Bardolff, was said to have been Hitler's first recommendation for the war ministry. He also suggested Col. Emil Liebitzky, present Austrian military attache at Rome.

Signs Amnesty Decree.

President Wilhelm Miklas signed the amnesty decree at 7 p. m., effective at midnight, and it was indicated the freeing of the political prisoners would start early tomorrow.

Trouble threatened as many members of the outlawed semi-military organizations, including Prince Ernst Rudiger von Stahremberg's Heimwehr and the Freedom League, began pouring into Vienna after dark.

Dr. Seyss-Inquart, whom Schuschnigg was forced to name minister of interior and public security, left hurriedly for Berlin after receiving several urgent telephone calls from German leaders—supposedly in regard to the new "hitch" in the Austro-German negotiations.

Schuschnigg's refusal to submit to Hitler's demands on the War Ministry was revealed in an official communique stating Schuschnigg would "direct" the defens ministry, aided by Zehner. That showed the post had not yet been filled.

Schuschnigg, a veteran monarchist who appeared tonight however to have smashed the last hopes of restoration of Archduke Otto to the Hapsburg throne of Austria, was expected to resign before long under the persistent Nazi pressure.

It was understood that, in the last 24 hectic hours, he offered his resignation to President Miklas and that Miklas asked Mayor Richard Schmitz of Vienna to form a government.

When Schmitz refused the president asked Schuschnigg to remain in office.

As Hitler appeared to be maneuvering for domination of the war ministry, augmenting the quasi-Nazi cabinet, speculation increased that an outright military alliance might grow out of the Austro-German developments.

Persistent reports that the German inroads in Austria shattering the Fatherland Front ideals of the Nazi-slain Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, might lead to a military alliance seemed significant in view of announcements in Berlin that the Nazi penetration into the Austrian cabinet was "only the start" of the "pacification" of Austria.

Breaks Paris Cordon.

Diplomats said tonight that the startling results of last Saturday's meeting between Hitler and Schuschnigg across the Bavarian frontier at Berchtesgaden indicated that Hitler finally had succeeded in crashing through the "sanitary cordon" which France built around Germany during the last 20 years by a series of defense pacts.

"Der Fuehrer seems to have started out on the road to Bagdad," one observer said.

He referred to Germany's World War ambition to control a route from Berlin to Bagdad.

It was pointed out that Yugoslavia, working close to Italy at the other end of the Rome-Berlin axis, appears to be working toward close friendship with Germany while Rumania, although upset by internal political troubles, still is favorable toward strengthening the totalitarian anti-Communist front.

As result, it was explained, Czechoslovakia is being rapidly reduced to the state of a democratic island in a fascist sea.

The Austrian gate to the Balkans has been opened to Hitler's influence and beyond Austria on the east lies Hungary, already in close co-operation with Berlin while Italian-German influence predominates in Yugoslavia and reaches the Black Sea by way of Bulgaria.

Thousands of Austrian Nazis were due to leave prisons and concentration camps. Several thousand other Nazis, members of the "Austrian Legion" that fled from the country after the Dollfuss assassination, were expected to return from their exile in Germany.

The amnesty decree affects not only Nazis but Communists and Socialists, all members of political groups outlawed under the Staende-State constitution of 1933.

Nazi organization arranged celebrations to greet "the martyrs who suffered for Der Fuehrer's cause."

The first evening edition of the Vienna Tageblatt was confiscated tonight because it quoted the National Zeitung of Essen, Germany, close to Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, referring to "further measures" to be taken in Austria in accordance with Hitler's desires.

Some of these "further measures" appeared to be taking form rapidly, leading probably to close Austro-German co-operation in foreign and economic fields and crammed with potentially dramatic possibilities.

Negotiations were said to be under way between the Austrian National Bank and the German Reichsbank regarding Austrian co-operation in the German four-year plan of economic self-sufficiency.

It was forecast that an Austro-German customs union and Austria's adhesion to the anti-Communist pact of Germany, Italy and Japan would be at least discussed at an early moment.

Although the full effect of the cabinet reorganization remained to be felt the Austrian bourse opened in a friendly atmosphere and firm tone. Many stocks were above yesterday's closings.

The newly constituted government was expected to issue a decree prohibiting newspapers from criticizing either the German government or its activities.

Otto Leaves Exile.

Ministers in Austrian Nazi Cabinet

Hitler, Goering Push Plans to Nazify Austria

Leaders May Personally Arrange Extension of Influence.

By the United Press.

Berlin (Thursday), Feb. 17.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering may go to Austria and personally arrange for further extension of Nazi influence there, it was understood today.

Plans were said to be in the making for Goering, who helped the Nazis rise to power in Germany by a procedure almost identical with what has been transpiring in Vienna the last 24 hours, to meet Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, of Austria, at Innsbruck early next month.

He will report back to Hitler, who is expected to stop off in Innsbruck for consultations when he passes through Austria in May en route to Rome for a state visit to Premier Benito Mussolini, his partner in the Rome-Berlin axis.

Union Is Hinted.

Those plans were being formed as the Nazi-controlled press, including Goering's own National Zeitung of Essen, spoke of the eventuality of an actual Austro-German union—Hitler's long dreamed of Anschluss—as a result of the wedge driven by placing five Nazis in Austrian cabinet posts.

Nazi circles, while angrily denying statements abroad that Hitler used military pressure to force Schuschnigg's midnight capitulation to his demands, predicted that der Fuehrer's "forceful arguments" would lead to more political and cultural revisions drawing the Nazis of Austria and Germany closer together.

Goering's National Zeitung said:

"The German nation is looking forward to the measures to be taken during the coming days with the most eager expectations. It realizes that as far as the most comprehensive national interests are concerned, after reinforcement of these measures, an inner stability of the German peoples living within the reich and the Austrian state boundaries will come into being."

Hitler Ambition.

Many observers believed those references to Austro-German stability may indicate Hitler's ambitions to acquire an outright military alliance with Austria, perhaps gain Nazi domination of the army, or bring Austria into the Italo-German-Japanese pact against communism.

Paris and London to Demand Austria Remain Independent on a variety of subjects in addition to the change in the Austrian cabinet."

"About such understandings, however, I am unable to say more until the terms of the Berchtesgaden agreement are published," he added.

Frederick John Bellenger, laborite, drew the information from Eden by recalling to the foreign secretary that "the integrity and independence of Austria are the declared objects of British policy."

He referred to the Stresa declaration of February, 1934, signed by Britain, France and Italy.

"His Majesty's government is closely following developments," Eden said. "The Stresa declaration was made by Britain, France and Italy, and Italy has not yet consulted this government on the matter."

"What His Majesty's government desired in central Europe, as elsewhere, is peace and good understanding. That certainly is our policy."

"Gravely Preoccupied."

The joint Anglo-French representations in Berlin and Vienna will emphasize the fact that both governments are "gravely preoccupied" with events in Austria and will ask, in firm but polite terms, that immediate assurances of Austrian sovereignty be given.

As soon as it became evident that Britain and France were determined upon immediate action, Austrian Minister to London Franckenstein, on vacation in the Austrian Tyrol, received orders to hasten back to his post to keep abreast of the reaction of the two big democracies.

Sensational reports published abroad to the effect that Great Britain, through her Ambassador to Berlin, Sir Neville Henderson, had as much as Premier Mussolini to do with bringing about the Austro-German understanding were ridiculed by British official sources.

Wouldn't Interfere.

It was pointed out that Britain certainly would never lend a hand to what amounts in Austria's case to foreign interference in the internal politics of another country.

In the midst of the alarm over Hitler's intentions it was revealed in London that Czechoslovakia, allied to France and Russia but threatened with Fascist encirclement, already has started to speed up the construction of fortifications along her Austrian frontier.

The Prague government also is building several forts overlooking Germany on the north and west and will extend this "line of steel" to her Austrian and Hungarian borders on the south.

Labor Peer Tells Britain U. S. Won't 'Let Her Go Down'

London, Feb. 16 (AP).—Baron Arnold, labor peer, told the House of Lords today the United States would not let the British Empire "go down" if Britain were attacked, but warned the Empire would have to shun any war on the European continent.

In an isolationist speech, Lord Arnold urged Britain to "stand aside" in the event of a new European conflict.

He assailed the Anglo-French entente and League of Nations sanctions and urged Britain to take the initiative to placate Germany on the question of colonies.

Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, Nobel Peace Prize winner and recent visitor to the United States, said Americans were bitter because Britain abandoned sanctions against Italy in the Ethiopian crisis at a time when the United States "apparently was prepared to second them to the utmost."

Shanghai, Feb. 16 (AP).—James Edward Walsh, of Ripon, Wis., tonight filed a statement with the United States consular general charging he had been beaten and subjected to indignities by sailors of the Japanese naval force in Shanghai.

Japanese Rout Crumbling Foe At Yellow River

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Feb. 16.—Japan's powerful mechanized forces were reported today smashing desperate but crumbling Chinese resistance in the Yellow River sector.

Advancing rapidly southward along the Peiping-Hankow Railway, a Japanese army was said to be threatening to entrap several hundred thousand Chinese troops defending the Lunghai railway zone, in the heart of central China.

The Japanese were striving to reach the strategic rail junction city of Chengchow, where the Peiping-Hankow line crosses the vital east-west Lunghai railway, and cut off a possible general Chinese withdrawal westward.

Another Japanese army was striking northward toward the Lunghai from the Hwai River sector west of Pengpu.

China's reorganized air force, strengthened by enlistment of a number of volunteer American and Russian pilots, has been engaged in extensive bombing operations, aimed particularly at harassing the Japanese advance down the Peiping-Hankow line.

Chinese resistance in that sector was said to have been more effective due to General Li Tsung-jen counterattacking. He is the commander of Kwangsi provincial troops.

French Envoy to U. S. Leaves for New Post

Italy Will Curb Jews; Pledges No Persecution

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Feb. 16.—Italy informed Jews today that their activities there would be restricted in certain respects, but promised not to persecute them.

An official statement of policy placed three special limitations on Jewish independence in Italy:

Jews will not be permitted to play a more important part in the national life than their individual abilities merit.

Their activities must not be out of proportion to their numerical representation in the community. There are 50,000 to 60,000 Jews in Italy, among a total population of 42,537,561.

If newly arrived in Italy, their conduct will be observed carefully.

The statement of policy said Italy had no intention of taking political, economic or moral action against Jews in the country. But fascists, noting exceptions, said Italy would restrain Jews from attaining the commercial and financial ascendancy they have elsewhere.

King George Proposes To Visit All Dominions

London, Feb. 16 (AP).—The Daily Mail said today that King George planned to visit each of the British dominions within the next few years to "establish personal contact with his peoples." The paper said Canada probably would be the first on the king's itinerary.

Japanese Bomb Missionary Boats, U. S. Woman Hurt

Kaifeng, China, Feb. 16 (AP).—Several American women missionaries of the Independent Gospel Boat Mission were endangered today and one was injured when Japanese airplanes bombed the mission's boats.

Trio Indicted In Still Raid on Madison Street

Charged on 4 Counts; 2 Young Bank Clerks Accused.

Three men charged with the operation of one of the largest stills ever seized here were indicted by the grand jury yesterday after that body had investigated a raid on a house at 1671 Madison street northwest.

The raid disclosed, police said, that the place had been made into a veritable distillery. The defendants were Ralph Marcontini, Marzareno Magnaterra and John Della Gatta, all of whom are alleged to have moved here from Baltimore to establish their business in one of the city's select districts. The trio was charged with conducting an unlicensed liquor business, with illegal manufacture, with possession of an unregistered still, and with possession of untaxed liquor. The raid was staged January 4.

Two young bank employes were indicted on charges of embezzling almost $30,000 from two local banks. They were Edwin J. Noyes, formerly a clerk in the Union Trust Co., and Richard Lee Copeland, of the Second National Bank.

Others indicted were:

William L. Geiman, sr., and Bernard M. De Ment, nonsupport; Alexius Bobolewski, Carrie Jackson, Jesse A. Gray, Frederick C. Russell, James E. Edelin, Will Reese, Harry N. Scott, George Bristol, Henry Patterson, Leroy C. Montgomery, housebreaking; John P. Wilkinson and Earl R. Byrd, grand larceny; William S. Beaton, joy-riding.

Harold E. Taylor, Milton Stocks, Ulysaus G. Tucker, William Louis Joseph, William Arms, Clarence L. Butler, Morgan Williams, Lee James, Willie James, Margaret Smith, Calvin Jones and Elijah Scott, gaming charges; Bill Rummage, Benjamin F. Sewell, Robert Francis Henson, Ellen Lynch, Oliver Haley, violation of the Harrison narcotic act; Mary Ferguson, violation of the liquor taxing act of 1934; Everett E. Hamilton and Abner M. Velenchik, violation of section 73, title 18, U. S. Code.

James P. Young, Robert G. Timberlake, Eugene Keith Fleming, forgery and uttering; James R. Young, Clarence E. Bladen, Henry A. Lane, Edward Willis, Edward J. Warren, William A. Brown and Mary B. Brown, robbery; Bernard D. Reed, robbery and petit larceny; Frank B. La Porte, blackmail; Thomas Wood and Eugene Thomas, assault with a dangerous weapon; Eugene Veney, Arthur J. Speare and Curtis C. Russell, rape.

William M. Bailey, second degree murder; George Broadwick and Milford Woodard, violation of the National motor vehicle theft act, and Robert Walker, violation section 1162, title 26, U. S. Code.

Marian Hepburn, Star's Sister, Finds Police Are Polite

Miss Marian Hepburn, sister of movie actress Katherine Hepburn and an employe of the United Federal Workers of America, a C. I. O. affiliate, said Washington police were "quite polite," following a brief collision with authorities yesterday.

A policeman had tried to stop her and six companions from distributing leaflets yesterday at the District and Commerce buildings.

The leaflets announced that the U. F. W. A. would hold a meeting tonight at the Government Auditorium at 8:15 p. m. After inspecting the leaflets the officer permitted resumption of distribution.

355 in D. C. to Get Old-Age Payments

The Social Security Board announced yesterday that claims for lump-sum payments under the old-age insurance plan certified to date in the District reached 355. Payments in January totaled $3,169.87, and the total to date was $9,871.70.

For Maryland there were 349 claims certified in January; bringing the total to 1,370, the amount of payments in January to $11,781.23, total payments to $37,423.42.

For Virginia the figures were 392 claims certified in January; 1,228 total claims certified; $9,409.13 paid in January; total payments to date of $26,928.45 and average payments $24.

Institute of International Ill-Will Demands War

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

With "abolish academic freedom before it abolishes war" as their battle cry, officers of the Institute of International Ill-Will yesterday marched on the Emory University Library at Atlanta. In the odd parade are Genevieve Woodward, of Dublin, Ga., leading the war horse; "Buddy" Atkinson, of Madison, Ga., commander in chief; Grady Clay, jr., of Atlanta, brigadier general, and Jack Tolbert, of Columbus, Ga., quartermaster general.

Blowing of Auto Horns Banned in District Between Midnight and 7 A. M. by New Law

The District Commissioners yesterday approved a regulation banning the use of auto horns between midnight and 7 a. m., effective within ten days.

The only exception to the new traffic ordinance applies to "bona fide emergency vehicles on emergency call." These include fire engines, police cars and ambulances.

It was pointed out by Traffic Director William Van Duzer that the present regulations prohibit use of horns at any time except as reasonable warning of danger.

"However, there is just too much horn blowing at night," he said. "Lots of drivers when approaching corners use their horns instead of their brakes. Another thing this sounding of horns during the otherwise quiet night hours contributes greatly to the disturbing of rest and sleep of the community."

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen was emphatically in favor of this regulation, stating:

"I believe the new regulation will help considerably in decreasing the number of accidents that occur after dark."

Most accidents of a serious nature occur at night, Hazen stated.

Meanwhile District residents calmly accepted the ruling. Residents living near busy intersections were inclined not to be bothered by horns more or less regularly blown near their homes, and thought that perhaps someone else down the street might be bothered.

Comments were:

Mrs. Mabel Adams, 1120 Thirteenth street northwest, near the intersection of Massachusetts avenue:

"There are a lot of other rackets in town I wish they would clean up first. I imagine it bothers people to have someone tooting a horn for a girl friend to come out. It's a good idea, but horns don't bother us."

Mrs. William S. Carrol, 2716 Thirty-fourth street northwest, at intersection of Macomb street:

"I approve of the regulation, but this is so far away from the center of the city that there is little horn blowing here."

Harold A. Murdock, 326 Massachusetts avenue northwest, at Stanton Square:

"The less noise the better. I'm all in favor of the regulation, but we are not bothered by horns being blown."

Mrs. William E. Spicer, 3023 Fourteenth street northwest, between Columbia road and Irving streets:

"It is a good idea to stop horn blowing if people will drive more carefully. We are not bothered by the noise of horns, though."

The Commissioners also ordered a ban on parking on both sides of Wisconsin avenue between P and Q streets; on the west side of Wisconsin avenue between Q and thirty-fifth street between 7 and 9:30 a. m., and on the east side from 4 to 6 p. m.

Twentieth street from Connecticut avenue to Florida avenue, northwest was designated one-way for northbound traffic by the Commissioners.

Rep. Garrett to Address Father and Son Banquet

A speech by Representative Clyde Garrett (Democrat), of Texas, roast turkey, wrestling matches and the presence of Walter Johnson and Cliff Battles will feature the father and son banquet at Atonement Lutheran Church at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Lieut. Leo J. Riegel, president of the Sunday school, will be toastmaster. The wrestling will be by Prof. Tom Clayton, of McDevitt Preparatory School, and Tony Rapp.

Radio Leaders Name Five to Executive Unit

Board to Meet Here Later to Pick 'Czar' for the Industry.

Five new members were named yesterday to the executive committee of the Radio Operators of America, ending their 16th annual session at the Willard Hotel.

They included Edwin Craig, of Nashville; Walter J. Damm, of Milwaukee; John Elmer, of Baltimore; Mark Etheridge, of Louisville; Herb Hollister, of Wichita, and Frank M. Russell, of Washington.

As the industry mobilized and considered picking a "czar," whose power will be as supreme as that of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis in baseball or Will Hays in the movies, there was much speculation as to who the arbiter might be.

The executive board will meet here March 21 to consider the appointment of a paid president.

Invited to a luncheon the same day was Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission. McNinch has been an outspoken critic of liquor advertising over the radio and a leader in the official censuring of the now-famous Mae West-Charley McCarthy "Adam and Eve" broadcast, which aroused a storm of protest throughout the nation. He has promised an investigation by the FCC of "any monopolistic tendencies" in the radio industry.

The more than 500 radio station operators went on record as praising work of Lew S. Avery, of Buffalo, as chairman of the sales managers' committee.

'First Lady' Inspects New Educational Plan

Keuka Park, N. Y., Feb. 16 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt paid a visit to the Keuka College campus today to see at first hand the workings of a new program of individualized education worked out by Dr. J. Hillis Miller, president of the college for girls.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, were escorted over the campus by Dr. and Mrs. Miller.

Industry Hears Labor Board Lauded, Scored

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—The National Labor Relations Board drew commendation and criticism today at a meeting of 800 industrial executives.

Charles Fahy, general counsel of the board, said labor strife had been on the down grade since validation of the labor relations act and predicted:

"Executives and directors of personnel will more and more make it a matter of pride to conform, in letter and spirit, with a law which does no more than protect the 'fundamental' and 'essential' liberties of the men and women who work for them."

"I think the quarrel (over the statute) is ceasing," he told the American Management Association personnel conference.

From Russell L. Greenman, assistant manager of the department of manufacture of the Chamber of Comerce of the United States, came the opinion that the Government devoted only "10 cents for co-operation in the field of labor relations for every dollar spent for coercion."

The board's task, he contended, was "compulsion and punishment."

"The kind of co-operation it extends to employers bears a close resemblance to the brand of co-operation that Japan now is using in China," Greenman said.

H. L. Nunn, president of the Nunn-Bush Shoe Co., in Milwaukee, opined there could be no hope for co-operation so long as capital insisted "on dictation and arbitrary power."

Experts Differ On Document In Nolan Trial

D. C. Police Aide Asserts Paper Is Genuine, But U. S. Man Denies It.

Sharp differences of opinion between Ira Gulickson, Bertillon expert of the Metropolitan Police Department, and Samuel F. Pickering, technologist of the Department of Justice, as to whether a document offered in the trial of William J. Nolan, now on trial for conspiracy to commit false pretenses is genuine, enlivened the hearing before Justice Joseph W. Cox in District Court yesterday.

The document, which admits that a finance company knew Nolan had negotiated about 45 conditional bill of sale contracts with the Munsey Trust Co., is alleged by John J. Wilson, Assistant United States Attorney, to be spurious, while the defense insists it is genuine.

In an effort to prove the document false, Wilson had Pickering utilize the small room used by the justices of the court for a dining room to demonstrate that the upper two-thirds of the letter did not match the lower one-third.

At the conclusion of the day's hearing Gulickson was still on the stand, awaiting cross-examination by the Government. Defense attorneys estimated the six weeks' old trial might go to the jury late today.

Jones Held to Jury In Defacing Case

Dr. Waldo H. Jones, arraigned in Police Court yesterday on a charge of destruction and defacing of public records, pleaded not guilty to the offense. The charge was brought by Recorder of Deeds William J. Thompkins after discovery that signatures had been torn from a deed in the file of the National University of Therapeutics.

Dr. Jones, who was arrested Tuesday, waived preliminary hearing. Judge Walter J. Casey ordered him held for grand jury action under a bond of $1,000. The defendant gave his address as 3907 Kansas avenue northwest.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

In one sense there is no such thing as the "right play." A play that would be absolutely right against one type of opponent would be just as wrong against a different type. It is this feature of bridge, above all others, that takes it out of the class of card games and places it on a scientific basis.

West opened the heart Queen and, when it held, promptly shifted to the club six. Declarer won this in dummy, and gave serious thought to the implications of West's defense. One thing was certain West had deliberately risked his own second heart trick and must have some idea in mind as justification. Declarer had bid and rebid spades and the King had then appeared in dummy. Unless West himself held the spade Queen he would have to fear a solid trump suit. Surely, with two or three small spades, West would not have risked leading a club at the second trick, since this would give declarer opportunity to pick up the trumps and discard heart losers on dummy's clubs. The inference was very strong, therefore, that West himself held the spade Queen; further, that he hoped to make it on a second round finesse by declarer, and that he then intended to put East on lead in order to get a club ruff.

Most declarers would, I imagine, take enough warning from the club shift to get trumps out as quickly as possible, and these would probably lead the Ace and King of spades, disdaining the finesse. This particular declarer went even further. Convinced that he had read West's mind correctly, he led a trump to the Ace and then finessed through West. The Jack holding the second trump lead, the Queen was extracted, and declarer discarded his losing heart and one diamond on dummy's clubs before taking the diamond finesse. It lost, but at most of the tables only four odd was made because the spade finesse was taken the other way. The extra trick at this table produced a far better-than-average match-point score.

Phi Beta Kappas Will Be Installed

The first chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity, in Washington will be installed at George Washington University in ceremonies at Corcoran Hall February 22 in the presence of delegates from chapters in colleges and universities throughout the country.

The chapter will be formally presented at the winter convocation of the university at Constitution Hall in the evening.

Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society, and one of the 86 members of the board of trustees and faculty who made the petition for the chapter, will become a charter member and has been designated representative of the Amherst College chapter.

He is also a member of the committee on installation, appointed by the Phi Beta Kappa Association of the District.

Panhandler Finds Washington Isn't The Elysian Fields

Parol Petkas, told that Washington is a land of milk and honey if you know how to go about getting it, came to the Capital two months ago to seek his fortune. He found the milk sour and the honey stale.

Petkas was arrested on H street northwest Tuesday after soliciting alms in a restaurant and a liquor store. He told police he came here from the West on the advice of a friend, who said it was "easy pickin's" in Washington.

Judge Walter J. Casey's only comment in Police Court yesterday was "$15 or 15 days."

President Signs Bill to Control Farm Surplus

Farm

lasting progress of the people of farm and city alike will come, not from the old familiar cycle of glut and scarcity, not from the succession of boom and collapse, but from the steady and sustained increases in production and fair exchange of things that human beings need.

"A year ago, a national conference of farm leaders in Washington advocated Federal legislation to serve these ends. During the recess of the Congress, committees were at work. The task was complex and difficult. In order that the Congress might have opportunity to complete legislation in time to meet this year's farm problems, I summoned the special session last November. This act is the result.

"The agricultural adjustment act of 1938 represents the winning of one more battle for an underlying farm policy that will endure. Therefore it is historic legislation. It is not perfection, but is the constructive product of the able and sincere work of many men. I believe the overwhelming majority of the people will commend members of Congress and others who have devoted themselves to the making of this law. As we go ahead under the new act, let us resolve to make it an effective instrument to serve the welfare of agriculture and all our people.

"It will be put into operation as quickly as possible, and in the meantime I ask that all those who are doing or will do spring planting govern their operations in the light of this new law.

"While the new act makes many important changes in the existing plan for the benefit of agriculture, it is to be noted that, with one exception—the provision for 'parity' payments—the improved plan for agricultural adjustment does not entail any greater annual cost than the sum authorized under the present one, which is known as the soil conservation and domestic allotment act. Parity payments would increase the present authorized cost, and in order to make such payments it would be necessary to provide additional revenue needed to finance them."

Peggy Rich Fails To Recall Her 4th Wedding, Plans 5th

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 16.—Peggy Lawton Rich, blonde actress, told a Supreme Court referee today that she could not recall having married her fourth husband, and she asked for an annulment.

She told friends she wishes to marry a fifth, Mark Shull, formerly an orchestra leader and now a civil engineer, of Scarsdale, N. Y.

Mrs. Rich said it was from her roommate that she learned in September, 1936, that she had become the bride of Theodore Royce, British theatrical impresario. She was, she testified, surprised. He had invited her to a cocktail party which ended before a justice of the peace.

Educators to Aid Symphony Drive

Educators, representing every school and college in the District, now are enlisted in the National Symphony Orchestra's drive for a $103,000 sustaining fund, headquarters for the February 23-March 6 campaign announced yesterday.

At the same time, the Orchestra Guild, a women's organization which functions throughout the year in behalf of the symphony, has organized a special committee to assist in the fund-raising campaign.

According to Miss Grace Dunham Guest, education committee chairman, her group consists of 37 men and women representing universities, parochial and private schools. Dean Henry Grattan Doyle, of George Washington University, is cochairman of the committee.

Miss Anna Pearl Cooper and Mrs. L. Gorrin Strong are head of a group that will carry the drive to the universities of the District, while Mrs. Miriam S. Hilton and Mrs. David Gates, president of the Parent-Teacher Association, are in charge of solicitation in the public schools.

Stamp Pictures Printable Today

Beginning today, stamp collectors and dealers will be permitted to publish black and white reproductions of United States postage stamps, for philatelic purposes.

Regulations governing publication of stamp reproductions will be issued in the Federal Register over signature of Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury. They provide that stamp illustrations must be either three-fourths or one and one-half times the size of regular stamps.

Printing of the stamp reproductions was provided by act of Congress on January 27. President Roosevelt approved the regulations early this week and they become effective with publication.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv.

Man Held Under Bond On Lottery Charges

Myron Horton Wells, 43, 1100 block Orren street northeast, was held to the grand jury under $1,500 bond yesterday, charged with operating a lottery.

Arrested by Sergt. George Deyoe and Vice Squad detectives in the 1500 block Benning road, he was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage and pleaded not guilty.

Deyoe said the man had a quantity of alleged "numbers" slips at the time of his arrest.

Limerick

tionhouse, it was learned. He was indicted Tuesday by a District grand jury.

Warned by his guards to remain silent last night, Langdon's only comment was:

"I don't know what's going to happen. I haven't retained counsel yet. Give me a chance to think, will you——"

It was reported, however, that he did "plenty of talking" during the trip from New Haven with Truscott and Hartman. Although he has repeatedly claimed innocence, police say they are prepared with "ample evidence" to press Langdon's prosecution.

Clad in a somber business suit and handcuffed to his custodians, Langdon's usual smile had disappeared last night. He made repeated efforts to dodge photographers and sought protection from the uniformed escort that whisked him through the Union Station concourse and into a waiting police car.

Until yesterday, Langdon, the "cop on the beat" when Beulah Limerick was slain, had been held in Connecticut on charges of placing an obstruction in the path of a New Haven train last year.

That charge was nolle prossed when Washington detectives appeared in New Haven with a warrant charging the former policeman with murder.

Interviewed in his cell shortly before his removal from New Haven, Langdon said the slaying charges were "ridiculous."

"All this don't worry me a damn bit," he told visitors. "When you are innocent, you are innocent—and I'm going to blow the lid off things in Washington."

Local investigators refused last night to let reporters talk to Langdon.

"We haven't completed our investigation by a long shot," they said.

Langdon's wife, it was reported, will apear as one of the Government's principal witnesses. It was her volunteered information, detectives said, that helped to secure an indictment. The wife—Mrs. Rose V. Langdon—has been questioned in secrecy for several weeks.

Newspapers Are Tabooed For Prisoners at Alcatraz

Alcatraz

No one knew how—maybe through the kitchen. The men tore the paper into bits and secretly passed the news items around.

Clippings were hidden in every cell. Some of the men tucked the items into their shoes and read them over and over again. It was a luxury to read of events beyond those walls.

In other prisons, the only men who become "stir crazy" are the guys who always were half-crazy anyhow. The smart guys talk, read and look forward to recreational breaks in the routine.

But not in Alcatraz. There they just feed you well and take good physical care of you and do their best to drive you mad. There, the smart guys are worse off than the dumb ones because without talking and recreation, any man is apt to become a desperate animal—like a caged tiger.

But there are men in Alcatraz whom no discipline ever can break. They spend all their time plotting and planning a way out. They are waiting patiently for developments, for this guard to be changed or that one to wink.

I've said that Alcatraz guards are pretty decent. But they are only human. Some of those island inmates have money on the outside. They are willing to pay plenty for help. The right guard might mean a letter over the wall—and plans for a break.

One of the men awaiting a chance like this is Harvey Bailey, the Urschel kidnaper. He is one of the most desperate men on the "rock." He has plenty of money on the outside and everyone in Alcatraz knows it.

Bailey has gone over the wall before in other tough prisons. He will try it again—but when he does, it will be planned to the last detail. When Bailey tries, the right men will know, but not the wrong men. He will know every piece of steel in every bar, every ventilator, every laundry basket, every guard and what he is doing at the minute, how heavy the fog is outside.

Fellows like Bailey live on planning breaks. I claim he wouldn't be so hard to watch if the Alcatraz system wasn't so tough. Maybe I am wrong.

I also claim the prison never was made that men can't get out of. Two men escaped from Alcatraz recently. There was a report in Alcatraz they were drowned and their bodies taken from the treacherous waters around the island. I don't believe that.

They "jimmied" a door, it was reported. But the doors in Alcatraz cannot be "jimmied" with any tools an inmate would or could have. The real story will come out some day. I'll bet it will tell how those two men went through the bars of a window in the narrow corridor between the machine shop and laundry.

It will also tell, I believe, how those bars were cut with a hacksaw—how it probably took the escaped men a year to saw their way out—a few strokes at a time when passing the window. I know that window faces the edge of the cliff and on that foggy day, a speedboat at the water's edge could not be seen. It does not take a speedboat long to get to Angel Island.

It was about 1 p. m. when those men, Ralph Roe, bank robber, and Ted Cole, kidnaper, got away. The alarm wasn't sounded until 1:30 p. m. I heard that someone on the inside—nobody will ever know who—pulled those sawed bars back into place and the escape wasn't discovered until the half hour check.

Those who are not plotting escape in Alcatraz are plotting revolts in the machine shop and laundry to sabotage machinery to get concessions—the right to talk, a real library a commissary. As a former inmate, I hope the men get the concessions. But I also know what the Department of Justice figures—and probably the majority of people outside—that nothing is too tough for kidnapers and the big shots of crime.

To that I say why not make those Federal offenses punishable by death—quick—not slow death in Alcatraz. That place is too tough.

In conclusion, I will say that if what the Government wants is to have a prison stand as a horrible challenge to crime it certainly has it in Alcatraz.

THRIFTY "60" FORD V·8 AVERAGES 28.85 MILES PER GALLON!

Above: The prize-winning Thrifty "60" Ford V-8 entering the gateway of beautiful Yosemite National Park during the Gilmore-Yosemite Economy Run.

Frankness The Best Policy.

In supporting the request for an additional relief appropriation before the House Appropriations Committee, Secretary Morgenthau described the current recession as "one of the most rapid declines in business that has ever been experienced in the history of the country." He added that the present economic situation is "most acute."

Mr. Morgenthau refused to soften the effect of his plain speaking by venturing to assert that the bottom of the current depression has been reached. Very sensibly he explained that it would be a mistake to predict that prosperity is "just around the corner." For such refreshing frankness the Secretary of the Treasury deserves to be congratulated, although one wishes he had not so recently asserted with equal emphasis that the WPA could get along for the rest of the year on its original allowance.

If Mr. Morgenthau is now being almost brutally frank in impressing upon Congress the need for more relief money, he was certainly less than frank a short time ago in denying the probability of such need. There have been no subsequent developments that make the industrial outlook appear more gloomy. On the contrary, declines in industrial production as a whole appear to have been arrested in recent weeks, while the rate of decline of wholesale prices has also slowed down.

Hence, Mr. Morgenthau's sudden emphasis on the hard-pressed situation in which the WPA now finds itself calls for some explanation. It is not satisfactory to say that "we had hopes that this thing would get better and that we would not need the money. Now we are right up against the gun and we do need the money."

The Question At Issue.

It is the duty as well as the right of the Senate to give the closest scrutiny to the record and qualifications of many individuals named by the President to high office.

No one can quarrel, therefore, with the practice of holding hearings on such appointments. On the contrary, the Senate is clearly remiss in its duties when, as in the case of Hugo L. Black's nomination as Supreme Court justice, investigation of the appointee's fitness for his post is omitted in the name of senatorial courtesy.

The other extreme, however, is equally objectionable. A Senate committee hearing should not resemble a witch-burning expedition. Yet this is what the hearings on Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson's nomination as Solicitor General came close to being. Senators do themselves no credit by employing prosecuting tactics which have no relation whatever to the fitness of the appointee for the office to which he has been named.

Mr. Jackson's view of the desirable relationship between Government and business happens to be quite different from those of some of his senatorial inquisitors. But his competence as a lawyer for the post of Solicitor General, the only real question at issue, has never been denied. Quite properly, therefore, the majority of the sub-committee has approved Mr. Jackson's appointment, after hearings which would have been more impressive if they had been less protracted.

Street Lighting Charges.

Last year, when District officials appeared before the House Committee on Roads to request a share in the Federal road-building fund, they were turned away because of "unclean hands." This meant that the District had not been applying all its vehicular tax receipts to vehicular projects and thus could not properly ask the Federal Government to assist its highway program. To forestall another such disappointment the Commissioners have recommended that the item of street lights, which the Budget Bureau of its own initiative had charged against the highway fund, be returned to the general fund.

If the Senate follows the House and agrees to the transfer, it will mean that the general District tax bill for 1939 will be increased by $765,000—the cost of lighting the city's streets. Against this, however, is the virtual assurance that in the next Federal aid road bill, and presumably in all subsequent bills of the sort, the District will get its share of the apportionment. On the basis of the $125,000,000 fund now under discussion, this would give the District some $609,000. Another and more immediate result of the transfer will probably be that construction can begin on the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, which will be a particular satisfaction to the south side of the city.

More than deficits and bridges, however, motivated the Commissioners in objecting to the Budget Bureau's assignation of the street-lighting expense. When the 1937 District revenue act was under discussion, several automobile groups of the city protested strenuously against any increase in automobile taxes. In this they were joined by more than one citizens' organization.

Their opposition was finally dissuaded by a promise that the income from the increased taxes would be used only for highway purposes. To have permitted the money now to be used for street lighting—as great, if not a greater, convenience to pedestrians than to motorists—would have been an unbecoming breach of faith on the part of District leaders.

Austria Surrenders.

Not so long after the armistice, Gen. von Seeckt, the founder of the very efficient post-war Reichswehr, expressed to an Austrian friend the attitude of the German army toward Austro-German unification. "We do not want the Anschluss," said von Seeckt. "All we wish for is a friendly Austria whose divisions will be at our disposal if another major war comes."

This ominous observation recurs to mind with the news of the capitulation of Chancellor von Schuschnigg to Hitler's demands, and the consequent appointment of pro-Nazi ministers to control the police, the administration of justice and the conduct of foreign affairs for Austria. The German aim of "co-ordinating" Austria with Germany, instead of attempting to merge the two nations in a formal union, is carried far toward success by this action.

Four years ago this month the outcome now achieved was foreshadowed. It was then that the Dollfuss government resorted to military measures to crush the Austrian Socialists, and with them Austrian democracy. Following this action the Austrian Parliament voted its own permanent dissolution, after ratifying the new constitution which made the country a totalitarian state and its chancellor a legal dictator.

Dollfuss himself had little time to enjoy this eminence. On July 25, 1934, he was assassinated by Austrian Nazis in an abortive effort to establish a government favoring union with Germany. Since then Dr. von Schuschnigg, the present chancellor, has sought courageously and skillfully to maintain an uneasy equilibrium in both domestic and foreign policy. At home he has balanced precariously between Socialists and Nazis, who hate each other more than they do him. Abroad he has been held in the saddle by the conflicting pressures exerted by Germany and Italy.

The so-called Berlin-Rome axis necessarily runs through Vienna. And as long as Germany was willing to compromise on the issue, Austrian independence was secure. But given a situation in which Berlin became dominant in the combination, Austria would inevitably come under German control. There is no Austrian democracy left to oppose that trend. Neither Great Britain nor France is likely to make an issue of it. Once Mussolini withdrew his opposition to the pan-Germanic push, "co-ordination" of Berlin and Vienna became inevitable.

For reasons which are not yet entirely clear Mussolini has accepted this development. Perhaps he is far weaker than appears on the surface. Perhaps there is some quid pro quo involved, either in Spain or elsewhere. Perhaps Il Duce is convinced that Germany's ambitions lie to the east and therefore do not really threaten his Mediterranean orbit. In any case the change in Austria comes with Italian foreknowledge and approval. Germany is strengthened, though from a military rather than an economic viewpoint, and Hitler becomes leader in the Berlin-Rome combination, as well as for the German people.

Does this mean lessening or aggravation of current European tensions? It will be easier to judge after the Fuehrer's speech to the Reichstag this coming Sunday. But in advance of that event, certain facts stand out. A barrier toward the expansion of German influence in eastern Europe has been swept away. Through sympathetic Hungary the German pressure now impinges on the borders of disorganized Rumania. Isolated Czechoslovakia is now more than ever caught in a hostile vise. The Drang Nach Osten—the German push toward the east—is under way.

To the British government, however, this seems like the operation of a safety valve. The tendency in London is to minimize the importance of a development which reduces the independence of Austria to a shadow. This, of course, is an inspired interpretation which merely means that the British anticipate a lessening of tension in western Europe through a German concentration on the east. And no evidence of a weakening of Italian influence is distasteful in London at this moment.

The French viewpoint is not likely to be so cheerful. For with the "co-ordination" of Germany and Austria a major prop of French foreign policy falls to the ground. France, weakened by her serious internal difficulties, sees Nazi Germany surging over the jerry-built cordon sanitaire with which Clemenceau and Poincare sought to surround the Reich in 1919. Nothing more clearly indicates the decline of French influence than that nation's present helplessness to check the current trend in central Europe.

Price Manipulation.

Late in November, following an exceptionally severe drop in wholesale commodity prices beginning in mid-summer, President Roosevelt began rather tardily to worry about the inhibiting effect of increases in living costs upon industrial activity. At the end of January the President was still bothered about high prices, especially in the mass-production industries, which were urged to reduce prices without cutting wages.

This reiterated emphasis upon the importance of price reductions as a business stimulant was rather startling, coming from the head of an Administration that has for so long devoted its energies to raising prices. However, before the bewildered public has had time to grasp the significance of the changed outlook, the President seemingly reverts to his earlier belief in the efficacy of higher prices as a cure for depression. At any rate, he now thinks that the Nation's price level is too low, although he explains that this does not mean that prices of certain commodities should advance too rapidly.

These sudden shifts of mood are disturbing. But even more disturbing to public confidence is the President's apparent assumption that prices can and should be manipulated with a view to achieving prosperity.

It is virtually meaningless to talk in general terms about the price level being too low or too high. The main problem is to maintain a relationship between the prices of different commodities and classes of commodities that makes for active exchange of goods at prices fair to both sellers and buyers. When prices are thus well adjusted, or well balanced, the so-called price level can be largely ignored as a factor affecting current business transactions.

Indeed, when we think realistically about price problems we arrive at the conclusion that prices under a system of free economic enterprise simply cannot be controlled in the way the President indicates. Of course, prices of specific commodities can be fixed by law and punishment inflicted for selling or buying goods at other than decreed figures. Or the supply of certain commodities offered for sale can be restricted, as under the agricultural adjustment program. But under production control plans the prices at which goods can be sold will, in the absence of price fixing, depend upon many incalculable factors affecting demand.

It is possible to conceive an economic society in which price relationships would be ideally adjusted to production costs so as to yield equitable returns to all producers, and maximum wealth and maximum satisfaction to the community. But in a modern industrial world, in which prices are determined to a large extent by fluctuating conditions of demand and supply, we fall far short of this ideal. Nevertheless, the Administration's past efforts to improve upon the market machinery of price fixation, by resort to monetary manipulation as well as production control under the AAA and the NRA, have been very unsatisfactory substitutes for familiar methods.

Official absorption in plans for raising and lowering prices has a very disturbing effect upon the public mind, even if the plans never get beyond the discussion stage. The mere knowledge that the Administration is toying with suggestions for raising or lowering the price level by direct action is thoroughly upsetting to businessmen. Many who would be quite willing to take the ordinary risks of planning for the future hesitate to make decisions when faced by the possibility of this sort of governmental intervention.

It is possible, no doubt, to stimulate industrial activity by the threat of inflation. But as our experience during the past year shows, the aftermath of artificially induced business activity of inflationary origin is apt to be recession and subsequent price declines. Indeed, neither sudden increases nor overrapid decreases in prices are healthy economic symptoms. Orderly progress is best furthered by constant and rapid adjustments of prices to changing demands. In that way, unsound tendencies are corrected before the price situation gets out of hand.

Most of our efforts in recent years have unfortunately been directed toward trying to achieve or to cling to arbitrary standards of what prices ought to be, instead of permitting prices to reflect actual demand and supply conditions.

Public Dentistry.

From the New Orleans Item.

Dr. Fishbein gingerly indorses group medical experiments, but still objects to "State medicine." So do we. State dental service to the poor is not "State medicine," as this term is commonly used. Yet we must commend the following paragraph to Dr. Fishbein and the big association of which he is spokesman:

"Baton Rouge—A total of 2,165 were treated in Louisiana dental trailers during the first month of operation, it was announced by Public Welfare Commissioner A. R. Johnson."

The fact commanding attention here is that the new trailer service already has shown that thousands of Louisianans need dental attention and have been unable to obtain it under the private practice and fee system. The Government is acting where action has been needed.

We have no doubt that Government invasion of the medical field—no matter how unwise it might be—would reveal as grave a deficiency in medical service as the trailer experiment has shown in dental service. If that condition exists—and many inquiries in the lower groups indicate it—either the organized medical profession must meet the issue or somebody else will.

Apologies To Rep. O'Connell.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to call to your attention a misquotation appearing on page 2 of your issue of February 14, wherein it appears that I made an attack on Representative McReynolds, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, in an address before the Veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade on Sunday afternoon.

The news story in question purports that I termed Mr. McReynolds a tory and a fascist. This is not correct. In discussing our present neutrality law I made the statement that this legislation, introduced by Mr. McReynolds as chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, was a tory and fascist piece of legislation. I made no personal attack whatsoever on Mr. McReynolds.

I do not blame the reporter in this instance, because I have a rapid-fire diction which is often difficult even for court reporters to take, and this, I believe, was the reason for the misquotation.

On the floor of the House today I have corrected any reports that I personally attacked Mr. McReynolds and in complete fairness to him as well as myself, I would appreciate it if a corrected story would appear in The Post.

JERRY J. O'CONNELL.

College Training.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While the writer agrees with everything that was written by Mr. Edwin Evans, whose letter was published in this column under date of February 9, it is to be remembered that the work of the average person in the Government, as well as in private industry, can be done by some one with only an eighth grade education. There are, of course, many exceptions, but I am speaking generally. So far as doctors are concerned, many of them are not worth $2 a year.

I am not trying to disparage college training (it is something of which any determined and ambitious person has good reason to be proud, provided he can apply himself), but after being around people who have several college degrees and seeing the quality of their work, it is plain that many of those persons lay too much stress on their diplomas, with too little said of their actual ability.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Roosevelt, one of the four Presidents who have graduated from Harvard, has seen fit to employ a secretary who has only a high school education. This is true of many other people who are really educated.

It is said that George Bernard Shaw went to school for only a few years, yet only recently no less an authority than Dr. William Lyon Phelps referred to Mr. Shaw as a scholar and a genius. Washington Irving had only a high school education. A study of the Congressional Directory will show that some of our Representatives are getting along without a college sheepskin. One's education can not necessarily be determined by the number of years one went to school.

Light On Alcatraz.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your current articles on the prison situation at Alcatraz are very welcome. That place has been kept secret so long that a little light is indeed something to be praised. I do not see any need for a Devils Island here in America.

I notice that the newspapers have fought shy about publishing any details about the recent escapes at Alcatraz? Why is that? Newspapers are always after news, and what would make more entertaining reading than an escape from Alcatraz, the place where it is impossible to escape? Is it against the policy of the Department of Justice?

Let's have the truth about Alcatraz, with its silent rule and all the other baby stuff. Let's have the truth about the prison chief.

There is something suspicious about anything that is kept hidden from the light, and Alcatraz has been kept dark long enough. It is about time that it was brought out where people could see what was going on. That business about putting all new prisoners into solitary confinement smacks of ancient days. Why don't they revive the wheel and the rack?

RAYMOND NEWMAN.
Washington, Feb. 15.

A General's Suggestion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been impressed during the past week by the hearings before Chairman Vinson and the members of the House Committee on Naval Affairs. I was present as a spectator during several days and on February 11 was given the opportunity to present my own views of the pending naval bill. The bill now being considered by the committee is to increase the authorized strength of the Navy by 20 per cent of the strength fixed by the Vinson-Trammell act of 1934. The strength fixed by the Vinson-Trammell act has not been reached. Therefore the actual effect of passing the bill now under consideration may be to increase the actual strength of the Navy by more than 20 per cent. The actual increase is estimated by various persons as from 20 per cent to 75 per cent.

One of my suggestions to the committee was to take a part of the $800,000,000 now earmarked for fleet increase and use it to refortify our Atlantic and Pacific harbors, and to fortify the Unalaska harbors, in the Aleutians—squarely on the normal route to Japan. Honolulu is necessary as a secondary base to help defend the Panama Canal, but Honolulu does not happen to be in 2,000 miles of the normal short route to the Orient. Instead of more great battleships, I suggested adding to our harbor defenses many more heavy land-based airplanes, mines, submarines, fast small torpedo boats and mobile railway artillery—to make our continental harbors impregnable.

As to including the indefensible islands of Samoa, which are 5,200 miles away, in our Aleutians-Hawaii-Panama Canal line of defense in the Pacific, Maj. Herbert Kitchener once held extra rank as the sidar of the Egyptian army. Cromer cabled to Salisbury in London the advice of Kitchener that some places on the flanks of Kitchener's proposed march up to Abuklea and Khartum be fortified. The prime minister replied, from London, that if he should approve all the funds enthusiastic officers desired for fortifications he would soon have to be prepared to approve plans to fortify the moon—to make sure against any attack from Mars.

Coal Commission's Prices.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The action of the Bituminous Coal Commission in fixing prices on soft coal without holding public hearings as required by law is indeed a sorry spectacle. The money this commission has spent for the last year may now be counted as totally wasted.

What I and many others cannot understand is how the chairman of the commission, who is a lawyer himself, and the commission's large staff of legal talent could have overlooked the plain requirement of the coal act that hearings be held.

According to the press, the consumers' counsel, John Carson, who is not a lawyer but a former newspaperman, pleaded with them to hold hearings, but his advice was disregarded. Now the courts uphold his viewpoint. Can it be that newspapermen are better lawyers than the lawyers themselves?

No More Ulster.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of February 13 contained an editorial captioned "Ulster Opposes Union."

You will pardon my calling your attention to the fact that historic Ulster has gone with the wind. As a geographical entity the word Ulster has been deleted from all vocabularies.

Many, many years ago Ireland was troubled with the pains of childbirth. The bungling political doctors at 10 Downing street went into a huddle and decided that a Caesarian operation was essentially necessary to save the life of baby and mother. The operation was duly performed, the result of which was that part of the baby known as Ulster was turned over to the care of a nurse known as Irish Free State and the other part turned over to a nurse named Northern Ireland.

The nurse, known as Craigavon, who is feeding the baby known as that atom of territory called Northern Ireland, is playing a role of Charlie McCarthy to the ventriloquists at 10 Downing street. The political buccaneers of Downing street are supplying to the Craigavon nurse the food necessary to sustain life in the baby known as Northern Ireland.

"Unmilitary Objective."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Prof. Joseph F. Thorning in his letter in The Post of February 12, criticizes the loyalists for bombing Caceres, which he describes as an "unmilitary objective." The professor has forgotten some significant facts about Caceres.

If Prof. Thorning re-reads his Spanish history he will recall that the town has always been an important military objective. During the "War of Liberation" in 1823, Gen. Juan Martin ("El Empecinado") fought an important battle there. In 1836, during the Carlist wars, the Carlist Gen. Gomez defeated the forces of Gen. Cabrera there.

As to its present importance, Caceres is the headquarters of the so-called first military region of Spain. Moreover, it is the chief transportation juncture between the rebel forces in the north and south, thus serving as the center from which troops and military supplies are dispatched to the various rebel fronts.

Mistrust For England.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Another American of many generations would like to ask upon what grounds it is assumed that England "is our strongest ally and the only one to whom we can turn in time of trouble?"

The role of Great Britain as our strongest ally is easily imagined, but not so easily discerned in the facts of history. What assurance of England's aid can be gathered from past events? If I correctly recall the diplomatic history of the United States, at the only times in which this country has been in trouble and in which Great Britain could have helped her, that great "ally" was causing, or helping to cause the trouble.

Possibly our Americans of several generations have in mind the aid and comfort given the Confederacy by England during the Civil War. Or perhaps England was a friend and ally when she bestowed upon the United States the honor of contributing "cannon fodder" and other unimportant supplies for the successful termination of the World War.

The truth is that the great friendship of Great Britain for the United States is an unfounded myth which our British friends like to circulate for the sole benefit of Great Britain. "The end of civilization" will really come when this country joins England in seeking to control the four corners of the earth by her military forces.

The Post Impressionist

Eyeless In Valhalla.

ALL THE WHILE the Congressman was speaking brave words about war against dictatorships, sometimes thumping belligerently with his clenched fist upon the table, the young lieutenant listened attentively.

Sometimes one frail hand found the mustache he had grown in Spain and he stroked it in the manner of a puzzled grandee. Again he groped for the dark glasses that hid his sightless eyes from the world. Then he smiled wearily as he fingered his crutches.

Fascism is a mad dog in the world, tearing treaties to shreds, the Congressman said, and the young lieutenant nodded wistfully. He stood painfully and applauded with the other veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade.

When he sat down, the easy chair was comfortable—as was the arm one of his comrades had slung around his shoulder. He could not see the tapestries of the Queen Elizabeth room. He could not see the faces of his comrades in arms, and they could not see all of his, and perhaps that was a good thing. Anyhow, that was why he wore the dark glasses the surgeons in the hospital in Spain had given him before he came back to the United States.

What is happening in the fields of Aragon and throughout the mountains that girt and guard Teruel is merely dress rehearsal for Armageddon to come, the next speaker said.

A dress rehearsal? The young lieutenant was dressed smartly enough, even if he could never see himself in the mirror again. He wore a perfectly tailored khaki officer's uniform of the People's Army of Spain, with a Sam Browne belt knifing diagonally across his slim back.

There was a gold star on his right sleeve.

A star? He couldn't even see a star as he sat there. But there had been a time when he had seen a sky full of stars, all against a black dome, like spangles on a Spanish dancer's shawl!

The young lieutenant was Robert Raven, a hero without a country. Only a year before he had stepped briskly down the narrow streets of little Spanish towns, returning salutes and thinking that life was very fine indeed if one had an ideal to fight for.

And a year before that he had been a pre-medical student at the University of Pittsburgh, and Spain had been a place on the map to him, a place where, he was told, guitars sang and people danced and bulls charged in a sport of which most Anglo-Saxons thought only the worst.

Raven is the greatest living hero of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, if groping through life and listening to speeches day in and day out is being alive. If Raven does not consider it being alive, he does not admit it. He does not live in retrospect. He lives in a fever for a cause which, right or wrong, became a burning passion for him when he played with test tubes back in Pittsburgh.

He went into Spain by the old bathhouse trick. That is to say he went to France, made his arrangements with Spanish authorities when getting into Spain was easier, then registered at a French border resort. Next day he went to a border bathhouse for his health's sake, "lost" the bathhouse and crossed the frontier somewhere near Handaye.

Raven had to be taught to handle a gun, and then a hand grenade. He will not talk about hand grenades now, but he sometimes smiles bitterly when they are mentioned, and reaches for his glasses.

Last year at Belchite a bullet grazed his temple and he was sent to the hospital. But the great adventure seemed to be out on the front, so he hopped a truck. He found himself with a green company trying to hold a line. The machine gunners were cutting swaths in the ranks, so Raven took a hand grenade, pulled the pin and started toward a pill box. When he got there an enemy grenade blew up in his face. Then, like an echo, his own grenade exploded.

And yet Raven can sit and hear, and walk on his crutches, and hear lawmakers talk of a war to end war, just as his predecessors, those impractical idealists 20 years ago, did.

"Aye, we shall fight," says Raven when he speaks at rallies of the Friends of Spanish Democracy and the Abraham Lincoln Brigade.

"A year ago we said, 'They shall not pass.' Today we say, 'We shall pass.'"

There are Robert Ravens in every war. They usually fight for their countries and not for other countries, as Raven and his comrades of the Brigade have done. There is little chance anyone will ever put a statue up in a park to Robert Raven. Perhaps some day in Spain there will be a statue in a market place. That is, if there is ever a Spain left.

When spring comes, Raven can see it in imagination as he saw it as a boy. He can see the Monongahela River as it empties into the Ohio at Pittsburgh. He can stand, in his imagination, on a bluff again and watch the coal barges and the packets.

He can see the laboratories he loved to work in at the university. The professors he knew. The girls he used to "date." The tennis courts. The golf courses.

And, overhead, Raven still can see planes with bombs. He can see steel glitter and companions drop.

Some day Raven will return to Spain. He will sit in the blackness in a hot sun and cock his ears for the sound of dark, warm laughter.

Fair Enough

By
Westbrook Pegler.

Prince James.

JUDGING BY numerous signs, the time is ripe to realize that there is such an office as that of crown prince in the American system and to acknowledge "Jimmy" Roosevelt as the first to bear that honor.

PEGLER.

In the manner of little Prince Mike of Rumania and many another precocious military prodigy of the courts of the Old World, Prince James became a lieutenant colonel of the United States Marine Corps Reserve overnight by his father's appointment.

This is a rank to which other officers of either the Regular Establishment or the Reserve could not reasonably aspire without many years of faithful service, but in the case of a prince it is customary to skip the lower grades so that the inevitable appointment to the rank of field marshal a few years later will not seem too abrupt.

By this time next year James should be flying from the prow of his White House royal coach the two-starred flag of a major general and reviewing his faithful legions on some historic plain. And at his current rate of advancement over the laggard files of the service he should expect to receive his baton well before the reign is out—a weapon which, for sentiment's sake, might well be made in the form of an out-size fountain pen. Insurance men all carry fountain pens.

• • • •

PRINCE JAMES has taken gracefully to the authority of heir of a royal house.

Never elected to any office nor otherwise acknowledged by the people of the democracy as anything more than a prosperous young insurance man, the prince attended to that oversight himself a month ago when he issued a statement to his subjects in Massachusetts.

"The statement that the Administration or myself might support a Republican candidate for the governorship is absurd and ridiculous," Prince James declared in a formal manifesto. "I will support those elected by the people at the primary and in the regular election campaign."

It will be noted that the prince said "the people" and not "my people," the customary royal form, but James is new to his role and the faux pas will be forgiven. Of course, there may be those who will rear back and demand a plain explanation of what he means when he speaks of "the Administration or myself," a construction which introduces a new element into the Government. But, to the understanding mind, no plainer words are necessary, and if they were they would be found in his declaration that he will support those elected by the people.

In what capacity will he support those elected by the people? Surely not in the capacity of insurance salesman, for insurance salesmen are not qualified, as such, to issue such pronouncements with such solemnity and assurance. Quite obviously, James accepts from his own hand and that of his sire a position of much more importance and influence in the affairs of Massachusetts.

• • • •

HE SPEAKS for the Administration and himself both, and his assumption of authority has been so suave that up to date there has been no disposition to ask when he was elected what or upon what public service or expression of popular will he bases his self-acknowledged influence.

He spoke similarly in Florida recently when he used the royal "we" in discussing Senator Pepper's candidacy, and it would be dishonest to pretend to believe that he regards himself merely as one citizen among the millions and of rank no different from the rest.

James has been taken into a palace and, like the former Prince of Wales, who took his schooling for the kingship in errands devised to ballyhoo him for the crown, is being brought along at a rapid rate. Never elected, never even a candidate, but merely the son of the President, which was neither an office nor a distinction of itself before, he speaks for the Administration, for himself and for both together in a manner to suggest that by some invisible writing on the ballot he became the unspoken second choice in the sacred mandate of '36.

Perhaps the Congressional committee on income tax evasion was privy to this secret last summer when Congressman Treadway, the nonroyalist Republican from Massachusetts, asked in vain that Prince James' income tax returns be subjected to the same searching analysis that those of commoners were given. In a republic the President's son is a man of no more privilege than any other, but a crown prince naturally would be exempt if only for the dignity of his office and the prestige of his house.

The Once Over

The Story Of A Ski-Jumper.

He was, he thought,
An outdoor man;
A vital guy
With cheek of tan.

He swam and golfed
When it was hot,
And leaped on skis
When it was not.

The skiing craze
Came to him late,
And helps explain
His bitter fate.

"Oh, boy!" he cried,
His face aglow,
At ski stars in
The newsreel show.

He hied him to
A sports goods store
And bought the things
The ski men wore.

He read the books
Called "How to Ski,"
And said, "It seems
A pipe to me!"

Some lessons from
A man he took
(The man, he, too,
Had read a book!).

Aboard the ski
Train did he rush
To join the week-end
Ski-train crush.

The train pulled in
And he pulled out,
To show 'em what
'Twas all about.

The slide was long,
The slide was deep . . .
"And now, I guess,"
He said, "I'll leap!"

Ulster And Union

Craigavon Seen To Have Extended Rule By Capitalizing On Anti-Unionism Cry; Religious Issue Called Club.

By Liam Lenihan.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

NORTHERN IRELAND, which has been governed by Lord Craigavon for the past 17 years is to have 4 more years of his rule. In a blare-and-scare election that stepped out of the pages of Dickens the majority of voters in Ireland's amazing northeast corner overwhelmingly voiced their objection to union with Eire and re-echoed the old Ulstermanish cry of "Not an inch."

The outcome of the election was never once in doubt. Skillful, parliamentary and local government gerrymandering had seen to that. And where that failed, the office-holders made good use of the old shibboleths that Ulster Protestants are racially different from southern Irish Catholics and that Dublin rule would in reality be "Rome rule."

Thus was the "impudent challenge" thrown down by Prime Minister de Valera answered. The Irish executive's recent conference with British officials in London provided Craigavon, harrassed by unemployment problems in his paradise, with a golden opportunity. Immediately dissolving Parliament, he called an election and astutely made the issue one of "The Six Counties' birthright or a Southern Irish mess of pottage."

That appeal has an old familiar ring. It is the illegitimate product of England's ancient plan, Divide and rule. And, viewed in the light of modern economic problems, its purpose seems not so much the destruction of a united Ireland ideal as much as the undermining of trades-unionism in Belfast.

"Ulster" Differs From "Northern Ireland" Term.

LIKE MANY other convenient habits, the use of the term "Ulster" as a synonym for the state of Northern Ireland is not altogether correct. The state of Northern Ireland is a part of Ulster, containing only six of the counties included in the former province. The other three—Donegal, Cavan and Monaghan—when the island was partitioned were inclosed within the Irish Free State.

The state of Northern Ireland came into being in 1920—created by the Government of Ireland act of that year. The act was pushed through the House of Commons without a dissenting vote. Yet it is noteworthy that not one Irish member—Unionist or Nationalist—voted in its favor.

The proposal of separate governmental provision for Ulster, or, as it is commonly called, the Ulster partition, did not come to the front until a "serious complication" was recognized by Asquith in 1914. The "serious complication" was Sir Edward Carson, a southern Irish Protestant who, liberally financed by English sympathizers, created the Ulster Volunteers.

Sir Edward was nothing if not a good showman. He created the impression that all of Ulster was at his beck and call. And he revived the earlier watchword coined by Lord Randolph Churchill, "Ulster will fight and Ulster will be right." Carson carnivals were brought off with eclat in the presence of London correspondents and photographers in places where the program would have made a very poor showing at the polls.

Suggestion Of Partition Declared Relatively New.

YET FROM the outset the object of the special Ulster agitation had been solely and simply to defeat home rule. The argument was that government by a southern Irish majority was intolerable to the people of Ulster, and the conclusion was that Ulster people would not tolerate the establishment of such a government. At a still later date, when the suggestion of a separate provision for six of the Ulster counties was brought forward, Carson dealt with it in a summary way: "I know nothing about six counties or about any number of counties."

In fact, at no time up to the passage of the act of 1920 had any claim for such separate provision been formally and publicly made on behalf of the Ulster Unionists. That Ulster would be excluded from a measure of self-government which might be granted the rest of Ireland was mooted here and there. But it was definitely discussed, denounced and rejected at a further Unionist convention held in Dublin and attended by Ulster delegates.

Speaking at that meeting, a delegate, Walter Long, voiced the sentiments of those there when he said that the proposal to partition Ireland was the most ignominious and cowardly suggestion of the Irish problem he had heard. It was not Ulster, Long said, that needed special treatment. Under any settlement of Irish affairs Ulster was strong enough to protect its own interests. Not Ulster, but the scattered Unionist minority in the other parts of Ireland, required special provisions for their protection.

Not Irish But British Assigned Blame For Unrest.

YET DESPITE the attitude of the Ulster Unionists the island was deliberately partitioned. Thus it is not Ulster but the British backers of Ulster who must bear the basic responsibility for the separation of northern from southern Ireland. De Valera referring in the Dail in July, 1935, to a wave of rioting between Catholics and Protestants in Belfast, said:

"We know the fundamental cause. We know that, left to themselves, citizens of this country would only be too anxious to live in peace and friendship as fellow citizens. Religion is being used as a cloak for things that are mean and shabby. Religion is being exploited for political motives. There is a power outside this country which has created this situation and that power cannot escape responsibility."

And how has Northern Ireland settled its internal differences? In 1920 the population there numbered over a million and a quarter. And of that million and a quarter about a third were Roman Catholic. Since then, however, the Catholic population has increased until now, in the four counties of Tyrone, Fermanagh, Londonderry and Armagh, it is in the majority.

But if Northern Ireland's Roman Catholics are usually Nationalist and pro-Union, how did Craigavon gain such a sweeping majority? The answer lies in representation. When proportional representation gave the Catholics too much representation it was scrapped in 1929 except in the Queen's University constituency.

Hate did the rest. On the Belfast Protestant working class existing on the means test, Craigavon used the religious Frankenstein. In the past it served to break up the united front against the British. It is now being used to sow dissension in the ranks of labor.

James Connolly, foremost Irish apostle of Marxism, was the first to unmask it. Addressing northern workingmen before his execution in 1916 he said:

"Your industrial conditions are the product of modern industrial slavery. The things in which Belfast is peculiar are the skillful use by the master class of religious rallying cries which, long since forgotten elsewhere, are still potent to limit and weaken the cause of labor, and the pharisaical spirit of self-righteousness which enables unscrupulous sweaters of the poor with one hand in the pocket of their workers to raise the other hand to heaven and thank God that they are not as other men."

To a certain extent Connolly was right. The Irish question, either in the industrial north or the agricultural south, is a social question, which in the last analysis, resolves itself into a fight for mastery of the means of life.

And yet the "religious rallying cries" he spoke of are potent factors in the north, where, with the first whisper of unity with the south, a skillful politician like Craigavon can insure his continuance in office with the united support of all Protestant classes.

The unity of all Ireland under a Dublin Parliament can only be achieved, it seems, when a revitalized south, freed too from the hatecult of generations, can show the north more material advantages in exchange for co-operation than the mere political remedy of transferring the seat of government.

Only then will the end of partition be in sight. Only then can the old religious bogey be put to rout.

G-Men to Investigate Oil Prices in East Texas

By the Associated Press.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation received orders yesterday to investigate whether major companies in the east Texas oil field are "manipulating" crude oil prices in violation of anti-trust laws.

The G-men were assigned to the investigation by Director J. Edgar Hoover at the request of the Justice Department's anti-trust division.

Is Austria On The Way Out?

THOUGH ONLY a truncated fragment of the old Hapsburg empire, with its life frequently despaired of, Austria has managed to retain her sovereignty and independence for nearly a score of years. This has been no mean accomplishment. But the events of the past few days do very definitely suggest that her sands are running out. Even though continuing to be a separate political entity, Austria from now on may more and more take on the color of the Third Reich.

Certainly it cannot be doubted that the Nazi camel now has a long nose in the Austrian tent. Three of the key positions in the Austrian government—the ministries of the interior, foreign affairs and justice—are now to be occupied by Nazi sympathizers and a general amnesty has been proclaimed for all political prisoners including 2,000 Austrian followers of Hitler jailed for plots against the Schuschnigg regime.

But what happened in Austria early Wednesday morning is much less important than how it came to happen. Schuschnigg's capitulation to Hitler, there appears to be little doubt, was achieved at the point of a Nazi bayonet.

THAT BAYONET will continue to dog Schuschnigg's steps. No doubt he has it in mind to limit Nazi influence in Austria so far as he can. For instance, the appointment of Dr. Seyss-Inquart as minister of the interior has been counteracted, in part, by the appointment of a Schuschnigg partisan as chief of the gendarmerie. And the Austrian chancellor, it is reported, did wrest from the German Fuehrer, a new pledge to respect Austria's independence and to give no countenance to illegal Nazi activities in Austria.

But all this means is that the Nazification of the little Danubian state may take some time. For what Hitler did once, despite his solemn pledge of July 11, 1936, to keep hands off Austria, he may do again if the new Austrian set-up does not function as he wants it to function.

WERE THE QUESTION of going Nazi or not going Nazi simply a domestic question for Austria, there can be no doubt that Schuschnigg would have had no trouble in keeping his country on the path it has followed for the past five years.

Though troublesome, the Austrian Nazis could be handled. At no time have they had the support of a majority of the population. After all, the Socialists in Austria did in election after election poll 40 per cent of the vote. Though their party has been outlawed, the Socialist element persists and however much they might dislike Schuschnigg they dislike Hitler more.

Moreover, the dispute between the Third Reich and the Catholic Church, which was only beginning when Schuschnigg took the reins of power from the dying hands of Engelbert Dollfuss, has grown more virulent with each passing month. Austria happens to be a Catholic country.

UNFORTUNATELY, internal developments in Austria have to an increasing extent been at the mercy of external forces in late years. And so, too, the problem of Austrian independence has less and less been an Austrian problem and more and more a European one.

In other words, if Austria were to withstand the pressure from Germany, support from some third power or group of powers was essential. Were the League of Nations strong, Austria could have looked to the League for aid in resisting absorption by an expansionist Reich, even as in the early post-war years it received very valuable aid from Geneva in the financial sphere. But the League's usefulness as a barrier to aggression dwindled to the vanishing point after the Manchurian and particularly after the Ethiopian episodes.

A second alternative was for a group of interested powers to guarantee Austria's independence. But while this project was frequently considered it never got beyond the stage of platonic professions and pious hopes.

By the sheer force of circumstance, therefore, Austria was forced to turn to Italy, the power most vitally interested in keeping her alive.

IN 1934 Italy demonstrated its capacity to act as guardian of Austria by preventing a Nazi invasion of the Danubian state. The mobilization of a large number of Italian troops on the Brenner frontier was a warning whose significance did not escape Hitler. The latter knew that Germany, at that time, was no match for Italy.

Since then, however, the balance of power as between Germany and Italy has steadily been altered to the latter's disadvantage. Not only is Germany very much stronger than in 1934, but Italy is weaker.

Mussolini has wasted his nation's substance in far-flung adventures. The Ethiopian and Spanish enterprises have hog-tied and hamstrung Italy so far as effective maintenance of her interests in central Europe are concerned.

Thus step by step the Duce has become the prisoner of the Berlin-Rome axis. For if that axis disappears, Italy would find herself dangerously isolated.

The latest developments in Austria may give the Duce pause. For the shadow of Hitler is now darkening the land of the Fuehrer's birth. Unless Schuschnigg's hand can somehow be strengthened, the swastika may be planted on the Brenner, in uncomfortable proximity to South Tyrol with its 250,000 German-speaking inhabitants who have never taken kindly to Italian rule.

As Talleyrand said a century ago, every alliance consists of a horse and a rider. In the Berlin-Rome axis it is now clearly Germany which is in the uppermost position. Proof of this is to be found in Vienna today.

The Debunkers

By Edgar Johnson.

Hero-Toppling Is Passe.

LINKED TO the novelized biography has been the now moribund school of "debunking," a coterie inspired by the simple formula of denying all traditional judgments of past greatness.

Is Lincoln a folk hero of the American people? Then it becomes necessary to investigate these queer stories about an earlier love and his unhappiness with Mary Todd Lincoln. Was Washington the Father of His Country? His descendants must be told that he ran a profitable whisky mill.

Now, the devil's advocate is a valuable figure in biography; it is desirable that our judgments should be constantly revaluated and reinterpreted. There is no fame so holy that it must not be examined.

BUT IN THE 1920s, inspired partly by Lytton Strachey's acid but intelligent example, biography became for a while a dance of impish glee around scores of broken altars. No eminence was safe as long as dynamite or crowbars were anywhere to be obtained, and the search for flaws became so relentless that the price of microscopes tripled.

The delight of the reader grew partly out of its novelty and partly out of the wickedness that makes us all rejoice when pompous and portly gentlemen, slipping on a banana peel, describe wild arabesques against the sky. By the end of the decade, however, the skies had become a frieze of elderly and upset dignity, and the public wearied of the sport. The legitimate deposit which the debunkers left behind was a disinterested willingness to subject any reputation whatsoever, no mater how portentous and respectable, to a critical examination.

About Virginia

Two books about Virginia were recently issued from the Ditz Press, one, "Four Years in the Governor's Mansion of Virginia," by Mrs. Etta Donnan Mann, wife of William Hodges Mann (Governor, 1910-14), the other, "Legends of the Skyline Drive and the Great Valley of Virginia," by Carrie Hunter Willis and Etta Belle Walker.

Those years Mrs. Mann lived in the mansion behind the magnolias were fairly significant years for the Commonwealth. Her sensitive ears were tuned to all the political misgivings and hopes and equally to all the vast social whirligig. It seems she has done an accurate diary of the period—and one magnificently lightened by recitations of the famous murder cases which beset the Governor sorely when committees clamored for reprieves on electrocution day.

The book on the Skyline Drive and the Valley intends, it seems, to let the tourist trade know something of the background of places they are looking at while munching on hot dog sandwiches.

Tom McCarthy

Mary Likes Him!

MARY likes me! There, really, isn't much doubt about it. And I've got witnesses. I had her eating out of my hand!

"She's awful shy," Roy Bell, keeper in the small mammal house at the Zoo, said, "but she's cute."

McCARTHY.

It didn't take me much time to find that out. She came right down and made herself known. Probably, if the truth were known, she has a yen for publicity. And I don't know that I blame her. After all, pretty girls have a right to be seen.

The marvelous part of it is that Keeper Bell went up to the cage where Mary, the pride of the chimpanzee family, hangs out, and he offered her a plate of sliced carrots, grapes, and sweet potatoes. But it didn't please her at all. No sir, Mary is a lady of perception. She came right down the side of the cage toward me and stuck out her hand.

Mr. Bell tossed me a grape, and Mary bowed, swung from side to side, blushed slightly and left no doubt at all but that she was highly pleased . . . when I handed her the grape.

"That's wonderful," Mr. Bell said, "because she's awful shy. She's a timid one!"

"Cute little girl," Mr. Bell agreed.

• • • •

I HAPPENED out to the Zoo just as Roy Bell was feeding his charges, in the small mammal house. And I got in just as he walked behind the glass partition to feed a stout little orang-outang called Rassler.

Mr. Bell, who has worked with animals for the last 15 years or so, isn't satisfied with passing a plate of food through to the animals. He likes them, and he likes his job. He believes in having some fun out of it.

"Roll over," he commanded, and Rassler just looked at him.

"Roll over," said Mr. Bell, and Rassler obediently rolled over. Then Mr. Bell brought up the tin plate of food, while Rassler stuck his big hands through the bars to sort it over.

"The son of a gun is looking for grapes," Mr. Bell said, and Rassler took time out to plop one into his mouth, chew it a bit, and expectorate the seeds on Mr. Bell's shoes.

"He's only a young one," Mr. Bell said, "but he's getting stronger every day." Mr. Bell should know. Rassler steadied himself, while searching through the food, by grasping Mr. Bell's bicep.

"Now, this next one . . . we've got to be careful of her," Mr. Bell said, as he moved down toward Suzie's cage. Suzie is an outside orang-outang, and not really a pretty young lady. In fact she verges on the "battle-ax" type. But she has arms that reach from here, ... to here, or more.

"If she does grab you," Mr. Bell said, as we moved down the line of cages, "I'll take care of her. It's a funny thing about Suzie, but when she gets tough all we have to do is examine her toe nails and she quiets right down."

Mr. Bell grabbed Suzie's toe nails, and she did everything but purr.

"They all have their personal peculiarities," Mr. Bell said.

ROY BELL is one of the keepers in the house devoted to small mammals at the Zoo, and he got into the animal game 15 years ago.

"I came out of the war with one lung," he said. "And I needed a job to keep me outside. So I went to work for a fox farm."

That kept him outdoors, and before he knew it he had a little zoo of his own, and later he even went in for training bears.

"Most of the keepers at the Zoo," he said, "have had some circus experience. And, speaking of bears, they're treacherous!"

Mr. Bell isn't a big fellow, and he wears glasses and has a quiet manner, but you have a new respect for him when he tells you how he was clawed by a bear, and how Clyde Beatty, lion tamer, told him he'd rather work 40 lions than one bear.

"Bears are like women," said Mr. Bell. "You never know what they'll do next."

Working in the small mammal house at the Zoo he doesn't have to worry much about danger now, but he still has to watch out for the nip of tiny teeth as he feeds the, seemingly, most harmless ones.

"This 'Kinkajou' or honey bear," he said, "is a bad one." He pointed to a tiny bear-like animal in one of the glassed-off cages.

"Some people make pets of those," he said, "but this one is a bad little feller."

• • • •

MR. BELL says the favorites of most of the Zoo visitors to the small mammal house are the porcupines and the prairie dogs.

"They think the porcupines throw quills," he said, "but they don't. And I guess they like the prairie dogs because they are friendly, and sort of dizzy." The reference to dizzy may have been in relation to the round wire treadwheel which the dogs use for exercise.

Each of the animals has something of a personality. They all have their likes and dislikes.

The Siamese gibbon, of the ape family, yells regularly every morning at 9, with a shout which can be heard over on Sixteenth street. The mouse-deer, only 9 inches high, can polish off a pieplate full of vegetables in a day, and the husband and wifely combination of tree kangaroos spend a good deal of their time boxing together.

The Florida otter, which loves to swim, was overjoyed at being given a ball to play with last week. As Mr. Bell says, "He hasn't made any effort to bite me . . . yet."

Mr. Bell's main worry is not the animals, but the questions of the visitors.

They ask him how many times they can "skin a fox in a year." And they report daily that the armadillo is dead.

"He isn't dead," Mr. Bell assures, "he just turns over on his back, with his feet in the air, and takes it easy."

INTERIOR ANNOUNCES the appointment of Dr. Helen K. Mackintosh, of Oxford, Ohio, to the position of senior specialist in elementary education, Office of Education, and emphasizes that she has fulfilled Civil Service Commission requirements in training and experience—which is an emphasis becoming more and more noticeable in the announcements of appointments . . . With a wide experience in educational fields, Dr. Mackintosh, in her new position, will initiate and conduct studies on problems dealing with organization and supervision of elementary schools; prepare publications; act as consultant to school officials; deliver addresses; make surveys of elementary schools, and conduct elementary education conferences . . . She will begin her duties this spring.

WILLIAM GREEN says "Yes" to the A. F. G. E. legislature program. He tells the National Executive Council of the A. F. G. E. that he is "wholeheartedly" behind its aims, adding: "I will be pleased to cooperate fully, and will have our legislative representatives become immediately active in this situation, as our convention has definitely and decisively expressed itself on your proposals . . ." Little was reported about the activities of the executive council during its very recent session here. Principally, the members scanned the Federation's legislative program and discussed the progress of the membership drive. Action was taken looking to "a vigorous educational program," which would inform "the taxpayers and business interests of this country of the advantages which will accrue to them by the enactment into law of constructive employe legislation."

SEVEN EMPLOYES will retire from the Government Printing Office at the close of this month, according to H. H. Wright, chief clerk. They are: Mrs. Margaret A. Donohue, bander, 115 New York avenue northwest, 27 years' service; Kate L. Fenner, 7705 Alaska avenue northwest, proofreader, 21 years; William C. Jordan, 814 Seventh street northeast, compositor, 16 years; Maurice J. O'Connor, 1600 Monroe street northeast, foreman, 33 years; Harry W. Paine, 911 Sixth street northeast, bookbinder, 15 years; James F. Smart, 21 Michigan avenue northeast, proofreader, 36 years, and Frank A. Wilkes, 1512 B street southeast, unskilled laborer, 30 years.

TONIGHT'S HIGHLIGHT: "What will 1938 bring Federal employes?" asks the U. F. W. A. in announcing its monster mass meeting tonight in the Government Auditorium, Constitution avenue and Thirteenth street. They will present six speakers, who will attempt to answer the question. The speakers are Representative Ramspeck ("Legislation and the Government Worker"); Senator M. M. Logan ("Government Employment Standards"); Representative John W. McCormack ("The 5-Day Week"); Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach ("Higher Wages in the Government"); Representative Herbert S. Bigelow ("A Method of Appeals"), and John Brophy, director, C. I. O. ("Uncle Sam's Duty as a Model Employer"). The program begins at 8:15 p. m.; the public is invited.

ADD TASTER DEPARTMENT: Reports have been returned by blindfolded judges who were asked to identify different kinds of meat in the course of a series of studies on meat flavor conducted by the Agriculture Department in co-operation with various State experiment stations. The judges could more often identify beef and pork correctly than chicken, veal, lamb or rabbit. In other words, the special flavors and texture of beef and pork were more easily distinguished than those of other meats.

THOSE VERSATILE FOREST RANGERS: And probably U. S. Ranger John Williams, of the Klamath National Forest in California, simply regarded the whole thing as just another of his varied duties. In any event, he was sitting of a recent evening by his fireside when a Dr. Carlson, of Fort Jones, phoned in, saying he was in the midst of a tonsils operation and the light reflector had gone out. Ranger Williams hurried over in his car, rigged up a hasty extension to his car lights and the operation was completed satisfactory.

THIS WEEK'S DANCERS: Tonight—The West Virginia Society at the Raleigh Hotel. Invited are all officers and enlisted men of the Army, Navy and Marines now residing in Washington who claim West Virginia as their native State, David S. Davison, the society president, will preside; Heber H. Rice will be in charge of the dancing features. . . . The Massachusetts Society of Washington holds a formal dancing party in the main ballroom of the Wardman Park. Miss Alva Tyler is chairman of the arrangements. . . . And on Saturday evening comes the I. D. R. A.'s first big splash of the year. They dance from 10 to 1 in the large cafeteria space of the new Interior Building. The event is in observance of George Washington's birth anniversary. In the settings will be cherry trees, hatchets, American flags, colored spotlights and some people in costumes. The committee consists of Merel Sager, Mrs. Beulah Searles, James V. West, Neal Butterfield, H. Bernard Hunter, Anita Lutes, Milton Tinsley, Ian Forbes, Marion Sedberry, Henry Praeger, Evelyn Adams, Marguerite Hayes, Thomas Hampton and Ray B. Dame.

IT IS SUGGESTED that those planning to attend the Union Playhouse performance tonight at the Agriculture Auditorium arrive early, as from all indications the show will draw a full house. No tickets will be issued and no seats will be reserved for the first free show. The entire program will be as follows: Dr. Bauer and the Agriculture Orchestra; three films, "The Building of Boulder Dam," "Flood Weather," and "Stop Forest Fires;" a duet by Dan and Barbara O'Flaherty, children of Daniel O'Flaherty, of the Agriculture Department; vocal solo by Helen Robichaux; comic skit, titled "The Pick-up," with a cast as follows: Ada L. Taylor, L. B. Swick, Huberta A. Prince, Jennie J. Reid, Stella Williams, Frances E. Toms, Lee Tolar, Flora D. Lawlor, Iva Brist, Elizabeth M. Robinson, Elizabeth M. McKinnis and Helen L. Ensign. Joseph E. Hayes (G. A. O.) is master of ceremonies; Dr. Herbert Smith will open the performance and Lee H. Shugar will direct. . . .

Senators Weigh $5,000 Claim by Violator of NRA

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Claims Committee studied for the first time yesterday the question of paying Government compensation to persons imprisoned for violation of the national industry recovery act before it was invalidated by the Supreme Court.

The committee had before it a bill by Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, to pay Frederick C. Perkins, battery maker, of York, Pa., $5,000 for 18 days spent in jail while awaiting trial for allegedly violating the NRA by paying lower wages than those prescribed by a code of fair competition for the storage battery industry.

Groom No. 9 Leaves Marathon Bride in N. Y.

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—Virginia Overshiner Cogswell Bromley today reported she was on the verge of losing her ninth husband after a week-end of married life.

The Marathon bride from Georgia said Charles R. Bromley, of Atlanta, with whom she eloped to Elkton, Md., last Saturday, had excused himself to make a telephone call Monday night and neglected to return.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Jackie Cooper Survives His 'Babyhood' in Films With a Fine Measure of Adolescent Acting Ability

In "Boy of the Streets," Youthful Star Proves a Promising "High School" Actor; Annabella Must Look to Her Accent; Shakespeare in Cartoon; Subscription Play Coming to National; Billy Gilbert Booked; Notes of the Theater and Its People.

BELL.

IT TAKES an exception to prove the rule.

The truth of this old saw is sharpened in the case of Jackie Cooper, who manages to carry over into adolescence a considerable multiplication of the talents that caused him to be known as one of the most popular and most precocious of the screen's juvenile stars.

Absent from the silver sheets for too long now, Master Cooper—he is still only a youngster—returns in "Boy of the Streets" as a youthful actor with more than the ordinary promise of future greatness. Possibly not greatness, but, at least, distinction. The familiar pout is gone; in the place of a manufactured superiority with which any kid might be endowed by careful coaching and skillful direction before the cameras, there is an authentic note in young Cooper's work in this picture that no one could impart to him but himself.

This is a decided contradiction of what has happened to so many of the prodigies of the cinema. Jackie Coogan appears to have lost the vital spark that seemed to presage the stamp of genius for the greatest "baby" star that ever flashed across a screen. You don't hear much of Jackie Searle these days. Little Dickie Moore has more or less faded from the scene. What will happen to the prodigious Freddie Bartholomew remains to be seen. But Jackie Cooper's rich endowments give promise of going on indefinitely.

This was emphasized yesterday afternoon at the preview screening of the film play that will be seen on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater, beginning tomorrow. It was a pretty cocky young fellow that strutted before us in the stellar role of a picture in which Monogram may well take pride. This arrogant and tough kid came to life in the person of the growing Cooper with a fidelity that was marred by none of the usual tricks of "making big ones out of little ones," if you know what I mean. He was played with a boyish and simple naturalness that places this particular lad a little apart from his fellows.

Jackie Cooper is quite a boy now. I mean to say that at the age of 15 he has graduated from the kindergarten and primary grades of acting into the high school, as befits his years. He is not a handsome lad, but he has a splendidly shaped head, a fine mop of wavy hair that seems several shades darker than it used to be when he was Wallace Beery's tow-headed "partner," and an excellent speaking voice.

Beyond all that, he seems to have salvaged from his juvenile experience in the studios a remarkable sense of the essentials of naturalistic miming. On the strength of his performance in the role of Chuck Brennan in this picture, one is tempted to prophesy that this young Cooper fellow will go farther under the Kliegs than any of the other "milk-teeth" actors who started with him from scratch—always, of course, with the possible exception of Freddie Bartholomew. There is no telling what that polished little Britisher may turn out to be in later years.

• • • •

But there is more to "Boy of the Streets" than merely the presence of a developing Jackie Cooper in the cast. It is a distinctly worthwhile picture—not a "big" picture, but one that plants itself so firmly on the foundation of a salutary lesson to all wayward youth that it may not carelessly be laughed off as "just another fillum." There is about it—not in production value, but in the soundness of its premise—a vague suggestion of "The Devil Is a Sissy." It seems to me, however, that it has one superiority over its predecessor, in that it makes its hero his own moral monitor and causes him to bring from his own consciousness the realization that straight-living is the only way and gangsterism a hideous delusion that runs counter to every normal precept, even of a kid reared in the slums and thrown under the influences that fill the country's prisons. As I say, you won't see a "big" picture in "Boy of the Streets," but you will see an uncommonly valuable one.

• • • •

There is an engaging yarn unspooled in "The Baroness and the Butler," too. That was viewed by a slight majority of the guys and gals of the drama desks preceding the Cooper item, and at the opposite end of town—not that it matters.

"The Baroness and the Butler" has as its costars William "My Man Godfrey" Powell and the one-name actress, Annabella, recently imported to Hollywood to make her first appearance in an American film in this release. Annabella's foreign accent still could be cut with a large and dull knife, but she is a beautiful young thing who plays with effectiveness and charm even when confronted with the necessity of matching William Powell's peculiar facility for this sort of thing. These two are surrounded by a cast that marks a high level of uniform excellence. Among the supporting players are such veterans as Henry Stephenson, Helen Westley, Joseph Schildkraut, J. Edward Bromberg and Lynn Bari.

There have been two endings for this pictured romance of a butler, who became a member of Parliament, and the daughter of the Prime Minister, who became his wife. The suspicion will not down that the Twentieth Century-Fox high command chose the less logical and believable of the two.

If Annabella had been in the gallery of either house of the American Congress, instead of the gallery of the House of Deputies in Budapesth, she would have been tossed out on her charming ear before she could have finished the first line of the speech that marks the climax of the play.

Or maybe I'm wrong. Perhaps you'd better go to Loew's Capitol tomorrow and make up your own mind on this not too vital point.

Edmond O'Brien and members of the cast of "Julius Caesar," current at the National, will be luncheon guests today at the King-Smith Playhouse. Mr. O'Brien was a guest player there during the production of "Liliom," presented last season, and will sit in on a rehearsal of "Uncle Vanya," this year's first King-Smith production, to be offered publicly on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, February 24, 25 and 26.

Comes a card dated February 15, reading as follows: "My dear Mr. Bell—After seeing 'Snow White,' I have decided that at last we have a means of adequately presenting the plays of Shakespeare. Think what could be done with 'Midsummer Night's Dream,' 'Hamlet,' 'Macbeth,' 'Romeo and Juliet,' 'King Lear,' etc., etc. We would be rid of the obtruding personalities of live actors and our classical ideals of the characters would be made to live. I hope I live long enough to see this come to pass. Sincerely yours," (Signed) CLAUS BOGEL, Library of Congress."

Mr. Bogel might have something there, but it would be placing a tremendous responsibility upon the shoulders of Walt Disney and his crew of craftsmen, whose personalities might obtrude even more conspicuously than those of some of the Katharine Cornells, John Gielguds and Maurice Evanses. There are a few who believe this to be true, even in the case of "Snow White."

For those who plan their holidays in advance, it may be of interest to know that when Cornelia Otis Skinner presents "Edna, His Wife," in the National Theater next week, there will be an extra matinee on Tuesday, Washington's Birthday. That will be an extra performance, over and above the regular Wednesday and Saturday mats.

JACKIE COOPER,
one of the few child actors who has carried his ability to portray character over into his adolescence. Jackie, grown to husky youth, appears in the stellar role of "Boy of the Streets," new Monogram production, opening its first-run engagement in the Capital at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater tomorrow.

So now you know what you can do with that extra money that has been burning the hole in your wallet, handbag, coin purse or whatever it is you carry the "spare" in.

And speaking of the National, "I Am My Youth," the new play to be unveiled here on Monday night, February 28, and the remainder of the week, of course, will be presented under the auspices of the American Theater Society of Washington and thus will be available to its subscribers at the usual special discount. This is the play about Shelley, in which the principal roles will be impersonated by Frank Lawton, Linda Watkins and Charles Waldron. It was written by Ernest Pascal and Edwin Blum, whose recent creations have been dedicated to the celluloids.

A comedy treat from Hollywood will be proffered local theatergoers by the Earle Theater management the week of Friday, February 25, when Billy Gilbert—recently seen on the screen in "Rosalie," "100 Men and a Girl," "Broadway Melody" and other major features—will headline the vaudeville bill in person. Mr. Gilbert, you will remember, is the hefty gentleman with the funny sneeze.

Noted Diseuse To Open Week Here Monday

Cornelia Otis Skinner Will Be Seen at National; Other New Bills.

"Edna His Wife," a solo-drama adapted from the best-selling novel by Margaret Ayer Barnes, will bring Cornelia Otis Skinner to the National Theater next Monday night for a week's engagement. This una-drama is heralded as the most pretentious in which its single star has appeared and boasts a complete production, with settings by Donald Oenslager and musical score by Elliott Jacoby. Miss Skinner already is known to local theatergoers as the theater's foremost diseuse by virtue of her exceptional performances in such elaborate works as "The Wives of Henry VIII," "The Empress Eugenie," "Mansion On the Hudson," and others. "Edna His Wife" is said to surpass them all. There will be matinees on Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday.

The principal screen attraction at the Earle Theater next week will be "Gold Is Where You Find It," a First National Technicolor production in which the pivotal roles are played by George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, Margaret Lindsay, John Litel, Tim Holt, Sidney Toler, Maroni Olsen, Claude Rains, the late Robert McWade, Barton MacLane and a host of others. The story is an epic one of the war between the hydraulic gold miners and the wheat growers in the Sacramento Valley in California in the late 1800s. On the stage the vaudeville bill will be headlined by Will Osborne and "slide music" orchestra and specialists.

Following the current engagement of Cecil B. De Mille's production of "The Buccaneer," at Loew's Palace Theater, the attraction will be "A Yank at Oxford," made in England, in which Robert Taylor is starred in his best role to date. In the supporting cast will be found such artists as Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan, Edmund Gwenn, Vivien Leigh, Tully Marshall, Claude Gillingwater and a large number of others. The story is a fresh and amusing one, to which a considerable number of British players lend a note of authenticity. Short screen subjects and a new issue of "News of the Day" will round out the program, beginning Friday.

Jackie Cooper, one of the precocious youngsters of the cinema, will return to the local screen tomorrow as star of "Boy of the Streets," at the Metropolitan Theater. This is a subject that is said to outdo "Dead End" in its depiction of such youngsters as gave rise to its title. Master Cooper, now a stalwart adolescent, is said to do the best work of his youthful career in this Monogram production. The bill will be completed by the usual short-reel subjects and a new issue of the full, composite news-reel.

William Powell and the recently imported Annabella will be the pictured co-stars of "The Baroness and the Butler," announced as chief feature of the screen bill at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The story concerns a butler who was elected to Parliament and then made the mistake of falling in love with his boss' daughter. A strong cast will be seen in support of the principals. On the vaudeville portion of the new entertainment, the stage bill will be headlined by Emery Deutsch and his orchestra, assisted by an imposing group of specialists and that stuttering comic, Roscoe Ates, famous on both stage and screen.

"Snow White," as goes without saying, will be retained for a second week at RKO-Keith's Theater. This Disney feature-length technicolor production in cartoon form has attracted record-breaking patronage to the Fifteenth street house since its opening last Friday and bids fair to continue as a reigning attraction for many more weeks to come. It is in a class by itself as unique and irresistible entertainment.

Allan Jones, Judy Garland, Reginald Owen, Fannie Brice, Billie Burke, Lynne Carver and Reginald Gardiner, in association with a dozen famous teams from the old "two-a-day" vaudeville, will make their reappearance on F street tomorrow, when "Everybody Sing" will resume its downtown run as foremost feature of the new week's bill at the Columbia Theater. "Everybody Sing" is a musicalized yarn of a fabulous theatrical family that affords a continuous flow of comedy and tuneful melodies.

Edgar Bergen and his extraordinary little wooden partner, Charlie McCarthy, will headline the short-subject bill at the Trans-Lux Theater next week, beginning tomorrow, in "Two Boobs in a Million." Other abbreviated camera subjects of featured importance will include "Donald Duck's Self Control," "Highlights of London" and the Pictorial Review. The bill will be based on the usual newsreel coverage of the world.

Beginning Sunday, and continuing for the full week, "Naughty Marietta," recognized as one of the screen's foremost musical productions, will be revived as major feature of the bill at the Little Theater. Jeannette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy are co-starred in this picture, with Frank Morgan, Douglas Dumbrille, Cecilia Parker, Akim Tamiroff and others of equal note in prominent supporting roles.

At the Gayety Theater next week, beginning with the customary Sunday matinee performance, the offering will be a new burlesque production bearing the title of "Temptations." Featured in this revue will be Jack Diamond and Maxie Furman, two clever eccentric comedians, and Winnie Garrett, one of the beauties of the circuit. Others in the cast will include Alma Mabien, Ethel De Veau, George Murray, Lew Denny, Al Kilbride and Dudley Douglas. An extra added attraction will be Valda, sepia star of Cooper's "Black and White Revue."

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 16.—Martha Raye, who's about to throw the bull in "Tropic Holiday," has been a godsend to the luxury salesmen. After shaking the country with her vitality, sex appeal and hey hey, she's turned into one of our best dressed girls. She recently went on a shopping spree of Schiaparelli and Frederick hats. Martha has one of the best figures in town.

HEDDA HOPPER.

Now she's sporting a ruby and diamond bracelet, made in the shape of every instrument in the band, and with a ring to match. That's a far cry from the engagement ring given her by Buddy Westmore; you had to have a magnifying glass to find the stone.

"It's got to be love to wear anything like that," was Martha's comment. But her mink coat which she wears morning, noon and night, caps the climax. She said: "I always felt I'd arrive if I had a mink coat. Well, I've got the coat."

Dorothy Lamour's not wasting time. She went to a preview with Randy Scott. Danced at the Troc with Rudy Vallee the next night, and the following night had a date with Charlie McCarthy and Edgar Bergen.

After her announcement that she'd retire in a year to have a baby, she now gets a big, fat juicy bonus after each picture. And while she's been told that she cannot, I predict she'll be singing at the Cocoanut Grove when her band-leading husband, Herbie Kay, arrives there next month.

Edgar Bergen, who's had dozens of offers to do a daily comic strip on Charlie McCarthy, says just as soon as he can get Charlie out of tails and top hat and into Skinny Dugan's old clothes, he'll start.

It's getting monotonous saying: "David Selznick has done it again." But that's just what's happened with "Tom Sawyer." Tom Kelly uncovered the sweetest, shy smile since Gary Cooper.

The Cave sequence has all the terror of "The Hurricane" and the fire in "Old Chicago." May Robson was given her best part. What I'm trying to say is, "Tom Sawyer" is in the bag for Selznick.

What a welcome they gave Bill Powell at the preview of "The Baroness and the Butler!" If diplomats could diplomat as gracefully as Bill, and prime ministers were as nice as Henry Stephenson, we wouldn't have so many foreign entanglements.

Bill was delighted with his reception, and on the way out said: "If that's the way you feel about me, I ought to take a vacation after every picture."

Isa Miranda, about to make her first picture, has high-hatted all her Italian friends, only because, for the past six months, she's learned to speak English on Paramount's time and money. I've never heard of any foreign country paying our stars to learn their language.

Gracie Allen is having cook trouble. Picture the look on her face when the maid served the wrong cereal for breakfast! The cook doesn't live there any more.

Civic Theater

THE CAST.

Gladys ..... Bunnie Skinner
Malcolm Garth-Bander ..... F. Cowles Strickland
Miss Garth-Bander ..... Maud Howell Smith
Dudley ..... Donald Sider
Claude ..... Richard Walsh
Frankie ..... Margaret Johnston
Roger ..... Harry MacArthur
Bert ..... Selma Klein

Deviating from its custom of presenting "significant" plays, but still adhering to its rule of producing in Washington only worthy stage pieces never before seen in the Capital, the Civic Theater last night, in the Wardman Park Theater, offered the most hilarious item it has so far brought to the boards in Gerald Savory's "George and Margaret," still a reigning success in London, where it has run for months.

"George and Margaret" is a domestic farce that belongs in the same category with Noel Coward's "Hay Fever" and Dodie Smith's "Call It A Day." It bristles with bright talk and is buoyed by enlivening situations that hinge upon youthful impetuosity, romantic alliances and surprising mesalliances. It is deftly humorous, quickened by lively impulses and wholly frantic.

The comedy was played last evening in the Civic's best manner by a group of its best performers before one of the largest and most enthusiastic audiences of the season. This is well, for "George and Margaret" is the Civic Theater's "benefit for itself," the proceeds of which will be devoted to further expansion of the commendable work done by this comparatively new organization during the brief period since its inception.

First honors last night went unequivocally to F. Cowles Strickland, director of the company, who assumed the role of Malcolm Garth-Bander, with that droll sense of dry humor that somehow brought back memories of the late William Hodge and Sol Smith Russell. His preeminence was shared by Maud Howell Smith, one of the foremost of Washington's resident actresses, in the role of his distraught wife, and Margaret Johnston, as their frank and charming daughter. A fellow member of the Fourth Estate, Harry MacArthur, was realistically Harry MacArthur, although cast as the young lover, Roger, and Harry is a likable and honorable man. Donald Sider, as Dudley, divided juvenile honors with him and Bunnie Skinner turned in her usual competent portrayal of a slightly lesser role.

The piece is staged with Broadway opulence and is heartily recommended to all who enjoy an evening of unbridled laughter and merriment.

Senator Bilbo to Speak.

Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, will speak at the monthly luncheon of Southeastern University at 12:30 p. m. today at the Washington Hotel.

Is This the Reason You Are Constipated?

If you're wondering why your bowels don't work right—stop and think about what you eat. Bread, meat, eggs and potatoes. All good nourishing foods—but all concentrated, lacking in "bulk." And you need "bulk"! Some food that forms a soft, spongy mass in the bowels—helps them move.

If it's this lack of "bulk" that's causing your constipation, Kellogg's All-Bran is just what you need. It soaks up water and softens like a sponge. And this soft mass helps your bowels move. In addition, All-Bran gives you Nature's great intestinal tonic, vitamin B1. Eat this crisp crunchy cereal every day, drink plenty of water, and enjoy happier days. All-Bran is made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

New Bill Drawn As Compromise On Pay, Hours

Second Meeting Planned.

Another meeting of the Labor Committee to consider the completed draft of the tentative bill will be called next Wednesday or Thursday, and with this draft as a basis the committee may decide at that time to commence work on the measure. It would be offered as a complete substitute for everything after the enacting clause of the Senate bill.

Once the committee agrees on and reports a bill, it would again have to run the gantlet of the House Rules Committee, which last session refused to report out a rule on the Labor Committee's last draft. Leaders are backing Mrs. Norton in her decision to circulate no petition to discharge the Rules Committee from consideration of a bill.

Face Bitter Fight.

The leadership plan is to attempt to move a bill to the floor only after the last appropriation bill has been passed in late March or early April. Leaders are facing, if possible, a more bitter fight than that which sidetracked the last House measure. Concern over the unemployment situation has cooled a broad cross section of members to wage-hour action at this time. Proposals, with substantial backing, may be advanced to adopt merely a resolution calling for a study of all factors involved, and looking to action next session.

As an alternative to the bill Mrs. Norton is having prepared, Representative Ramspeck today is expected to present an entirely new approach to the problem which he has worked out in individual conferences with members in an effort to compromise the present impasse. Details of the Ramspeck proposal will not be made public until after he has laid it before the Labor Committee.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Concert by the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall last night; Hans Kindler, conductor; Nikolai Berezovski, guest conductor; Mischa Elman, soloist. Program: Symphony No. 1 (Berezovski), Violin Concerto in G minor, Op. 12, No. 1 (Vivaldi), Symphony in A major (Mozart), Violin Concerto in E minor (Mendelssohn), Rumanian Rhapsody No. 2 in D major (Enescu).

New and old compositions were neighbors on the pleasing program offered last night by the National Symphony Orchestra, music written as recently as 1925 and as remotely as the beginning of the eighteenth century. The contemporary work was the Symphony No. 1 by Nikolai Berezovski, the young Russian-American composer-violinist, who gave his own authoritative reading thereof, and the classical representative was the G minor violin concerto by Antonio Vivaldi with Mischa Elman as the expertly suave interpreter.

Mr. Berezovski's work is a symphony in the same sense that Ezra Pound's five decads of cantos are an epic poem. That is to say, the symphonic form has been so unconventionally handled as to be but faintly recognizable, and a better designation for it would be a symphonic rhapsody, so poetic is its emotional impulse and so slight is the development of the contained ideas. Its informality, however, is no detriment to the freshness and originality of the music which makes a vital impact upon the imagination. The ideas are interesting and forcefully expressed with a deftness of instrumentation which suggests that the composer is well versed in the technique of Rimski-Korsakov.

It is always and advantage to hear a new work directed by the composer, for one is then certain that one is receiving impressions at first hand, unaffected by transmission through another mind. Mr. Berezovski conducted with a sincerety that clarified his intentions unmistakably, and the National Symphony players responded with an alertness that must have gratified him. The audience approved the work in no uncertain way, not damning it with faint applause, but recalling the composer three times.

Hans Kindler took over the remainder of the concert, beginning with an admirable collaboration with Mischa Elman in the restrained and polished performance of the Vivaldi concerto. From that he proceeded to a finely proportioned and delicately detailed reading of Mozart's early symphony in A major. This charming and ingratiating work is too seldom heard, probably because of our tendency to concentrate upon a composer's masterpieces at the expense of his less important utterances.

Mischa Elman, at the peak of his violinistic skill and drawing his golden tone with a maximum of eloquence, was a careful stylist in his treatment of the two concerti. Dignity and poise characterized his reading of Vivaldi in the classic manner of phrasing; his effortless command of technique subordinated skill to plasticity of line and beauty of tone. Brilliance he reserved for the Mendelssohn concerto, which he imbued with romantic fervor. Hackneyed as this work is through incessant use by violinists of all degrees of competence, it took on new life under his persuasive hands.

Dr. Kindler closed the concert with the second Rumanian rhapsody of George Enescu, who uses with such evident affection the folk themes of his native country. Less familiar than its companion piece in A major, the second rhapsody is a more subtle and beautiful work.

New dress uniforms, trim and blue, are in vogue for the Army. These flying soldiers displayed the five types of dress attire, which will become compulsory in the fall, at Bolling Field. Lieut. Col. W. O. Ryan (left), field commander, is shown in dress uniform with cape, which may be worn with any of the five. The others, left to right, are Capt. H. M. Turner, in special evening dress (tails, dark blue coat and trousers, white vest, black tie), the gold braid showing he is an aide to the President; First Lieut. W. E. Hall, in mess attire, an informal evening dress; First Lieut. Ralph Rhudy, in full dress (saber can be fitted to belt for parade, and First Lieut. J. G. Fowler, in dress uniform (no belt). Trouser stripes in the Air Corps are gold and blue.

Kennedy Scores Miss Perkins' Maritime Stand

Maritime

but a showdown is expected after he has talked with the latter.

Kennedy, referring yesterday to Miss Perkins' "strange argument" against the mediation plan, said:

"It is said to be 'premature' to put into operation machinery designed to prevent strikes and lockouts in an industry which in ten months of 1937 lost aproximately 1,000,000 man-hours of work by strikes and lockouts.

"It is said to be 'premature' to act to bring order to a business where in disorder during the last year adversely affected the business of every port in the United States.

"This legislation is not regarded and will not be regarded as 'premature' by the American people simply because it is called 'premature' by those who will always so regard it as long as there is a chance of preventing its passage."

"A Few Years Hence."

Secretary Perkins had told the committee that mediation legislation might be justified a "few years" hence, after the marine workers were fully organized and collective bargaining was an established and accepted practice.

"Investigation and experience," Kennedy told the committee in answer to that, "convinces the commission that discipline and the responsibility of maritime labor and the co-relative obligations of maritime employers must be established at the earliest possible moment and not in a 'few years' hence.

"To tolerate present conditions and to allow the present chaotic situation to continue without determined and courageous efforts to bring about proper conditions in the field of maritime labor would in our opinion invite the complete destruction of the American merchant marine."

At the outset, Chairman Kennedy reminded the committee the American taxpayers have a large stake in the subsidized merchant marine.

"The Maritime Commission estimates," he said, "that 57 per cent of every dollar paid out under the eight long-term operating subsidy agreements presently effective, or $4,878,630 annually, is expended for wages and subsidies of officers and crews."

"It is clear that an expenditure in this amount of Government funds cannot be justified unless it results in having the ships which make up our merchant marine manned by competent and contented seamen.

"The proposed extension of the railway labor act to the shipping industry is designed to bring about an efficient, orderly and dependable system of marine transportation by substituting mediation and arbitration for the disorderly and destructive strikes, lockouts, and other labor disturbances which so seriously handicap American sea service at the present time.

"It is fundamental that transportation on sea or land is of its very nature a service which must be stable to be successful. The stability of transportation service is the one security of transportation workers.

"The public will not patronize an inefficient, unreliable transportation system, and if the public (having available efficient and reliable foreign-flag service) does not patronize American services, then the services must fail and the workmen lose their jobs."

Referring to the "complete fallacy" of Miss Perkins' argument that sailors and dock workers are not fully organized, Kennedy pointed out there are organizations of each on both coasts.

"I submit," he said, "that employes who have been able in the past few months to paralyze our water-borne commerce by 'quickies' and sit-down strikes, employes, one of whose leaders feels so confident of discipline in union ranks that he challenges the power of Congress to enforce this legislation, stating that the employes will not 'accept' it, is sufficiently organized for legislation which seeks to substitute mediation and conciliation for the strike and the lockout."

Kennedy was referring to a recent statement by Ralph Emerson, legislative representative of the National Maritime Union (C.I.O.), who said that American martime workers "simply won't accept this legislation."

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, chairman of the Commerce Committee, said yesterday after hearing Kennedy that the committee probably would vote favorably on the mediation plan.

The Commerce Committee this morning will hear Joseph Curran, head of the National Maritime Union (C. I. O.), who has asked for a chance to reply to the "lies" told the committee Curran was a Communist.

A. U. Women to Debate.

American University Women Debaters will clash with a team from the University of Maryland this evening at 8 p. m., at the Women's Residence Hall on the campus. Miss Ella Harlee, 1753 Lamont street northwest, and Miss Carol Leise, 5409 Thirteenth street northwest, will represent the American University, debating the negative of the question, "Resolved: That the National Labor Relations Board should be empowered to compel arbitration of all industrial disputes.

Scott, Navy's 'Chute Record Holder, Suicide

Chute

street northeast. She had been sleeping with her parents because her own home was too cold, it was explained.

Mrs. Scott, married only two weeks ago at Rockville, Md., to the former jumper who has been working as a tool maker at the Navy Yard, was bewildered at his death.

"He was perfectly normal and cheerful when I left him last night," she said, "but he told me that if anything should happen to him I should take good care of Poll, the parrot. Then I told him that nothing would happen to him for 30 years."

Although he had made more than 1,000 leaps, Scott had liked to boast that the only accident in which he ever was injured was an automobile collision. He admitted, though, that some of his jumps took him perilously near death.

His 1928 record leap thrilled Washington. He bailed out above the Navy Yard and was caught by a strong wind which blew him back and forth over the city several times. After 20 minutes of helpless drifting, in which he passed within 50 feet of the Capitol dome, his parachute caught on an apartment house and he was rescued by firemen.

On another occasion a "nonsinkable" life jacket failed and he was dragged under water for 6 minutes by the chute. But he was revived by a pulmoter.

Despite occasional mishaps Scott never lost faith in parachutes. He contended it was a jumper's fault if a chute failed to open.

Scott was born in Washington in 1893. He entered the Navy Yard as an apprentice at 18 years of age and five years later joined the Navy. He was first Washington man to enlist in the World War and saw service as a submarine machinist.

In 1935 he retired from jumping and worked as a toolmaker at the Yard, with rank of aviation chief machinist's assistant. He was a member of the Naval Reserve.

Surviving are a brother, Emory S. Scott, and five sister, Mrs. S. G. Fischer, Mrs. J. J. McDermott, Mrs. L. J. Swain, Mrs. L. Polis, all of Washington, and Mrs. A. Lamento, of Philadelphia.

French Fliers Injured In Guatemalan Crash

'Take Care of Poll,' Said 'Scotty'

William Scott, who killed himself yesterday, told his wife (inset) the night before to "take care of Poll" in case anything happened. They had been friends for nine years, talking and singing opera together. When Scott walked into the house, Poll would shout, "Hey, Scotty, come here." In the morning it was "Hey, Scotty, wake up."

McNutt Will Fly Last Lap of Dash To White House

San Francisco, Feb. 16 (U.P.).—Paul V. McNutt, U. S. High Commissioner to the Philippines, suddenly canceled train reservations eastward tonight to fly to Denver tomorrow morning aboard a U. S. Army bomber, en route to Washington.

McNutt and his administrative assistant, Wayne Coy, landed here today aboard the Hawaii Clipper from Manila. McNutt is on his way to Washington to make his first personal report to President Roosevelt since he became High Commissioner less than a year ago.

While political significance has been attached to his trip, McNutt refused to answer questions regarding his plans, including whether he might be a Democratic Presidential candidate in 1940.

Building Put Ahead Of Slum Clearing

By the Associated Press.

Housing Administrator Nathan Straus, striving to get the low-cost construction program started, authorized municipalities yesterday to shelve slum-clearance programs and concentrate on building new homes.

The decision was described as an attempt to jar loose millions of dollars tied up because the housing drive has been lagging.

Congress authorized the United States Housing Authority, headed by Straus, to lend municipal agencies up to 50 per cent of the cost of providing better homes for the poor.

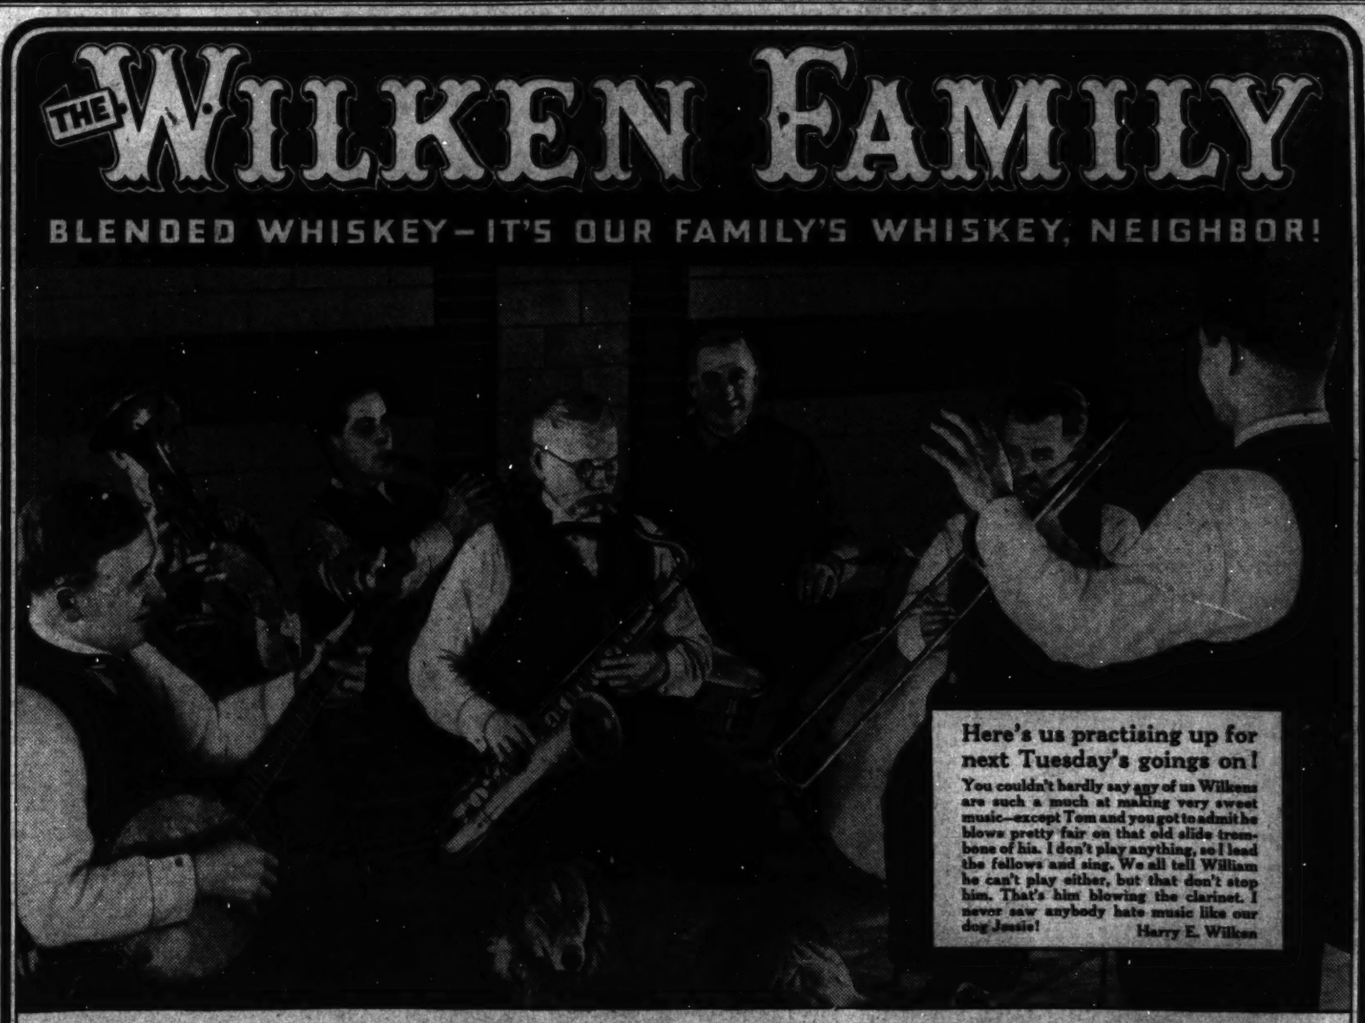
THE WILKEN FAMILY

BLENDED WHISKEY—IT'S OUR FAMILY'S WHISKEY, NEIGHBOR!



Here's us practising up for next Tuesday's goings on!

You couldn't hardly say any of us Wilkens are such a much at making very sweet music—except Tom and you got to admit he blows pretty fair on that old slide trombone of his. I don't play anything, so I lead the fellows and sing. We all tell William he can't play either, but that don't stop him. That's him blowing the clarinet. I never saw anybody hate music like our dog Jessie! Harry E. Wilken

It's the family recipe of us Wilkens who've made whiskey goodness-knows how long!

I guess I'm sizing it up rightly when I say there's mighty few folks that'll be setting alone all by theirself on this coming Tuesday. Well if you're having anybody over to your house, you'll be wanting to make sure you won't run short of drinks—and William and Tom and myself just wanted to remind you if you go and get in a goodly supply of The Wilken Family Whiskey right now while it's on your mind, you're going to hand out a treat Tuesday that'll strike one and all as being the tastiest they ever got offered. It's the personal recipe of our family—and you can just count on it there's nothing fair to middling about it—it's got a grander taste to it than you've any idea of. If you're going visiting on Washington's Birthday, why don't you take a bottle along as a real holiday gift?

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl and Boy Love Each Other, But Are Devout Members of Different Religious Faiths; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For two years I have cherished the companionship of a young man who measures up to my highest expectations in all respects save one—that of religion. We belong to different faiths, and he is deeply devoted to his church. He is working his way through school, and eventually will be a successful professional man, as he is making an enviable record for himself, and is affiliated with a well-known practicing member of his profession.

• • • •

My family and friends are divided in their opinions as to the widom of my marrying this boy. My mother approves of him highly, and I believe she thinks he would be a desirable husband for me. But my father and certain of my friends think the religious difference could not be overcome. I am sensitive to their opinions and, because I do deeply believe in the teachings of my own church, I find myself unhappy and undecided in the matter.

• • • •

Maybe "love is blind," but I doubt that it could remain blind to the family problems which religious differences would invite. I have wondered if, in fairness to this boy—who says he will never marry outside his church—I should tell him what is in my heart. I can imagine a married couple would have enough problems to deal with without having religious conflicts added to their worries. I would appreciate your opinion and hope it will serve to put me on the right track.

MARY ELLEN.

Be True to Conviction.

DEAR MARY ELLEN: Since one's sincerely entertained religious belief (when one is so fortunate as to possess such belief) is the very keystone and mainspring of one's personality and character, it is virtually impossible to go against it without demoralizing oneself completely. Life loses anchorage, purpose and direction for the person who makes compromise with convictions that are as much a part of himself as the marrow in his bones. Here is a case where your emotions are in conflict with your governing intellect, and it seems to me you have managed, nevertheless, to study your problem through very sensibly, and to reach conclusions that are sound, though painful to contemplate and to act upon.

• • • •

Obviously, you should be frank in telling the boy "what is in your heart" concerning the issue of religious difference, which seldom can be completely reconciled. As you say, the average married couple has enough problems, of social, emotional and economic kinds, to deal with without adding the almost insuperable problem of pronounced religious difference. Such a disparity in fundamental viewpoint on one of the most vital aspects of life reaches its climactic point of conflict when children appear on the scene—born to deeply religious parents whose formal patterns of worship are at marked variance. Each parent, appreciating how much his particular brand of religion has meant to him, sincerely convinced it is the one which yields the highest spiritual dividends, usually is conscience-driven to bestow those benefits upon his offspring. The family is split asunder on the very plank which should have been its point of closest unity.

• • • •

No outsider can ever be of specific assistance to you in promoting a final, irrevocable decision in this matter. It must be threshed out between your two selves. What your father or your mother or your friends may think about it isn't half so important as what you and he may be able to agree upon. If, after reasonable and candid discussion, each of you feels he would be going contrary to the best and sturdiest instincts of his nature in forswearing his religion on the altar of human love, then you had better renounce each other forthwith. M. H.

• • • •

Fiance Lack Gallantry.

DEAR MARY HAYWORTH: My fiance, who lives out of town, regularly writes me twice each week, and yet he invariably neglects to remember me with even so much as a card on such sentimental anniversaries as a birthday or Valentine's Day, which hurts my feelings. But on the other hand, he once traveled by car in miserable weather for two days and two nights in order to spend six hours with me.

• • • •

I hate to give him up, as we love each other, but I would rather do that than go through life as his wife feeling neglected for want of thoughtful little attentions and remembrances. What do you think is the matter with him? What do you advise me to do?

FOREIGN GIRL.

• • • •

DEAR FOREIGN GIRL: I daresay your fiance is a man with a practical turn of mind who grew up in a household where no notice was taken of birthdays, and where no effort was made to give artistic expression to underlying sentiment. That he is a creature of habit is indicated by his writing you regularly and faithfully twice each week, rain or shine. Instead of getting hurt by his unintentional neglect, and nursing your resentment, it would be far better to put your imagination to work devising winning ways and means of training him in the gentle art of graceful courtship.

• • • •

Since you are deeply in love with each other and engaged to be married, why not become yourself the pace-setter in the matter of anniversary and holiday remembering? Send him an appropriate gift or card for St. Valentine's Day, or for Easter, or for his birthday. Remind him that such-and-such a date is the anniversary of the day you met, or the day you became engaged, and tell him you are expecting the Queen's necklace or an emerald as big as a goose-egg, or at the very least, a decorated postcard, in happy commemoration of the event. Tell him he's wise and wonderful and divine and fine, but, darn it all, he forgets to be gallant, and that lacerates a lady's feelings. If he makes plans to visit you at Easter, remind him that he's to bring a bunch of violets, or anyway, a lone carnation for your lapel, or you're going to sulk all day.

• • • •

It would be the height of folly, and the extreme of capricious willfulness, to toss this mutual love onto the ash heap, simply because your faithful, literal minded suitor hasn't the discernment to realize you are pining away for a highflown brand of wooing. On the other hand, it will be good for both of you if you can school him in romantic gesturing. If you don't get him in the habit of making each gestures in your direction, some other woman with more subtlety and imagination may capture his fancy by doing just that. The average man likes to make poetic obeisance to a lady, if only he knows how, and if only he feels absolutely sure she won't think him a fool for so doing. He likes to think of himself as being quite the beau, and however much he may overtly pish-tush it, he is grateful to the lady who beguiles him into the role. M. H.

Sentimental and Pretty, the New Style Trends

Feminine and alluring and in keeping with the current trend for prettiness and sentiment, is the black lace evening ensemble above. Note unusual treatment of bodice and gracefully full skirt. Topped with the long-sleeved bolero, it becomes a distinctive dinner dress.

Back to "bicycle days" and definitely feminine, the straw sailor with snood veil and flower trim, designed by Rilla Marie, is equally appropriate to accompany suits or frocks.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Feb. 16.

THIS IS the getting season for our dapper and obsequious gents in the night-club business, or do you prefer the old American "racket?" Lent will soon sift ashes on their slides, and anyway, by mid-February the high-voltage spenders are bored ossified with such dens, or else are inhaling Southern sun through every pore. So it behooves the spiffer saloon-keepers to do a frantic promotion job, or else peer gloomily at empty pews.

ALICE HUGHES.

And the boys are behooving like mad, at present. Of course, the big Broadway places, like Bill Rose's joint, or the International Casino, present huge and costly shows consisting of unveiled baby dolls, and these lads just open the doors and smirk hopefully, counting on the lure of the flesh.

It's another cayuse with the bosses of the small, expensive and exclusive deadfalls on the East Side. They offer nothing but bands, food, drink and super-snobbery. When these fail to stampede the ermine coats, they must try "stunts." For instance, the Merry-Go-Round Club offers a stunt dreamed by a playboy. A group of the town's golden girls are to invite the lads of their choice to "Turnabout Party"—they to call for the beaux, buy them orchids, wine and dine them, and take them home at a decent hour, and what an elastic term is decent! Goody, what fun! Marion Pierce will lug her theatrical boss, J. J. Shubert, while Gertrude Niesen will bring Pancho, who both rhumbas and warbles—sometimes simultaneously. The woman pays, literally. Jolly no end, what?

• • • •

The astute Sherm Billingsley, of ye olde Stork Club, has all the subdebs, debs and postdebs fighting fang and claw for toy balloons on Sunday nights. Each rubber bubble carries a sordid banknote, sometimes as much as $100. They need it like Morgan needs a nickel, but it's so cute! Audrey Gray caught $74 and took a ski trip! Thus youth and beauty struggle for hilarity ere this poor world explodes and spatters baloney all over the cosmos!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Feminine jury service here continues to scuff up dust. Lots of the girls like it, but Judge Stackell hit a mean snag when trying to line up a panel to try one De Rennzio who shot a gendarme. Mrs. Fay Cohen was just about to qualify for her niche in her pantheon as first forelady of a jury in a capital case here, when she suddenly remembered that a pal of hers is a sister of the murdered cop. So she begged out, and now we have a nice niche for rent, with no bidders to date. Don't weaken, girls!

Who remembers when performances of the opera "Salome" called out the militia with blinders and horse blankets? I, for one. But no more, and the other night the Australian soprano, Marjorie Lawrence, scored sensationally as the veil-dancer before Herod. The new streamlined sort of singing beauty, Marj goaled the customers, cash and critical, both with her refined wriggling and her lovely trilling. Melbourne papers, please copy.

I hear that early summer will see the passing of a very clever woman from the local editorial scene. She is Katherine Angell (or Mrs. E. B. White), who has long been the real power at the New Yorker magazine, though many others took bows. Her husband is the brilliant gent who usually writes the amazing "Talk of the Town" page, though he's away now.

Fancy sparklers for suit-coat lapels are shimmering away at the uptown shoppeys. One projects a gold-and-purple thistle for clip or brooch. Other such botanical and bird-life frippery comes in the guise of birds, beasts, flowers and fruits to shine up that new suit—I hope. My pet is a spread-winged dragon fly of synthetic tourmalines and rubies. What a flash—and I do hope I can get a suit to match it. Just as I have the wrist—where's the diamond bracelet?

Modern Twist Puzzles Women In 'Caesar' Cast

By Nancy Archibald.

PLAYING "Julius Caesar" in modern dress did not turn out to be so radical a move for the only two women in the cast, Miss Helen Craig, who plays the part of Calpernia, Caesar's wife, and Miss Muriel Brassler, who plays Portia, the wife of Brutus.

"When we were first rehearsing," Miss Craig explained, "we were greatly disturbed about what the modern dictator's wife should wear, but in the process of shaping the play the director cut the women's parts until their only scenes were in the evening and early morning. This required flowing negligees, quite classical in style."

The modern twist given the play caused both actresses to compare their positions in Roman times to what they would be today. "I was highly indignant when Brutus dismissed me directly matters of importance arose and neither I nor Caesar's wife were permitted to take part in important matters," Miss Brassler declared. "Today I'm sure a dictator's wife would assist her husband actively in his career rather than stay at home to comfort and amuse him during his moments of leisure."

"Of course," Miss Craig took up the argument, "women did have a more retiring role in the days of the Roman Empire, but I notice Shakespeare's lines are eternal when he describes the manner in which women get their way. Since Caesar is the man of action, the soft, helpless, clinging creature whose manner is alluring controls the mighty dictator with a silken cord. As usual in methods of winning a favor from a man, the approach must vary according to the individual. Therefore, the honorable Brutus, the intelectual Brutus, can only be reached by a mental appeal. His wife strikes out for the modern ideal of marital relationship, arguing that she must know her husand's secrets and give him counsel because she is his partner, that it is part of her job to help him."

Miss Brassler laughed and added, "I guess the modern girl could take a tip or two from Shakespeare. Women are always confronted with the problem of gaining some point from a man, a father, brother or husband. Since they have gained so much independence they have become careless. The result has been this wave of femininity. Books on charm and influence are selling like hotcakes. I know that I'm going to study Shakespeare more diligently."

The Eternally Feminine Back In Spring Styles

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

ROMANCE and sentiment prevail in spring clothes. With the return to femininity and sweetness glamour for the nonce has been relegated to the background. Taking a cue from other generations, women once more are aiming to look pretty and lovely, as well as smart. Sleek, cold styling is conspicuous for its absence.

In all of the openings, fashion shows and all through the market, in New York, I was impressed by the desperate attempt to get women of this machine age back to old-fashioned feminine clothes. True these have been modernized, but the influence of other days is very apparent.

Another interesting feature about all of this—the women have immediately accepted the trend and are already appearing in costumes stressing femininity, quaint charm and daintiness.

Fabrics Are Softer.

What are these new-old features which have taken the fashion world by storm? First, fabrics are soft and manipulated in stylings to accent this idea; printed patterns, whether large or small, are definitely feminine in design, rather than just chic; veils are everywhere and draped on hats of all types; jewelry was never so popular, with numerous pieces accompanying every costume, hats are delightfully flower-trimmed and even in the realm of the strictly tailored versions, chin straps abound. A touch of pastel pink, pale yellow or baby blue is noted on almost every black or navy ensemble, skirts are full and graceful, bodices are well-fitted, lingerie accents such as lace, pique bands and pipings and flutings of cotton and linen trim frocks and suits.

Blouses of the feminine type are in style again, both to complement suits and to be worn with skirts (a popular spring costume); suits and coats, even when in the simple tailored realm, are softly styled; ornaments and gadgets are a necessary part of every daytime and evening ensemble.

Tinted Gloves Appear.

Shoes for spring and summer are feminine in styles and colors rather than just smart; lace has returned to the mode with a vengeance and is much in evidence in both day and evening clothes. Coy little jackets top simple dresses and furnish the basis for accessory themes.

It is a new woman which fashion has presented to the style picture for spring 1938. And, it is as pleasing to the men who view these new style vagaries, we understand, as it is to the world of fastidious women who faithfully follow trends and influences.

New Neckwear.

Neckwear is destined to be feminine and fussy for spring. Lace inserts, frills, ruffles, pleats or embroidery will be seen in the neckwear worn with the most tailored suits. One interesting new neckwear item introduced features a removable frill, which may be snapped off or on a tailored vestee.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Who Can Take It?

SOUTHERN girls, it seems, are getting good and tired of having the label "Southern belle" pinned on them in offices. Several have protested against statements recently quoted in this column from certain employers who charged that Dixie womanhood was too "man-conscious" in the business world and couldn't take it as well as could Middle Westerners when it came to hard work.

These employers, say the Southern protesters, are unfairly judging all Southern girls by a few professional Southern belles they have encountered. The really high type, intelligent Southern girls, they say, have as much industry, professional dignity and stamina as girls from any other section. In support of this they point to the Southern women doing outstanding work in important Government posts, to the many Southern girls functioning efficiently in governmental offices.

These girls say the silly appellation of "Southern belle" seems to dog them in their careers. They maintain this is all due to a preconceived idea on the part of the public, and that they, no more than girls from any other section, should be judged by a few weaklings and exhibitionists. They further insist they got the worst of it in discussion in this column. For that reason the conductor of the column herewith attempts to set forth her own views on the question, "Which can take it best—East, West, North or South?"

Sectional Cartoons.

Like everybody else, I carry in my mind a standardized picture of haughty Eastern, raucous Western and goggle-eyed Southern girls. I have the universal tendency to classify people in sectional molds.

Nevertheless, I know this is all sheer sentimentality and mental laziness. While sectional background does reveal itself in the more superficial phases of personality, yet when you get inside of people as far as the backbone, sectionalism loses its importance.

Most Middle Westerners have a strong heritage of stamina from pioneer ancestors. Anyone who saw Mari Sandoz, author of "Old Jules," on her recent visit to Washington, can well understand what that heritage is. In the slight figure of this woman, who as a child knew frontier rigors that cause most of us to shudder in reading of them, you sense a thread of iron that will never be broken, a spirit so sinewy it will endure forever.

And yet I have seen much of that same spirit in Southern women whose indomitable courage has risen above an oppressive Reconstruction heritage, in New Englanders who still had the strength of the Plymouth Rock in their make-up and in New Yorkers who have won their spurs fighting in the canyons of Manhattan.

"Vein of Iron."

I have puzzled a great deal over what constitutes stamina in the business office—for that matter, in life itself. I used to think it was largely physical and that all job applicants could prove their mettle with health certificates. But some of the softest working girls I have known have had superb health; some of the most untiring and ambitious ones were frail of body.

Possibly the most apt phrasing of the answer to the question has come from Miss Gordon Holmes, London bank official and one of England's foremost business women. What women need in the business world, said Miss Holmes on a recent visit to the United States, is not so much physical health as "inner vitality," stamina of spirit. If she were an employer, she indicated, that is what she would look for.

That, of course, is the same thing doctors hope to see in patients who are going on the operating table. It is the thing that makes a good soldier or an unconquerable human being. It has a physiological basis, but it is also bound up closely with such abstractions as pride, honor, ambition, courage. Being from East, West, North or South has little to do with whether or not you have it. Your glands and your ideals have a lot more.

Twinkling Heels.

Paris (U.P.).—Heels of shoes also are receiving special color treatment. Twinkling rhinestone ones for pastel satin or brocaded evening slippers will add sparkle to the dance. Polka-dotted crepe de chine, as well as heel-and-instep color contrasts to match gowns, are promised for new spring shoes. Another match will be vari-hued stitches bursting on gowns and footwear like minature fireworks.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF IT ISN'T one thing, it's another . . . If sitting is not to blame for your hip problem, the way you stand is! Sitting can add to your hipline at the rate of one inch per year, but every time you stand up can make those humps on the sides of the hips more pronounced.

Over at Elizabeth Arden's de luxe gymnasium, those hip humps are considered the usual penalty of poor posture. More often than not, the bulge is the result of continual contraction of the wrong muscles in standing. Instead of rolling or kicking for the hipline, you adopt a program of posture correction to smooth out the bulge.

Posture, according to Miss Mildred Wedekind, of the gymnasium, is what is wrong with most measurements. Shadowgraphs of most figures show a fatty condition at the nape of the neck, bulges on the lower rib cage, humps on the hips, sway-back and wings on the shoulders. These shadowgraphs show very clearly the relation between these defects and habitually bad posture.

Compare Your Snapshots.

You may not be able to have a shadowgraph taken and in that case Miss Wedekind suggests snapshots, preferably side views, taken in your bathing suit. Be sure to stand in your usual posture—don't pose for the picture! Then, in a few weeks, have some more snapshots taken and compare the two sets. This check on your progress should show a marked improvement in your figure. Another check is to keep a record of your measurements before and after you begin posture correction.

A few weeks can make several inches' difference in your measurements. If you doubt that posture makes the figure, take your measurements with the body stretched tall and then again with the chest caved in and the midriff slumped. You will find that the bust measurement is smaller in poor posture, and that the waistline is much larger. The better your habitual posture is, the worse you can make your measurements by slumping—but that is something you don't want to cultivate!

Learn Your "Tuck-In."

Whatever your posture faults, the Arden program of correction begins with matwork, in which you learn the "tuck-in position." Here it is:

POSITION: Lie on the back, feet together, knees flexed and apart, arms stretched upward on the floor with palms up and arms relaxed. Have hands about shoulder level.

MOVEMENT: The "tuck under" is a tipping up of the hipbones to bring the hollow of the back down on the mat. Pull the tummy muscles tight. The chest must be high and the shoulders flat. Repeat the movement sevedal times to get the feeling of the "tuck under." Now, extend the arms upward on the floor to their full length and slowly return to shoulder level. At the same time, keep the hips under, the entire back flat on floor, and pinch the shoulders together.

In the "bend," remain in the position given for the first exercise. Bend alternate knees against the chest, straighten the leg in air, return to chest, and then to first position.

POSITION: Still on back on floor as for tuck under, hips tucked under, flexed knees wide apart on floor.

MOVEMENT: Have arms stretched high overhead on floor, palms up. Slide the backs of the arms downward on floor, at the same time lowering the legs. Keep the knees wide apart and slide the heels down on the mat. Bring the arms to shoulder level. Stop the exercise when you feel the hollow of the back lift off the floor.

Lithuanian Reception Gay and Informative

Washington Society Well Entertained and Enlightened on Baltic Nation's History by the Zadeikis.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Outside the Lithuanian Legation a huge red, green and yellow flag waved yesterday. Inside Washington's diplomatic, official and residential notables filed up the legation's red-carpeted stairway all afternoon, greeted the Lithuanian Minister and Mme. Povilas Zadeikis, and lingered to enjoy their hospitality—all by way of helping to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of Lithuania's independence.

Few of the guests knew, probably, the real reason for the reception that drew such a representative group of Washingtonians. One anniversary is very much like the next, and a good excuse for a party. But yesterday, the Lithuanian reception was more than an annual get-together in honor of a patriotic anniversary. It afforded an opportunity for many guests to find out more about the European republic that was formerly a grand duchy under the Russian Empire, and to become acquainted with the Lithuanian envoy and his wife.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Receiving in the lounge, the affable Minister and Mme. Zadeikis pleasantly and patiently answered scores of questions about their homeland. Yes, it was once a part of Russia. It lies next to the Baltic Sea, and is bounded on the north by Latvia and on the south by Poland. It proclaimed its independence from Russia on February 16, 1918.

"How would you be celebrating the day if you were back in Lithuania?" Mme. Zadeikis was asked.

"Very much as I am now," she said. "I would probably be at a reception in honor of the occasion. Earlier, I would have watched a big parade. Later, I would probably round out the day's celebration by going to the opera."

But in Washington she was observing the day by greeting a sizable section of Capital society.

Guests Received in Second Floor Lounge

She and the Minister met their guests—many the first time—in the second-floor lounge, which was decorated with huge bowls of roses and calla lilies. Mme. Zadeikis was gowned in black lace, with long tight sleeves and a full, floor-length skirt.

A colorful note was introduced by the appearance of a girl in native Lithuanian attire—complete with full, figured skirt, short jacket and flowers in her hair. She was Miss Sallie Kaminskas, a member of the American Lithuanian Society. Another center of interest was Petras Rimsa, noted Lithuanian sculptor, now concluding an extended visit in this country.

A number of Mr. Rimsa's sculptures were on display in the lounge and drawing room, including two that drew special attention. One was of a man driving a horse and guiding a plow through a field—particularly appropriate as interpreting a phase of activity in Lithuania, which is chiefly an agricultural country. The other sculpture, a marble piece, portrayed a mother teaching her child to read, while her hand worked a spinning wheel. That, said Mr. Rimsa, was significant of the situation back in the days of Russian domination, when the Lithuanian language had to be taught, if at all, in the home.

Capital Society Well Represented

Capital society was well represented in the company that gathered around the tea table in the dining room, or around the bar in the drawing room, where champagne and other drinks flowed freely for well over two hours.

An artist obviously had a hand in arranging the bowl of flowers that centered the tea table. A bouquet of yellow buds was surrounded by a circle of red roses, and clusters of tall yellow tapers in silver holders were used on either side to complete the decorative scheme.

The Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky were among earlier arrivals, as were the Latvian Minister and Mme. Alfred Bilmanis. Mme. van Haersma de With, whose black suit and small hat were set off with a red fox neckpiece, was glimpsed in the crowd; as were the Czechoslovak Minister and Mme. Vladimir Hurban; the First Secretary of the Czechoslovak Legation and Mme. Otaker Kabelac; Mrs. Fred Britten, in a handsome black ensemble; the Minister of the Union of South Africa, and Mrs. Ralph William Close, and their daughter, Mrs. W. S. Mann, who wore a stunning tangerine crepe frock with turban to match.

Also, the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. C. T. Wang, who arrived with his daughter, Miss Yoeh E. Wang; Mr. and Mrs. George Oakley Totten, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Owsley, Senator and Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, the latter in a black suit and a trim black tricorne; the Irish Minister and Mrs. Michael MacWhite, whose friends were lamenting because the MacWhites will be leaving Washington so soon; Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the United States Mint; Mircea Victor Babes, of the Rumanian Legation.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem were among later arrivals; also, Mrs. Hamilton Wright, Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and senora de Baron; Mrs. Sol Bloom and her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom; the Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd; the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera.

Lieut. Etheridge, Wife To Visit Over Week-End

Lieut. Walker Ethridge, U. S. N., and Mrs. Ethridge, now on their wedding trip, will arrive this afternoon to be week-end guests of Lieut. Ethridge's uncle, C. O. Bordeaux, of Cleveland Park.

Before their recent marriage in Pensacola, Fla., Mrs. Ethridge was Miss Laura Virginia Pittard, of Thomaston, Ga. Lieut. Ethridge, who is stationed at Norfolk, Va., was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1934 and has many friends in Washington.

Concert Draws D. C. Notables

Society turned out last evening for Mischa Elman, violinist, and the mid-week concert of the National Symphony Orchestra. Nicolai Berezowsky, guest conductor directing his own First Symphony for the first time in Washington, was an additional treat.

Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, with a party of guests was in Mrs. Roosevelt's box. Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, member of the board of directors of the orchestra and vice chairman of the current campaign committee, was there; also, Mrs. Tracy Dowrs, another outstanding supporter of the National Symphony, who is a member of the special gifts committee; Dr. and Mrs. William McClellan, Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, important campaigners for the Symphony drive; Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Meyers, Mrs. Edwin C. Watson, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Schiffeler, and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor.

Notables Among The Boxholders

Among the boxholders who were either there last night in person, or whose boxes were occupied by friends were the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Alexander Troyanovsky, the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, Mrs. William A. Becker, Mrs. Anne Archbold, Miss Alice J. Clapp, Mrs. Lewis Emery, jr., Mrs. M. Webster Dawley.

Also, Mrs. Hans Kindler, wife of the conductor of the orchestra; Mrs. Beale R. Howard, Mrs. Charles Lea, Mr. and Mrs. Reeve Lewis (the latter is cochairman of the association's committee for the forthcoming drive); Miss Elizabeth Patterson, and Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong.

All Circles of Society Present

A glance up one row and down the other, as well as toward the boxes, revealed that just about every circle of Washington society was represented in the audience. Among those who have reservations for the concert, in addition to those already mentioned, were Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mr. and Mrs. Milton W. King, Miss Mary Adams, Mrs. Charles Bell, Mrs. F. L. Belin, Mme. Julia Cantacuzene, Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, Mrs. Emile Berliner, the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, the Rev. Ze-Barney Phillips and Mr. and Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart.

Also, Mrs. Charles Hofer, Mr. and Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Judge and Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, Corcoran Thom and Mr. and Mrs. John Rowland Hill.

The drive for orchestra funds is scheduled to begin Wednesday, and wil continue on an extensive and inclusive scale for ten days thereafter, with $103,000 as the goal.

Wadsteds Return.

The Danish Minister and Mme. Wadsted and their small son, Otto, arrived in New York yesterday on the Lafayette and were expected to come immediately to Washington. Mme. Wadsted and her son have been abroad for a year.

Miss Mizener Weds March 12

Arrangements for the wedding on March 12 of Miss Mathilde Mizener, daughter of Mrs. Frank Asbury Mizener, of Winter Park, Fla., to Charles O. Andrews, jr., son of Senator and Mrs. Andrews, of Florida, have been completed.

At the ceremony, which will take place at 5 o'clock in the afternoon at Knowles Memorial Chapel, Rollins College, Winter Park, Dean Charles Campbell will officiate, assisted by the president of the college, Dr. Hamilton Holt.

Mrs. Terry Barnard Patterson has been selected as matron of honor, while Miss Roberta Crew, of Atlanta, Ga., will be maid of honor. The bridesmaids include Mrs. William Dial and Miss Billie Hotard. The best man will be Terry B. Patterson, while the ushers are William H. Dial, William Y. Akerman, Howard Phillips, Oakley Andrews, John S. Lavin and Otto Wettstein 3d.

The bride-elect, who is being feted at a number of prenuptial parties in Winter Park, will be the guest of honor at a tea to be given on Saturday by Miss Billie Hotard, and on February 26 will be entertained by her matron of honor at another tea in Orlando, where Mrs. Andrews, mother of the prospective brodegroom, has her home.

'Julius Caesar' Cast Will Be Guests at Playhouse Today

Edmund O'Brien and members of the cast of "Julius Caesar" playing at the National Theater this week will be guests at a theater luncheon at the King-Smith Playhouse today. Mr. O'Brien was a guest player at the Playhouse in the production of "Liliom" given last season. Thursday he will attend a rehearsal of the forthcoming Playhouse production of "Uncle Vanya," an entertaining comedy of Russian provincial life by Tchekoff, which will open the Playhouse season on February 24 and continue through February 26.

Students from the following private schools of Washington will be guests at the Saturday evening performance: Mount Vernon Seminary, National Cathedral School, Fairmont School, Marjory Webster School, Gunston Hall, Holton-Arms, Chevy Chase, National Park Seminary, the Madeira School, Trinity College, Arlington Hall and Georgetown Visitation Convent.

Saitos Are Guests At Dinner Given By Carlos del Mars

Mr. and Mrs. Carlos del Mar entertained at a dinner last evening at which the Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Saito were ranking guests.

Others present were the Siamese Minister and Mme. Rajamaitri, the Commercial Counselor of the Canadian legation and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, Jacob Gould Schurmann, former Ambassador to Germany, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Bernard B. Jones and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Owsley.

Elizabeth Rust Weds Tomorrow

Numerous parties are being given for Miss Elizabeth Rust, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David N. Rust, of Rockridge, near Leesburg, and Douglas Rogers Phillips, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander K. Phillips, of Chevy Chase, Md., whose wedding will take place in the St. James Episcopal Church of Leesburg tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

This evening, following the wedding rehearsal, Miss Sara Harrison will entertain at dinner for the wedding party at the home of her parents, Commonwealth's Attorney and Mrs. Charles F. Harrison, of Leesburg.

A. Smith Bowman, jr., entertained at a luncheon on Sunday at his home at Sunset Hills when 60 guests from Washington and nearby Virginia, including the bridal party, were present.

Miss Mary Lloyd gave a cocktail party at her home in Alexandria Saturday afternoon with guests present from Washington and Loudoun County.

Italian Ambassador And Wife Entertain For the MacWhites

The Italian Ambassador and Donna Mathilde de Suvich entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the embassy in honor of the Irish Minister and Mrs. Michael MacWhite.

Mr. and Mrs. MacWhite will sail March 2 on the Berengaria for Europe, as the former has been appointed Irish Minister to Rome. They will spend a short time in Dublin before going to Italy.

Miss Sophie C. Stuart Feted at Luncheon

Miss Sophie C. Stuart, whose marriage to Robert N. Rust, jr., will take place Saturday, February 26 in Christ Church, Georgetown, was the guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. John F. Clagett, of University Park.

Among those present were Miss Magaret P. Rust, Miss Dorothy B. Rust, Mrs. Lynn O. de Lashmutt, Miss Emily Ball, Miss Betsy Heyward, Miss Mary Stewart, Miss Betty Knox, Miss Alice Bottler and Miss Louise Backus.

Fewer Attend 'At Homes' of Cabinet Wives

Conversation Less Effort Than Usual at Roper, Wallace Parties.

Conversation was more of a fine art and less of a vocal exercise at the cabinet "at homes" yesterday afternoon, where a smaller than usual number of people made it possible to speak almost in a whisper and still be heard.

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, received in the softly lighted living room of her apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel. Wearing a wine-colored lace dress caught at the waist with a narrow gold belt, she looked as lovely as always. Mrs. Vandenberg, who poured wearing a dark brown dress, not only asked the guests to have coffee but insisted that they try one of "those round sandwiches . . . they're delicious." Mrs. Julian Schley, wife of Gen. Schley, Chief of Engineers, U. S. A., was in a tailored suit and dark blue straw sailor hat. She presided at the tea urn.

Mrs. Bankhead Also at Tea Table

Others who assisted were Mrs. William B. Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House of Representatives; Mme. Marc Peter, wife of the Swiss Minister; Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. George Dern, wife of the former Secretary of War; Mrs. James M. Helm, and Mrs. Louis Caldwell, who wore a black dress and black Cossack hat and who came directly from Mrs. Roper's, where she had been assisting earlier in the afternoon.

Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, at her "hilltop" residence on Woodland Drive, wore a floor-length gown of black, the top of which was fashioned in bands of net and crepe.

Mrs. Mark Bristol Among the Guests

Glimpsed among the guests were Mrs. Blair Bannister in a black afternoon dress trimmed with black sequins; Mrs. Mark Bristol, also in black with a small close-fitting hat; the First Secretary of the Czechoslovakian Legation and Mme. Otakar Kabelac, she in black, and Mme. Eero Jarnefelt, wife of the Minister of Finland.

Assisting Mrs. Roper were her daughters-in-law, Mrs. Richard Roper and Mrs. John Roper. The latter, with her husband, Lieutenant Commander Roper, will remain in Washington a week before going on to Annapolis, where he will begin a new tour of duty; also Mrs. Morris Sheppard in black with bands of gold; Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Miss Mary Patten, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, Mrs. South Trimble, jr., and Mrs. Frank Bohn.

3 Teams Enter Jumping Class

Washington society is taking keen interest in the forthcoming Washington's Birthday Horse Show, to be held Tuesday evening at the Riding Hall at Fort Myer. This will be third in the series of winter shows.

Classes are arranged so that every type of competition is furnished in such a manner as to provide the maximum of thrills and interest with exhibitions by the crack troops of Fort Myer.

Probably the most interesting class from the viewpoint of competitive spirit will be the student team jumping, featuring teams from Arlington Hall, Pennsylvania Military College and Gunston Hall, with the possible entry of Virginia Military Institute. Other colorful classes also are planned and it is expected that the crowd will be one of the biggest of the year.

Theater Company At Supper Dance

After the opening performance of "George and Margaret," by the Washington Civic Theater at the Wardman Park Hotel last evening, members of the cast, executives of the Washington Civic Theater and sponsors of the organization were entertained at a supper dance in the Metronome Room of the hotel.

Among more than 30 guests were the director of the Civic Theater, F. Cowles Strickland, and his assistants, William M. Girvan, Richard Gee, Mrs. Charles Dillon, Miss Hazel Kirkpatrick, Miss Betty Rice, Miss Edith Sognier, Harrison Libbey, J. Gordon Dahlem, Warren Head and Miss Betty Leaf. Members of the cast who attended were Miss Bunnie Skinner, Mrs. Maud Howell Smith, Miss Margaret Johnson, Mrs. Earl Klein, Harry MacArthur, Donald Sisler and Richard Walsh.

Farewell Luncheon Is Staged at Club For Mrs. Simmons

Mrs. Huston Thompson gave a farewell luncheon yesterday for her daughter, Mrs. John Farr Simmons, at the Women's National Democratic Club. There were 30 guests, headed by Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister, and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of Justice Stone.

The table was decorated with masses of yellow roses and lavender iris, made up into corsages which were presented to the guests after luncheon.

Mrs. Simmons leaves with her young son the end of the month for Ottawa, where Mr. Simmons is Counselor of the United States legation.

Closes to Entertain For Straten-Ponthoz

The Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close will entertain at dinner next Tuesday, in honor of the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz.

Cancel 'at Homes.'

Senators' wives who have canceled their "at homes" for today include Mrs. Millard Tydings, wife of Senator Tydings; Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, wife of Senator Vandenberg, and Mrs. Warren R. Austin, wife of Senator Austin.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

ALTHOUGH the Washington social season is in full swing as early as October (reception at the Siamese legation in honor of Siam's Independence Day), January and February are for some reason considered the biggest "dinner months."

DUDLEY HARMON.

The most glamorous dinners in Washington are those at the British Embassy. One feels in another world as soon as he or she steps inside the embassy at 8:30 and sees a tall and impressive major domo, garbed in kilts and busby, standing at the foot of the stairs. Fortunately this striking individual and his costume are not saved only for state occasions such as celebrations of the King's birthday, but appear at large dinners as well.

Up the marble staircase, down the mirror-lined hall, and thence into the drawing room, also lined with mirrors and with unusually handsome crystal chandeliers. From there, after cocktails, into the dining room, where the scene is so lovely that one wishes it could be painted. The long, highly polished table seats 38, and on one recent evening was decorated with three tremendous silver urns massed with spring flowers. One dines off silver plates and beautiful china, and the men in red livery who serve the guests heighten the general effect of elegance.

• • • • •

DINNERS OF THE stimulating sort are given frequently by the Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings at Ruthven, their large house on Tilden street. Mrs. Cummings believes that good conversation is the most important ingredient to a successful party, and seldom invites more than 12 or 16 to share a meal with her. On the theory that people who have "done something" are likely to have interesting things to say, she likes to surround herself with actors, actresses, writers, and others who have made a mark in the world. Her theories extend to women as well as men, and nobody is ever invited who, though beautiful, is dumb.

• • • •

REPRESENTATIVE EDITH NOURSE ROGERS has the gift of making her guests feel as though their presence was absolutely essential to her parties when she entertains in her apartment on Sixteenth street. The warmth of her welcome insures the success of her dinners. . . . The Counselor of the German Embassy and Fuar Thomsen know how to impart a home-like atmosphere when they ask friends to dine with them, and Mr. and Mrs. Gasper Bacon are among those who go in for interesting dishes. At a recent dinner they served a meat which looked like filet mignon, tasted rather like liver and turned out to be wild mountain sheep Mr. Bacon had brought back from a trip to Wyoming . . . Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse are among those who go in for political personalities, which makes their dinners interesting.

• • • •

ODDS AND ENDS: Mrs. Emory Land, who has been ill for the past few weeks, has gone to Arizona to convalesce. She is the wife of Rear Admiral Land, acting chairman of the Maritime Commission. . . . Many "cave-dwellers" attended the cocktail party given earlier in the week by Mrs. Jennings Halkett. . . . Commander Pierre Benech, Naval Attache of the French Embassy, has returned after a trip to the Caribbean. . . . Arthur Krock is in Nassau.

Alien Laws Assailed at D.A.R. Meet

District Women Hear Starnes and Trevor Score Laxity.

Secretary of Labor in Sympathy With Legislation Is Asked.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Challenged by Mrs. Tonnis Holzberg, chairman of national defense for the District D. A. R., to "pick up our new name—sour-faced battle-axes—and go to work," the chapter regents and committee chairmen of the District last night manifested a belligerent attitude on the matter of lax immigration laws. They met in the Carlton Hotel to hear a discussion of pending immigration bills by Representative Joe Starnes, of Alabama, and John B. Trevor, of New York, president of the American Coalition.

Representative Starnes spoke off the record on the alien problem and its effect on social security, crime, relief and politics. He pointed out the need for selective as well as restrictive immigration laws, and declared that if we must tax the American people for relief the money should be spent on American citizens.

Mr. Trevor, who talked on the record, asserted the solution of the problem of illegal aliens "lies in the designation of a Secretary of Labor who is in sympathy with the laws enacted by the Congress of the United States."

"How are we going to deal with the illegal entrant so long as we have a Secretary of Labor charged with the enforcement of law who puts herself above the law?" he asked.

The second problem faced by the country is how to remove from the United States hordes of alien criminals who infest every considerable community throughout the land, he said, and the third, the "delination of a policy regarding the 4,000,000 lawfully admitted aliens who are active in or political competitors for American jobs in a time of grave distress and unemployment."

"So long as high public officials disregard the clear and direct mandate of the law, the American people should show no surprise at the contempt for American law demonstrated by aliens seeking to enter our country in defiance of its provisions, nor contempt on the part of foreign-born persons in the United States, for the Government of the Nation," declared Mr. Trevor.

Without mentioning the name of the chairman of the House Immigration Committee (Samuel Dickstein), he asked why "guardianship of our gates so far as Congress is concerned, should be placed in any way in the hands of a man not born in this country."

The speakers were introduced by Mrs. Holzberg, who presided, and they answered questions from the floor following their talks.

Others on the platform with them were Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, State regent; Mrs. T. Temple Hill, State chaplain.

Among those in the audience were Mme. Cantacuzene, president of the League of Republican Women, at whose meeting last week Representative Starnes was to have spoken, but was unable to, due to business at the Capitol; Mrs. William Sherman Walker, executive secretary of American Coalition; Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. David D. Caldwell, vice president general of the D. A. R.; Mrs. Earl Fuller, State corresponding secretary; Mrs. Catherine B. Strong, State recording secretary; Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, honorary vice president general, and Miss Helen Towner, State vice chairman of national defense.

Mandate Committee Speaker on Coast

Mrs. Cecil Ira McReynolds, who has been making a transcontinental speaking trip for the People's Mandate Committee, Tuesday addressed a meeting in Los Angeles.

Mrs. McReynolds left Washington January 27 and took the Southern route to the Coast, speaking en route in 23 cities, among them, Richmond, Nashville, Memphis, Little Rock, Fort Worth, Dallas, Tucson, and Phoenix. Meetings have been arranged for her by branches of the American Association of University Women, Business and Professional Women, local mandate committees and other organizations.

Mrs. McReynolds is emphasizing the building of a workable peace system in the Western Hemisphere and the Hull reciprocal trade pacts. Her trip is the first move in the campaign of the committee to double signatures on the mandate in the next year. Two million signatures have already been secured.

Mrs. McReynolds will reach Berkeley Saturday and will spend next month there with her mother. Her husband, an executive of the Federal Housing Administration, will shortly go to California to return to Washington with her.

Miss Clara W. McQuown Gives Weekly Talk Today

Miss Clara W. McQuown will give her weekly talk on questions of the hour in national and international affairs this morning at 11 o'clock at the Washington Club.

She has taken for her home subject the new agriculture bill. Under foreign affairs she will discuss German diplomacy, the present situations in Austria and Rumania, and recent developments in the Far East.

District Pen Women Hear of Folk Festival

Leaders Honor U. S. Scout Head

Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke Is Feted at Tea at Headquarters.

Guests at the Girl Scout leaders' tea at District headquarters yesterday honoring Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, national president, found themselves in a high-ceilinged room, with a lazy fire in its broad fireplace and tall bouquets of forsythia and other spring flowers suggesting the out-of-doors. Mrs. Brooke, who wore her green scout uniform, had just returned from Corning, N. Y., where she conferred with the chairman of Girl Scout leaders there early yesterday morning.

Mrs. Brooke addressed the leaders briefly, and stood on a chair so as to be able to see all of the guests, most of whom were standing about with their teacups in hand. Miss Dorothy Davidson, of the District Girl Scouts, was beside her.

Mrs. Brooke urged the leaders to offer suggestions for the national program which is now being worked out, so as to give those preparing it the benefit of their practical experience in working with the girls.

Miss Davidson and Mrs. O. G. Hankins received with the guest of honor and Mrs. William F. Crosby, Girl Scout Commissioner for the District, who is recovering from an injury to her ankle, sat at one end of the fireplace, holding a court of her own, as friends came to greet her.

Mrs. G. E. Bowman, hostess at the Girl Scout Little House, was assisting and among others who attended the affair were Mrs. Donald Richberg, who assisted at the tea table, and who is chairman of finance for the local council; Mrs. John Borton, secretary; Mrs. Martin Jones, treasurer; Mrs. Henry H. Flather; Mrs. Proctor Dougherty, deputy commissioner; Mrs. Daniel Knowlton, chairman of the house committee; Mrs. LeRoy Barton, captain of Troop 8; Mrs. Julien Friant, chairman of District 4; Mrs. Jessie Lutton, Mrs. W. M. Kiplinger, chairman of the Day Camp committee, who provided the flowers for the party; Mrs. C. E. Waters, chairman of District 3; Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, Mrs. Ralph E. Doherty, Mrs. Gerrit S. Miller, jr.; Mrs. Robert B. Laughlin, Miss Christine Gawne, president of the Leaders' Association; Mrs. J. Wesley Buchanan, Mrs. Joseph Beattie, a new leader, wearing her uniform for the first time; Miss Ann Hobbs Betts, junior lieutenant of Troop 8 and Miss Anna Huling, who came here from the Philippines only last fall.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

REPRESENTATIVE CAROLINE O'DAY, herself a member of the seventy-fourth Congress, yesterday was guest of honor and speaker at the luncheon of the Seventy-fourth Club. Mrs. Hugh Peterson, new president, presided for the first time at the luncheon meeting which was held in the Speaker's dining room of the Capitol.

Members of the board who received with her included Mrs. Scott Lucas and Mrs. Emmet O'Neal, vice presidents; Mrs. Aaron Ford, secretary, and Mrs. Byron Scott, treasurer.

Past officers who also assisted were Mrs. John J. Dempsey, Mrs. Sam Massingale, Mrs. Orville Zimmerman and Mrs. Phil Ferguson.

• • • •

MRS. FRANK M. HOADLEY, who was guest of honor at the dinner meeting of the Junior Woman's Club of Chevy Chase at Wesley Hall Tuesday night, brought the girls good news. As president of the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs, she announced that they had been accepted in the federation and with their membership of 72, were the largest junior group in the State. Miss Eleanor Finch is their president.

WHEN IS a Democratic Club not a Democratic Club?—The Woman's Democratic Club of Leland (Chevy Chase) answers, "when it's a community club."

February 22 the W. D. C. of L. is having a large card party at the Masonic Temple in Bethesda, and they say there'll probably be about as many Republicans as Democrats among the guests.

The Leland Club has not confined itself to politics, but has interested itself in civic affairs and such things as working for an increase in the teachers' salaries and other improvements in the schools. In preparations for the Washington's Birthday party, it has pursued its policy of helping along the community by purchasing all of its prizes and other supplies from neighboring stores.

There is a large committee making plans for it. Mrs. Joseph Edwards and Mrs. Louise Boswell are in charge of the bingo; Mrs. Calvin Johnson and Mrs. William C. O'Brien, of bridge prizes; Mrs. Phillip Fischer, of patronesses; Mrs. John Werner, of the door; Mrs. Archibald Smith and Mrs. Bevan Sharpless, of the distribution of tickets; Mrs. O'Brien and Mrs. James Greene, of publicity; Mrs. Burrell Marsh and Miss Olivia Knight, of table arrangements, and Mrs. William Knapp, Mrs. Edgar Ball, Mrs. William Bixby, Mrs. William Hutchinson, Mrs. Carl Plitt, Mrs. Oscar Gaither, Mrs. James Griest and Mrs. Arthur Metcalf, of refreshments.

• • • •

THE NEWSPAPER WOMEN'S CLUB, instead of having its monthly "at home" at the Admiral, is entertaining the afternoon of February 25 at a tea in honor of Mrs. Hugo Black and Mrs. Stanley Reed.

• • • •

MRS. HENRY A. WALLACE, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, will be guest of honor at a tea being given by the Woman's National Democratic Club Saturday from 4:30 to 6 o'clock.

Next Wednesday afternoon the club will have its annual meeting following a pilgrimage to the tomb of Woodrow Wilson, where Mrs. Charles Warren will make an address. Polls will be open from 3 to 6 and the annual dinner will be at 6:30 with Senator Alben Barkley as guest of honor and speaker. Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard is scheduled for re-election as president of the club; Mrs. Garland S. Ferguson, jr., first vice president; Mrs. J. Brent Clarke, second vice president; Mrs. Albert A. Jones, recording secretary; Mrs. Frederick W. Weigster, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Frank S. Bright, treasurer. Mrs. Weigster will replace Mrs. William E. Fort, who resigned as corresponding secretary some months ago.

THE IRENE WRIGHTS, of which there are six in Washington, dwindle down to an unimpressive minority when confronted by the Frank Smiths of whom there are 15 listed in the telephone directory—not counting the Mrs. Frank Smiths and the possible Frank Smiths, junior.

I discovered them the other day in looking up Mrs. Frank Seymour Smith, who was chairman of the fellowship bridge party given by the A. A. U. W.—a very gracious and attractive representative of the group. There are other things beside the middle name, Seymour, which distinguish her and her husband from other Washingtonians of the same first and last names. Both are well-known lawyers, Mrs. Smith on the board of veterans' appeals in the Veterans' Administration, and Mr. Smith a practicing attorney and instructor of a bar review course here since 1913. He has recently moved his classes to the Carlton Hotel, from the Friends School, where they were formerly conducted.

Dance Planned Feb. 25 By Maryland Society

The Maryland Society of Washington will hold its next reception, entertainment and dance Friday, February 25, at the Kennedy-Warren, 3133 Connecticut avenue.

At the reception, from 9 to 9:30, there will be in the receiving line Mrs. Robert M. Boteler, Mrs. Walter R. Byrd, Mrs. Walter L. Green, Mrs. Robert Howard, Mrs. William S. Morsell, jr., Mrs. Ralph W. Powers, Mrs. Vincent C. Tompkins, jr., and Mrs. Franklin D. Zantzinger.

Miss Hilda Yen Is Club Speaker

Addresses Chevy Chase Women on Conditions in Her China.

Miss Hilda Yen, daughter of the president of the Chinese Red Cross, presented a comprehensive picture of conditions in her country in an address at the meeting of the Chevy Chase Women's Club yesterday afternoon. About 350 members of the club attended the business meeting, luncheon and program in the assembly room of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church.

The steady progress of unification of China is responsible, said Miss Yen, for Japan's aggression, begun in 1931. She read extracts from the memorial to the Japanese Emperor in July, 1927, which outlined a plan for gradual absorption of China, the Pacific Islands, India and finally the rest of the world. Even now, it is said that India is listening to Japan's propaganda for uniting the yellow and other "colored" races against the white race, Miss Yen asserted. She added that Japanese agents are working with colored leaders in the United States to gain their co-operation in such a movement.

Miss Yen, who was introduced by Mrs. John Travers Maguire, club president, spoke of the significant change in the language which made it possible to teach people throughout the country to understand the same vernacular. The 4,000 characters in the language have been reduced to 1,000 for this purpose and after children learn to use it they are encouraged to teach their parents and grandparents. This is only one phase of the unity growing in the country. The written language of the educated Chinese has been the same for centuries, but the spoken language has undergone changes because of the great distances and slight opportunity for communication between provinces.

Opening of new railways through central China and the development of aviation in the country have been means of bringing about a unification of thought and action heretofore unknown, she pointed out.

Music for the afternoon was provided by William S. Raymond, who sang, accompanied by Mrs. Dawson Olmstead.

Mrs. D. D. Courtney, of 5329 New Hampshire avenue, has gone to Miami, Fla., to visit her daughter, Mrs. John Nock. She will return to Washington around the middle of March.

Future Possibilities of Folk Arts Stressed by Festival Founder

Miss Knott Visions It Basis for Truly American Literature, Drama and Music When Produced; Post-Sponsored Fete Opens May 6.

When truly American literature, art, drama and music are produced, folk arts will be their basis, Miss Sarah Gertrude Knott, founder of the Folk Festival being sponsored by The Washington Post May 6, 7 and 8, told members of the League of American Pen Women yesterday afternoon. Miss Knott spoke at the weekly fellowship tea at the Grafton Hotel and was introduced by Dr. Mary Meek Atkeson Moore.

Already the important part to be played by folk arts in building a typically American culture is evidenced, she pointed out, citing such plays as "Green Pastures," "In Abraham's Bosom," and "Porgy," and such books as "When Stars Fell on Alabama."

Groups in North Carolina University, under Frederick Koch, who is to assist in directing the festival, are writing plays based on legends of the mountain sections; she added. John Powell, noted Richmond composer, is now at work on a symphony based on folk music; last season, at the University of Oklahoma, a symphony was produced, which had its basis in cowboy and Indian melodies and rhythms. February 21, in Washington Dean Shure's symphony using Indian airs and mountain tunes, will be played by the Marine Band. All of these indicate the place of the folk arts in modern creative work, she said.

"We are in a transition stage," said Miss Knott. "What was formerly the tradition of one section has now reached out to others and to appreciate the folk arts of America we must take a broader approach, embracing the country as a whole."

The Folk Festival here, she said, will include, for the first time, the New England States and some of those adjacent to the District of Columbia, which have not been represented in the four previous festivals, held at St. Louis, Chattanooga, Dallas and Chicago. It is a plan for preserving the living traditions rather than recording them as something of the past.

Mrs. William Walter Smith was hostess of the afternoon, and Mrs. R. A. McGee, health secretary of the Council of Social Agencies, was also a guest of honor and a speaker. Mrs. McGee, who is author of five books on health subjects and a sixth to be published in the spring, is one of the new members of the District branch of the League of American Pen Women.

Mrs. Smith was assisted by Mrs. H. Trudley Dean, Mrs. Sterling Bockoven, Mrs. L. W. Tilton, Mrs. George Charles Richards.

Miss Marguerite Merigold, the District president, was among those present, as were Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, vice president; Miss Alice Hutchin Drake, Mrs. Winifred Houghton, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., a daughter of Mrs. Blanche Morgan Foote; Mrs. W. Graham Jarvis, of Norfolk, Va., and Mrs. Frank Milwee, of Arkansas.

Many Will Entertain At Arts Club Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanwood Cobb, official hosts at the dinner at the Arts Club this evening, will be assisted unofficially by a number of members who have invited guests for the occasion.

Among those entertaining are Mrs. Charles W. Fairfax, Mrs. William Allen Hayes, Miss Priska Kaspar, Miss Lichtenstein, Mrs. Gertrude Lyons, Mr. Lewis Lofton Moneyway, Mr. John Russell Mason, Miss Clara Saunders and Miss Agnes Sterritt.

Club to Give Tea To Mrs. Garner

Mrs. John Nance Garner will be guest of honor tomorrow afternoon at the annual tea given for the wife of the Vice President by the Congressional Club. Each club member is entitled to take one guest.

The clubhouse on New Hampshire avenue, which now has a complete new set of State flags decorating the ballroom on the second floor, will be decorated tomorrow with flowers carrying out a patriotic color scheme appropriate to the month of both Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays. The old State flags which have formed a colorful border around the walls of the room for many seasons will be sent to the historical societies of the States from which they came.

Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, president of the club, and members of the board of directors will receive with Mrs. Garner and introductions will be made by Capt. Robert Williams of the United States Marine Corps. The Marine Band Orchestra will play.

A group of Senators' wives has been invited to pour, including Mrs. Peter G. Gerry and Mrs. James F. Byrnes, both past presidents of the club; Mrs. George W. Norris, Mrs. William H. Dieterich, Mrs. John H. Overton.

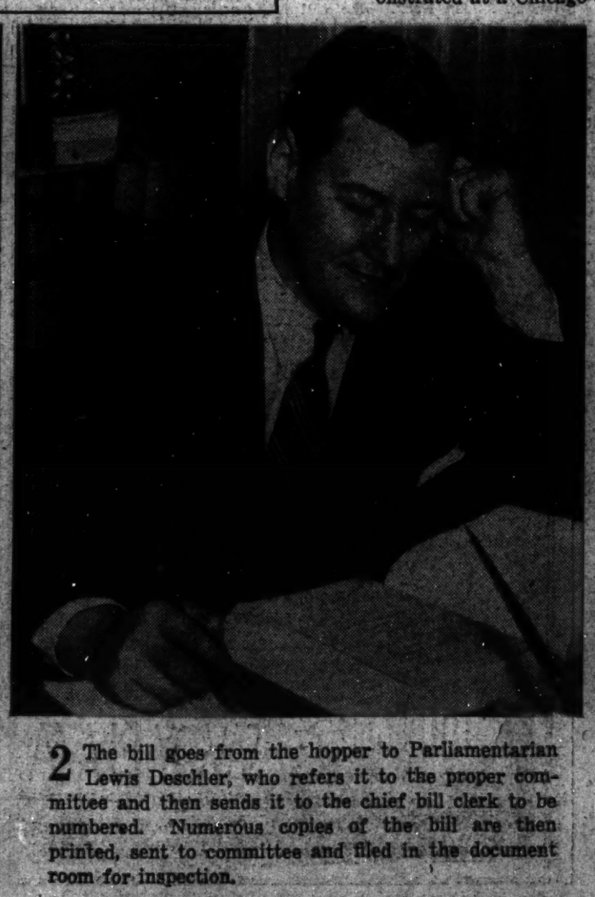
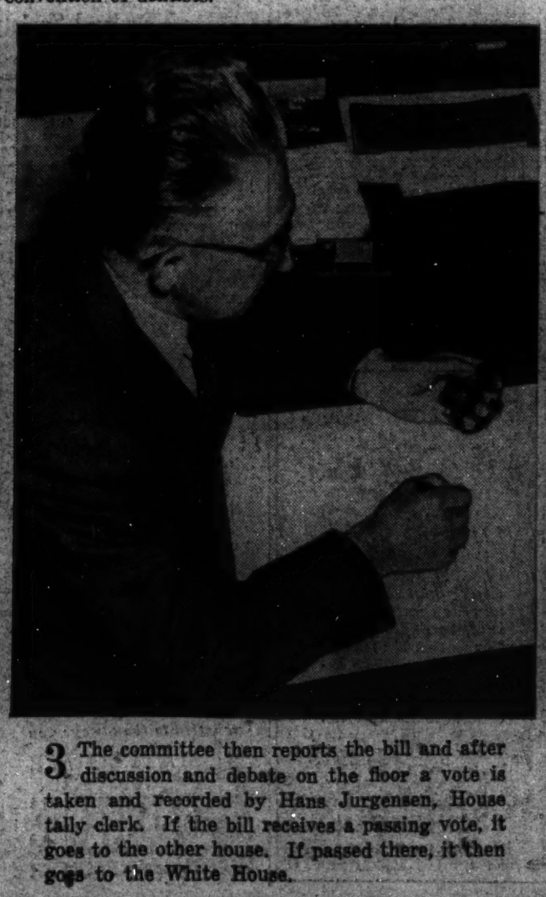
How a Bill Becomes a National Law

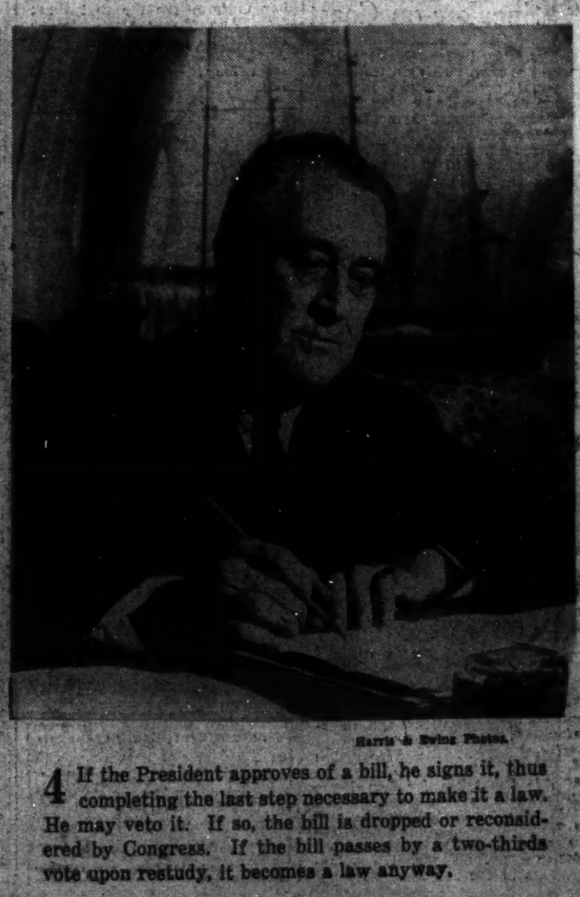
1 Placing a bill in the legislative "hopper" (above) is the first step in a series before legislation affecting few or millions becomes law. Any representative can draft a bill on any subject. Representative Maverick demonstrates the first step.



2 The bill goes from the hopper to Parliamentarian Lewis Deschler, who refers it to the proper committee and then sends it to the chief bill clerk to be numbered. Numerous copies of the bill are then printed, sent to committee and filed in the document room for inspection.



3 The committee then reports the bill and after discussion and debate on the floor a vote is taken and recorded by Hans Jurgensen, House tally clerk. If the bill receives a passing vote, it goes to the other house. If passed there, it then goes to the White House.



Harris & Ewing Photos.

4 If the President approves of a bill, he signs it, thus completing the last step necessary to make it a law. He may veto it. If so, the bill is dropped or reconsidered by Congress. If the bill passes by a two-thirds vote upon restudy, it becomes a law anyway.

*XX WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1938 17

By . . . HARLAN MILLER

If it weren't for friendly tourists, the resident Washingtonians would never get the Capital's sights seen; they'd remain vague details in the landscape, potential ports of call forever.

* * * *

Before the tourist season begins in earnest (it never really ends) every conscientious Washingtonian should swallow his false pride and take the regular $1.55 rubberneck tour of the city, so he can do right by Cousin Nell when she hits town.

It's easily worth the money. He'd learn some astonishing facts; for example, that the General's body on the statue at Scott Circle is too big for the horse, and that Gen. Phil Sheridan's widow still lives on Massachusetts avenue, near Sheridan Circle.

"—still the No. 1 exhibit"

You pick up some interesting misinformation, too; the guide may absent-mindedly tell you that this is the building where 456 Representatives have their offices, when you well know there are only 435, and that's plenty.

* * * *

On the rubberneck route, at least, the Vice President holds his own with the President . . . The first object pointed out is the hotel where he and Mrs. Garner live; and later you gaze moodily on the northeast corner of the Senate Office Building, where she serves busily as his secretary.

GEN. PERSHING

* * * *

Quite a few things in Washington are the biggest in the world; the Union Station and concourse, which will hold a "standing army of 55,000 soldiers;" the oil station dedicated to John D. Rockefeller; the Congressional Library, the biggest masonry monument (Washington) and the biggest masonry bridge (over Rock Creek Park on Connecticut avenue), aptly honoring the biggest President, Taft.

* * * *

After more than a decade of fading glory, Lindbergh's plane, at the Smithsonian, is still the No. 1 exhibit in popularity among the tourists and their tots, though the Constitution and the Declaration, in their golden frames, at the Library of Congress, are a fairly close second in tourist oomph . . . Can it be 19½ years since Charles Augustus flew to France like an arrow of destiny?

"—from the Japs, an extra thrill"

Where the bonus army bivouacked near the Capitol, the only memorial is the yellow clay of new tennis courts; and the bonus money is spent . . . Your visitors get an extra special thrill from the serene inscrutable facade of the Japanese Embassy, for all the world as peaceful as if no one were being bombed or raped or slapped in China.

* * * *

That gray pile you pass unaware is the court where Gaston Means was convicted for mulcting the good-hearted Mrs. McLean of $100,000 in a later Lindbergh episode, and where Farnsworth, the naval man, was found guilty of espionage; and there on Dupont circle is the mansion where Lindbergh visited the Coolidges while the White House was being repaired; and there's the Carlton—"most exclusive hotel in Washington; Pershing and Cordell Hull live there."

* * * *

If any place in Washington is a national shrine, where the frivolous tourist soars suddenly to an apogee of awe, reverence and devotion, it is the Lincoln Memorial . . . On many rubberneck tours that is the only place where the pilgrims alight, to mount the marble steps toward that illuminated face.

Court Holds Doctor In Auto Accident

Dr. Ernest Morgan, 52 charged with reckless driving and failure to report an accident after his car is alleged to have struck an 80-year-old woman Tuesday night, pleaded not guilty yesterday in Police Court.

He was ordered held for the grand jury under $1,000 bond by Judge Walter J. Casey. Judge Casey dismissed the reckless driving charge after the preliminary hearing.

The injured woman, Mrs. James E. Johnston, is not expected to live, according to Emergency Hospital physicians. After being struck at Eighteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, she was taken to the hospital by Dr. Morgan, who arranged for an emergency operation.

Playgrounds Board Urged By Civic Group

Chevy Chase Citizens Suggest Recreation Control Plan.

Immediate creation of a recreation board to control playground and other recreational activities in the District was recommended last night by the Chevy Chase Citizens' Association, in session at E. V. Brown School.

The proposed board, in addition to duly appointed District officials, would have five civilian members, who would be appointed by the justices of the District courts. Each member would be a resident of Washington for five years.

The association, which had its largest attendance in years, with 121 men and women present, went on record as unanimously urging immediate legislation against the numbers "racket."

Edwin S. Hege, former president, last night resigned as delegate to the Federation of Citizens' Associations, and D. D. Goff, an attorney, was named to succeed him.

Southwest Citizens

Indorsement of a $5,000 appropriation for Congressional investigation of the relief situation in the District was voted last night by the Southwest Citizens' Association meeting in the Jefferson Junior High School. At the same time they voted down a resolution approving increase of $1,000,000 in the relief appropriation. The group approved a $220,000 increase in the old-age pension funds as recommended by the Budget Bureau.

Two resolutions affecting the traffic situation in southwest Washington were adopted. The first asked that Seventh street southwest be made into a bouleavrd, the second recommended that a traffic light be installed at Third street and Maryland avenue southwest.

16th Street Highlands

Opposition to transfer of the school playgrounds from control of the Board of Education was voted last night by members of the Sixteenth Street Highlands Citizens Association at its meeting at the Brightwood School. H. K. Kugle, smoke regulation engineer, spoke.

Playground Study Ordered by Board

Prompted by large numbers of letters protesting changes in the present public recreational setup and reports that Senate action is imminent, the Board of Education yesterday took steps to clarify its position.

Robert A. Maurer, board vice president and member of the committee on community use of buildings, urged a conference of all recreational agencies concerned, including representatives of the school system, community center, public playgrounds and public parks.

Henry I. Quinn, who represented the board on the recreational coordination committee, urged the board to consider first his recent report, which favored co-ordination in general, but opposed proposals which, he declared, would jeopardize school board authority over activities on its own playgrounds.

House Office Building Barber Pole Is Pilfered

A 2-foot revolving pole, glass enclosed and equipped with an electric motor, that marked the barber shop entrance in the House Office Building, has ben stolen, police were informed last night.

The theft was accomplished late Tuesday night while the corridors of the building were deserted. The thief—or thieves—unscrewed the pole from its wall attachment, together with its glass case and motor, and walked past building guards at the entrance unobserved.

D. C. Detective Ends 31 Years Of Police Duty

Sergt. Mansfield, Veteran of Narcotics Squad, Will Retire.

Veteran member of the police narcotics squad, Mansfield, 54, will go through the formality today of appearing before the retirement board. He was told to seek retirement, which is granted automatically after 30 years' service, by his physician.

One of his last police tasks brought a letter from R. W. Horad, secretary to the recorder of deeds, commending him for his tact in handling the arrest of Dr. Waldo H. Jones, foot disease specialist, charged in a warrant with destroying public documents.

Mansfield's first assignment was the "red light" district in the First Precinct, a section of the city so "tough" the department assigned four policemen to a beat. Six years later he was made a bicycle officer, forerunner of the motorcycle policeman.

A short time later he arrested a notorious safe cracker, one of the most important catches of his career, as the man was leaving the Columbia Wholesale Packing Co. at Tenth and C streets northwest. A search revealed hand saws and $1,000 in bills secreted in a specially designed lining of his coat. The thief was sentneced to 15 years in Atlanta Penitentiary.

A few years later he was detailed to watch gambling in the vicinity of Twelfth and C streets northwest and to report directly to the then District Police Commissioner James Oyster. Many years of his career were spent on the narcotics squad which then made the city's old Chinatown in the vicinity of Fourth street and Pennsylvania avenue its headquarters.

He was removed from the squad when promoted to his present rank with Ira Keck, now detective captain captain. He was returned to narcotics in 1933, his last assignment.

Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, assistant police superintendent, who was a police "rookie" with Mansfield at the start of their careers, last night praised his "outstanding record."

Christianity Held World Peace Key

Lashing at the world's dictatorships, the Rev. Frank Fenn, rector of St. Michael and All Angels night that the hope of world peace lies in Christianity divorced from materialism.

Speaking at a conference on "Life in the Church" at St. Paul's Church, Dr. Fenn attacked all forms of government which oppose the democratic system.

"Any system will degenerate with the people who are responsible for making it," said Dr. Fenn.

Peace societies, he stated, are excellent things, but they to not go far enough.

Garnett Paid High Tribute By Cummings

Former U. S. Attorney for District Honored at Mayflower Dinner.

Former U. S. Attorney Leslie C. Garnett was faced by many difficult tasks during his tenure of office, and discharged his every duty to the complete satisfaction of the Department of Justice, Attorney General Homer Cummings said last night at a testimonial dinner to Garnett at the Mayflower Hotel.

The post of U. S. Attorney in Washington is more difficult than that of State's attorney anywhere else in the Nation, Cummings added, in paying tribute to Garnett.

More than 350 guests attended the dinner. Other speakers included Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner, of the Court of Appeals; Justice Jesse Adkins, of the District Court, and John E. Lasky, former U. S. Attorney.

Mother Swallows Poison, Won't Stay In Hospital, Dies

Treated and released from Casualty Hospital after she allegedly had swallowed poison at her home in Oaklawn, Md., last night, Mrs. Nancy Boutewell, 34, was returned to the hospital and died less than two hours later.

The mother of four children, ranging in age from 2 to 14, Mrs. Boutewell took the poison, police said, after an argument with her husband, Norman G. Boutewell, "about who was going to make the fire."

The Upper Marlboro rescue squad rushed Mrs. Boutewell to the hospital about 5 p. m. After being treated with a stomach pump, she refused to remain in the hospital and was released in custody of her husband. The rescue squad returned her to her home. She was taken back to the hospital shortly after 7 o'clock by her husband and died at 8 p. m.

Nichols Calls D. C. Best City For Business

Sharp clashes between Washington businessmen and members of the House sub-committee on fiscal affairs marked a continued hearing yesterday on the District tax bill.

Chairman Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, took particular exception to an observation by Joseph Batt, of the Washington Board of Trade and the Federation of Businessmen's Associations, that Washingtonians had become reconciled to the view that there is little they can do about determining the city's fiscal policies.

"I lived in a number of places," Nichols flared, "but I've never found a city where living conditions are so favorable, both to business and to the average resident, as they are in Washington."

Batt hastened to explain that he had no criticism to make of the present committee and that he believed the treatment of the District at the hands of Congress was improving steadily.

Earlier in the hearing sub-committee members challenged the claims of L. A. Carruthers, chairman of the citizens' advisory committee on taxation, that he spoke for the majority of Washingtonians when he advocated a sales tax.

"Why, it's the sheerest bunk to say the majority of the people of Washington want a sales tax," remarked Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, champion of an income levy.

After asking for figures on the membership of the various organizations which were represented on the committee, Dirksen asked Caruthers what kind of people he had talked with to get the impression that the poor people wanted to take the tax burden off the shoulders of the business men.

"Don't you think it a bit strange," Nichols interposed, "that laboring men should become so magnanimous as to take on a sales tax rather than see the business men pay it?"

Caruthers replied that the business privilege tax was merely passed on, and often pyramided, so that the consumer paid it in the end.

Rufus S. Lusk, of the Washington Taxpayers Association, offered to conduct a cross-section survey of Washington public opinion on the tax question if the report "would have any effect on the sub-committee." He said his method would be similar to that followed by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

Nichols replied that any poll of District opinion would "carry great weight" but that the sub-committee would reserve the right to pass on the method employed in the survey.

Richard J. Murphy, of the Washington Automotive Dealers, asked the sub-committee to amend the business privilege tax so as to make net profits the basis of the levy.

He asserted that the tax is an unfair burden on Washington automobile dealers because of their heavy gross receipts and their small margin of profit. He said the average profit in 1937 did not exceed 1.5 per cent.

"The automobile dealers are paying about 10 per cent of the business privilege tax," he said, "but they aren't making 10 per cent of the profits."

Mrs. Clara A. Power, of 1445 Massachusetts avenue northeast, pleaded with the sub-committee to exempt boarding houses from the tax, on the ground that she is already burdened with social security, water and other taxes and the minimum wage act.

Exhibit Purposely 'Not Our Best' Shown by D. C. Home-Craft Club

Capital Group Decides Not to Frighten Away New Members, as It Did in Other Years, by Better Products of Workers.

An exhibit of work purposely "not our best" is on display by members of the Capital Home-Craft Club this week in the Fifteenth street window of the New York avenue Postal Telegraph Co.

"In other years we have shown our best work and it scared new members away. This time we put in pieces in all stages of completion—to show that beginning amateurs really have a chance with us," Edgar W. Parks, president, said yesterday.

As an illustration of how a hobby grows—and also to give heart to the amateurs—George A. Simonds is exhibiting four inlaid boxes, the first made in 1892 and the fourth in 1937. Although the first box is passable, the years—and good hard practice, of course—have made a difference.

Parks himself is exhibiting a set of wooden salad plates. Joseph Chlopicki, whose regular work is with movie projectors, has a display of paper knives and candlesticks, both in the making and finished.

Orrin Davy, civic leader, sets a mark for inlay artists by presenting two inlaid pictures—one depicting a yacht race and the other a tropical maiden with flowers around her neck.

C. T. Kingsbury displays a French copy of "Rubaiyat," bound in wood which he has antiqued. The book's hinges are of beaten silver, as are the title letters.

Other members represented in the exhibit include William Krentzlen, whose model of the original Shakespeare Theater has attracted many visitorsm Read Middleton, who has several articles, including some fine table lamps; Henry J. Robb, whose serving table and kitchen cabinet in child's size have a professional look; William H. Gallbraith, candlesticks and floor lamp; H. E. Middleton, plaster projects and wood carvings; R. W. D. Jewette, cabinet for pictures; Edward Quinter, corner sheives and jig saw plaques; John Mattingly, smoking stand.

The club, which is the local branch of the National Home-Workers Guild, meets twice monthly—once for business and once for demonstrations. Next Thursday night they will go to Woodrow Wilson High School to watch a lapidary at work.

"That's one thing we haven't taken up so far; but some of the members are interested and we may have the work of an amateur lapidarist in our exhibit next year," Parks declared.

Car Somersaults Onto Track; Train Halts, 2 Escape

Hurtling over a dead-end embankment, two youths, riding in a light coach, somersaulted 30 feet into the main line tracks of the B. and O. Railroad near the Michigan avenue bridge early yesterday.

Thomas A. Reynolds, 24, owner and operator of the car, and Steifan Pash, 24, both of 3304 Eighteenth street northwest, were not seriously injured.

Their car jumped a low bank at the end of Lawrence street, crashed down to the tracks and overturned, directly in the path of an approaching freight train. Trainmen brought the train to a stop before it reached the auto. It was held up 40 minutes while the car was removed.

Street Urges New Industry For District

Welfare Head Proposes 8 Ways to Help Unemployed.

Partial industrialization of the Capital to provide jobs for its army of unemployed was proposed last night by District Welfare Director Elwood Street.

Street blamed plight of the city's jobless in part on the Federal apportionment act, which "largely" limits Government jobs to non-residents. Then he declared:

"In Washington, governmental activity might be supplemented by development of local light industry by businessmen and by the establishment by the Federal Government of factories which might supply some of the needs of the Government. We already have a naval gun factory here. There is no reason why the Government should not operate other industries to supply its own needs—and to employ Washingtonians now unemployed. A general practice by Washington employers of employing Washington people wherever possible would also be helpful."

Street addressed his proposal to an audience attending the third in a series of lectures sponsored by the public night schools, the Public Library and other institutions of learning in Central High School.

Street laid down an eight-point program "which might be adopted, locally and natoinally, to diminish the strength of factors creating poverty and dependency." He found a close relationship between unemployment and disease and also listed five measures for improvement of national health.

He urged extension and continuance of the public works program; a successful prosecution of the Federal housing program; continuance of at least the present CCC; extension of apprenticeship training for skilled trades; well-developed vocational placement through the United States Employment Service; reduction of hours of labor and extension of unemployment compensation; Federal old-age benefits to cover all "practicable" kinds of employment not now covered, and enactment of Federal and local sickness and accident compensation law.

He suggested a more adequate staff for parole "of those who do not need to be cared for in the District Training School, development of more mental hygiene clinics, more playgrounds, school community centers and boys' clubs, and wide community use of "church plants."

Scott Fears Spreading of Fascism Here

Californian Tells Congress Unit Three Nations Push Propaganda.

By the Associated Press.

A Congressional committee heard Representative Scott (Democrat), California, declare yesterday that Germany, Italy and Japan may act in concert to "spread Fascism" in the United States.

He indicated this possibility was a partial justification for the proposed $800,000,000 increase in the size of the fleet.

Germany and Italy already are "propagandizing" in South America, Scott told the House Naval Committee. Calling attention to the anti-Communist pact recently negotiated by Japan, Germany and Italy, he said:

"Japan's espionage is well known. The propaganda being spread in South America by Germany and Italy is well known.

"We should consider the possibility of a concerted effort on the part of these three nations to spread Fascism to the United States in one way or another."

Examine Fish.

The Californian made that declaration during his examination of Representative Fish (Republican), New York. The latter, opposing the projected 20 per cent increase in the Navy, called for immediate invocation of the neutrality act against Japan and the calling of a naval disarmament conference within 30 days.

Scott said invocation of the act would "endanger" the security of this country.

"If isolation is to be our policy," he explained, "the only thing for us to do is to build a navy sufficiently strong to defend both our coasts without any outside assistance."

Scores Propaganda.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said American admirals should not attempt to arouse fear over the international situation through the use of "ridiculous propaganda."

Borah described as "highly unreasonable and improper" a recent assertion by Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, that European and Asiatic dictators "menace our peace."

Admirals, the Senator declared, "do not make our national policies."

"It is not for them to seek to excite fears by putting out sheer ridiculous propaganda," he said.

Asks Army Reserve.

While the Naval Committee strove to complete its consideration of the fleet legislation this week, the House Military Committee recommended re-establishment of an Army Reserve of enlisted men and the addition of about 2,000 to the authorized number of commissioned Army officers.

Most of the additional officers would be assigned to the Army Air Corps, officials said.

Committee Chairman May (Democrat), Kentucky, asserted the bill, recommended by the President, was designed to provide a reserve of about 75,000 men in four or five years. Only men with military training who were under 36 years of age would be eligible and the President could order them to active duty only in cases of emergency. They would draw $24 yearly while inactive.

F. J. Bolduc Rites To Be at Bethesda

Fred J. Bolduc, 68, of Glen Echo, Md., retired Army captain who died Monday night, will be buried tomorrow in Arlington Cemetery with military honors. Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m., at W. R. Pumphrey's funeral home, Bethesda.

Capt. Bolduc died from a heart attack while on his way home from the Glen Echo postoffice. He was a veteran of both the Spanish-American and World wars and saw service in the Boxer Rebellion and on the Mexican border.

He was born in St. Jullen, in the Province of Quebec, but had lived in this country since childhood. He became a naturalized citizen in 1917.

Pershing Still in Bed.

Tucson, Ariz., Feb. 16 (AP).—Gen. John J. Pershing, 77, was still confined by doctors' orders to his bed in a hotel here, nursing rheumatic twinges aggravated by a day of rain, but his aide, Sergt. S. C. Shaeffer, said he expected to attend a rodeo opening here Saturday.

April Is Proposed As Cancer Month

A resolution to dedicate April as cancer control month each year by Presidential proclamation received immediate approval of a sub-committee of the House Judiciary Committee yesterday, after stirring arguments in its behalf by nationally known experts.

Dr. Frank E. Adair, chairman of the malignancy committee of the American College of Surgeons, said, "If the public will take the trouble to learn only a few of the simple signs of cancer and act upon this information, 75,000 lives will be saved every year."

The resolution was introduced by Representative Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts.

Gosnell Service At Walter Reed

Masonic and military rites will be conducted tomorrow for Harry L. Gosnell, retired Army medical sergeant and a technical assistant at Georgetown University Medical School, who died suddenly Tuesday night at Walter Reed Hospital.

Sergt. Gosnell contracted a cold several days ago which developed into pneumonia.

Services will be held in the Walter Reed Chapel at 10 a. m., attended by members of Vincent B. Costello Post of the American Legion. Members of the New Jerusalem Lodge, F. A. A. M., also will attend the rites. There will be a military burial in Arlington National Cemetery.

Alvin C. Birdsall Dies in Hospital

Alvin Charles Birdsall, 54, for 17 years employed in the audit division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, died suddenly yesterday in University Hospital, Baltimore. He had been ill four days.

Mr. Birdsall was the eldest son of the late William W. Birdsall, of Philadelphia, for many years president of Swarthmore College. A leader in the Society of Friends and widely known among its members here and in Philadelphia, Mr. Birdsall was born in Wilmington, Del., and educated in Friends Central School in Philadelphia and at Swarthmore College.

Youth, 20, Ordained.

Chambersburg, Pa., Feb. 16.—Harold Hunsecker, 20, was ordained as a minister of the Mennonite Church at services in Chambersburg Church. He was one of five nominees for associate pastorate of the church.

The Rev. Dr. G. Freeland Peter and the Rev. Henry Teller Cocke, both of All Saints' Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase, will officiate.

A member of the cathedral staff for many years, Miss Long is survived by two sisters, Miss Emily Long and Mrs. Mary L. Brown, both of this city. Her father was the late Capt. Andrew Kennedy Long, U. S. Army, and her mother the late Mrs. Elizabeth Foster Long.

Burial will be tomorrow at 11 a. m. in Arlington Cemetery.

O'Beirne Service At St. Anthony's

Funeral services for William F. O'Beirne, 72, retired mail carrier who died Tuesday at his home 4427 Fourteenth street northeast, will be at 9 a. m. today at St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

A lifelong resident of this city, Mr. O'Beirne was employed by the Postoffice 43 years.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Teresa McDonald O'Beirne, three daughters, Mrs. Roland R. Perry, Mrs. Gardner W. Scott and Mrs. Harry S. Welch, jr., three sisters, Mrs. Arthur E. Stevens, Miss Mary A. O'Beirne and Miss Rose D. O'Beirne, and four grandchildren.

Burial will be in Holy Rood Cemetery.

W. W. Schofield Funeral Today

Funeral services for William W. Schofield, 30, former football star at Duke University, who died Monday in Providence Hospital, will be held at 10 a. m. today at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street, northwest.

Mr. Schofield died five minutes after reaching the hospital from a heart attack.

Educated in the District public schools, Mr. Schofield at the time of his death was an attorney in the Farm Security Administration. He began his athletic activities at McKinley High School, where he was a member of the baseball and football teams. Following his graduation at Duke University, Mr. Schofield attended George Washington University, graduating with the 1934 class with an LL. B.

Admitted to the bar, Mr. Schofield entered government service with the legal staff of the Resettlement Administration. Later he joined the legal staff at the FSA.

He is survived by his father, W. W. Schofield, of Los Angeles. Burial will be in Columbia Gardens Cemetery, Arlington, Va.

For 1938 Santa Fe presents AMERICA'S LARGEST FLEET OF ULTRA-MODERN STREAMLINED TRAINS

For your pleasure on 1938 California and Southwestern journeys, Santa Fe presents 13 magnificent new trains, streamlined in stainless steel!

This fleet embodies the very latest in travel comfort, beauty and speed. It includes by far the largest array of ultra-modern passenger equipment on any American railroad. It adds new dash and joy to economy travel and de luxe travel alike. It will all be ready to fit into your spring and summer plans.

2 El Capitans

Now for El Capitan! Absolutely unique in the economy travel field—is this gleaming new Santa Fe twice-a-week silver flash to and from California, streamlined in stainless steel behind its Diesel-electric locomotives!

Here is the only transcontinental train in America entirely for chair-car passengers. Believe it or not, it will be as fast as the Super Chief—only 39½ hours between Chicago and Los Angeles! It will combine low fares and low-cost meals with true beauty and the latest comforts — including deeply-cushioned reclining chairs, carpeted aisles, broad windows, fine lighting, and attractive dressing rooms. It will save you days and dollars.

El Capitan will leave Chicago Tuesdays and Saturdays at 5:45 pm—ahead of the Super Chief. All seats are numbered and reserved. TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 22, IS THE FIRST REGULAR DEPARTURE FROM CHICAGO. Want to make that memorable FIRST TRIP with us?

If you're economy minded, choose between this new El Capitan, or the already-famous daily Scout—there IS service!

2 Super Chiefs

Another superb streamlined Super Chief enters regular service FEBRUARY 22nd—thus doubling the tremendously popular service on this extra-fare and ONLY SOLID-PULLMAN 39¾-hour train between Chicago and California. Twice-weekly departures from Chicago will be Tuesday and Saturday evenings at 7:15 pm; from Los Angeles Tuesday and Friday evenings at 8:00 pm.

6 New Chiefs

It was only fitting that the famous solid-Pullman extra-fare Chief also should go streamlined in this great Santa Fe year. Hence our pleasure in announcing delivery of new equipment, beautiful and modern as that on the Super Chief, sufficient to streamline, in stainless steel, all six of the trains required for this finest and many-hours-fastest of all California DAILY service!

1 Chicagoan
1 Kansas Cityan

Still they come! ON OR ABOUT APRIL 15th, Chicago and Kansas City will have their own gay, swift Santa Fe streamliners. There'll be two of them—of seven stainless steel cars each, Diesel-electric drawn, and on 7½-hour schedules.

On these trains, beauty and roomy comfort will feature the chair cars, with their rotating reclining seats; the combination lounges, parlor observation cars and Fred Harvey diners.

The westbound streamliner, named the Kansas Cityan, will leave Chicago 9:00 am, arrive 4:30 pm. The eastbound train, The Chicagoan, will leave Kansas City 2:10 pm, arrive 9:35 pm. Finer, faster Chicago-Kansas City service—more convenient connections at either end!

1 San Diegan

Now back to California, where, ON OR ABOUT MARCH 19th, the shimmering new six-car, stainless steel SAN DIEGAN is to link Los Angeles and San Diego more closely.

The San Diegan will make two round trips daily, on a 2½-hour schedule, between these great Santa Fe terminal cities. Beautiful and ultra-modern, with fine Fred Harvey meals in its cheery lunch-tavern car, the San Diegan will bring new pleasure and speed to inter-city travel, and afford splendid connections with Santa Fe transcontinental trains in and out of Los Angeles.

Finer, Fuller Service for These Long-Established Favorites, Too

• Streamlining of the extra-fare Chief enables us to give all the best of the Chief's fine conventional standard equipment to the no-extra-fare solid-Pullman CALIFORNIA LIMITED, beloved of countless conservative Santa Fe patrons for 45 years. Beginning February 20th, there also will be a through Pullman, from Chicago, via the Grand Canyon.

Clark Griffith

50 Years in Baseball

By Shirley Povich

Clark Griffith, Still Baseball's 'Old Fox' at 68, Shoots Golf in the 70's, Looks Ahead to More Than 'Just One More Pennant.'

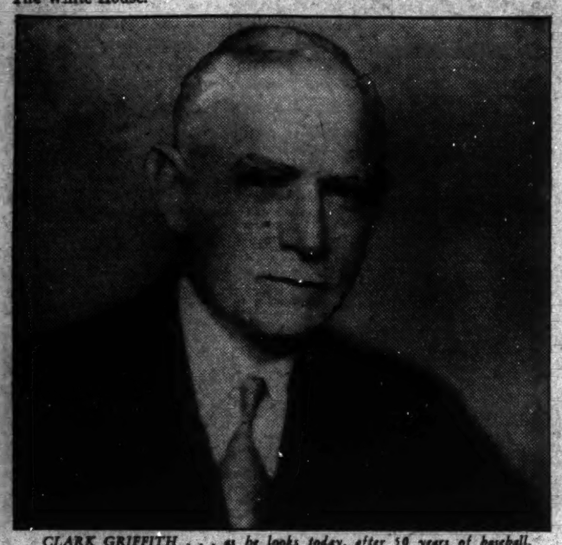
Chapter Thirty-Three.

HE'S 68 NOW, AND THE EYES HAVE IT . . . that kindly twinkle, which is, unfailingly, the mark of the man who is growing old gracefully. Gone, now, is the steely glint that was the battle sign when disaster threatened . . . when the figure of Brouthers or Delehanty or Wagner or McGraw loomed in the batter's box . . . when an umpire had to be dealt with, or when his pet, the American League, was threatened by recurrent strife in the council halls of baseball.

Clark Griffith wears his years becomingly. The most luxuriant set of brows, outside of the jungle, frame the eyes that can look back on 50 tempestuous years of baseball. No longer do silver strands about the temples lick at a black thatch above. The transformation is now complete and the driven-snow whiteness of his hair lends a fittingly patriarchal touch to the appearance of the man who is, indeed, a patriarch of the game.

Baseball is deeply in his debt. Not alone for his contributions to the pitching art, or his services as a co-founder of the American League, or for his spectacularly successful stewardship of the Washington Club. To Clark Griffith belongs another important distinction.

He won for major league baseball the respect and endorsement of The White House.



CLARK GRIFFITH . . . as he looks today, after 50 years of baseball.

To six Presidents of the United States, he has been known affectionately as "Clark." With something akin to small-boy pride, he treasures his relationships with the Nation's Chief Executives, his entree at the White House.

Baseball was apparently unconcerned with winning Presidential blessings for the game, until Griffith moved into the Capital as manager of the Washington Club in 1912. And then it was no official league movement which brought forth the link with the White House. To 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue went Clark Griffith as the game's self-appointed ambassador of good-will. Every year, for the past 26 seasons, Griffith has made that same pilgrimage, winning friends among United States Presidents and bringing to baseball the aura of Presidential favor.

Now regarded as a fixture of the baseball scene is the annual appearance of the Nation's No. One Fan at the inaugural game every season.

Harding Rated As Ranking Fan Among Presidents.

WITHOUT EXCEPTION, GRIFFITH FOUND the Presidents to be fans. William Howard Taft was well grounded in the game, inasmuch as his brother was one-time owner of the Phillies. Woodrow Wilson had managed the Princeton University team and was a Griffith Stadium visitor frequently, even after leaving the White House. On those occasions when he came to the park as a semi-invalid and watched the game from an open car in front of the right field grandstands, Griffith stationed his second-string catcher on the automobile bumper to intercept any foul balls that might fall in the vicinity of the ex-President.

Warren Harding, Griffith rated as the ranking fan among Presidents. Harding had operated the Marion team in the Ohio State League and his perfectly kept box-score of the opening game at Griffith Stadium in 1922 was requested by League President Ban Johnson as a keepsake. Calvin Coolidge never missed an opening game at Griffith Stadium, nor did Herbert Hoover. President Roosevelt has unfailingly accepted Griffith's invitations to attend the Washington games and smilingly refers to himself as the Nats' "mascot" . . . because his presence has invariably been a token of victory for the Washington Club.

It was the Griffith influence, perhaps, which prompted President Roosevelt, during the spring of 1933, following his Inauguration, to borrow from baseball language in one of his radio talks to the Nation. Then it was that he said "I have no expectation of making a hit every time I come to bat. What I seek is the highest possible batting average, not only for myself but for my team." Clark Griffith liked that speech.

Griffith has made a ceremony of Washington openings that is the envy of every other city in the league. The United States Army Band has been a fixture at Griffith Stadium inaugurals. While Presidents have sat in gaily-bedecked field boxes, Vice Presidents, Army Chiefs of Staffs and Cabinet officers have led the parades to the flagpole. Congress has found it convenient to adjourn for the afternoon of the opening game almost without fail.

Griffith Makes Success of 1937 All-Star Game in Capital.

IT WAS IN BOSTON DURING THE SUMMER of 1936 that Griffith received formal recognition by the two big leagues for his showmanship talents. The annual All-Star game had been a disappointment at Boston that summer. 17,000 unsold seats were a serious reflection on the popularity of the game. Frantically, the magnates sought a plan to restore the All-Star spectacle to popular favor.

Griffith volunteered to stage the 1937 game in Washington. It was the West's turn to sponsor the game, he admitted, but the demand was for a stirring come-back. Washington alone, he argued, could provide the proper setting. There was instant agreement among the club owners of both leagues. The game was entrusted to Griffith's promotion and in Washington, last summer, with the President and other dignitaries in attendance, it recaptured its place as a featured spectacle.

At his side throughout the past 37 years of the Old Fox's baseball career has been the former Ann Robertson, whom he took as his bride in 1900. The comely lass, born in Scotland and who had never seen a baseball game until introduced to Griffith by her ball-playing brother, Jimmie Robertson, has always been his inspiration.

For 21 years, the patter of childish feet was not heard in the various Griffith households—in Chicago, New York, Cincinnati, Washington. And then, Jimmie Robertson died, leaving seven fatherless children in near-want at his Montreal home. Those seven children Mr. and Mrs. Griffith brought to Washington. Two they brought into their home in 1921 and legally adopted—the boy, Calvin, and the girl, Thelma. Four years later, after contributing to the support of the remainder of the little Montreal family, the Griffiths prevailed upon the mother to move her brood to Washington, where a home would be provided. Among that group of youngsters was the 16-year-old girl named Mildred Robertson, who was to serve as Griffith's private secretary for nine years, before becoming the bride of Joe Cronin.

Calvin Griffith Groomed for Baseball by Foster-Father.

CALVIN GRIFFITH, THE LEGALLY ADOPTED son of "The Old Fox," has been groomed for an executive post in baseball for more than a decade. Under the tutelage of his foster-father, he has been given a thorough course in both the competitive and administrative phases of the game and is now the enterprising president and manager of the Charlotte Club of the Piedmont League. Thelma Griffith, beauteous blonde adopted daughter, has succeeded her sister Mildred as Mr. Griffith's private secretary. Equally fond is Griffith of the other children of the Robertson family—Sherrard, who is a student at Maryland University; and the athletic twins, Jimmy and Billy, who are stars of the Roosevelt High School basketball team. All of the trio are ball players, to the great joy of Griffith.

During the summer of 1936, a young Washington widow with three small children was evicted from her home, after failing to find employ-

Owls Rally, Defeat Navy By 61 to 58

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 16.—Temple won from the Navy in a brilliant game of basketball here today by 61 to 58, after the lead had changed five times in the first half and twice knotted in the second, with the Navy holding a 1-point lead at the middle of the final period.

With one minute to go and the score tied at 56, Bloom scored twice from the floor and once from the line for Temple, while McFarland dropped a field goal for the Navy.

The game was marked by spurts on both sides, Bloom, Shields and Black leading the way for Temple, while Ghesquiere and McFarland had a heavy preponderance of the points scored by the Navy.

Navy Jumps Into Lead.

Well into the first half, and with Temple leading by 16 to 11, Navy, with its fast-scoring duo leading the way, tallied 15 points while Temple stood still, to run into the lead by 26 to 16. Temple, however, regained the lead and ended the half with the score 35 to 26 in its favor.

George Ghesquiere, whose mission on the Navy team is to be the first alternate in every position and who just now is playing center for the injured Frank Lynch, was magnificent in today's game.

He scored nine field goals and six from the line, making good on all his chances in the latter particular, and his 24 points was the high score of the game.

Ed Boyle dropped a field goal s the second half opened but McFarland followed with a score on a long shot. Ghesquiere made good on a double chance from the line and then scored from the floor. Boyle, Shields and then Boyle again tallied for Temple to put the score at 42-34.

Cut Temple's Margin.

McFarland and Ghesquiere then renewed their scoring habits and gradually cut down Temple's lead. With the final period just half gone, Ghesquiere again accepted both chances from the line and then scored in a field goal, after getting a pass from McFarland which put the Navy in the lead by 43 to 42.

Shields, scoring from the floor, made the Navy's advantage short lived but Ingram scored on a very long shot to put the Navy a point ahead again. Henderson, scoring his second goal of the game put Temple back into the lead promptly and Meyer Bloom scored four times from the floor, with the Navy's only score a two-pointer by Capt. Alan McFarland, in between.

McFarland again led the way for the Navy and three minutes from the end, the score was again knotted, at 56 points. All the rest of the scoring—two field goals and one from the line by Bloom and McFarland's field goal—were in the last minute of the game.

Temple Passing Tricky.

Though defeated, the Navy played far better basketball than at any time this season but the point-making fell heavily upon two players—Ghesquiere and McFarland. Scoring was better distributed among the Temple players and some of its trick passing opened new lines of basketbial to the local fans.

The Navy ends its home season here Saturday by playing Catholic University, after which only the Army game, to be played a week later at West Point, looms before it.

G. W. Frosh Win Thriller

Md. Cubs Bow, 41-39; Hyatt, Amendola Star.

Although forced into an extra period to turn the trick, George Washington's Freshman quintet defeated the Maryland Frosh for the second time in a week yesterday, 41 to 39, in a thriller in Ritchie Coliseum.

The young Colonials doubled the score on the Terps at half time, 22 to 11, but George DeWitt and Gene Ochsenreiter led a rally that put Maryland ahead, 34-22, with 30 seconds to play. Here Mannie Hyatt dumped in a field goal to tie the score at 34 all.

Eddie Amendola, who accounted for 22 points in the game, saved seven of them for the extra period, and the winning points. DeWitt and Ochsenreiter each scored for the Little Terps in the extra period, and Todd converted a foul.

Amendola's 22 points led the scorers, with DeWitt and Ochsenreiter pacing the Terps with 13 and 11, respectively.

Johnson Sinks 2 Goals to Down Washington College Team.

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 16.—Two field goals in the closing minutes tonight gave the University of Maryland a 1-point, 43-42 victory over Washington College in a nip and tuck basketball game before 1,200 spectators, one of the largest crowds ever to see a court contest here.

It was a fast, close game throughout and remarkably few personal fouls marred the sparkling action. The teams were never more than a few points apart. At one point Maryland had a 6-point lead and at another Washington was 5 in front.

The teams came down to the final three minutes with Washington leading, 40-39. Then Johnson, Maryland forward, potted two field goals to make it 43-40 for the Terrapins. With only a minute left, Smith, Washington guard, sank a field goal from mid-floor to make it 43-42.

The game ended in a scramble beneath the Washington basket as the Sho'men tried desperately to score again.

Johnson, with 14 points, and Wheeler, the other Maryland forward, who had high-point honors with 16, carried the Terrapin attack. Zebrowski, Washington center, rang up 14 points for the Sho'men. Smith and Kardash, forward, had 10 each.

The final score and the half-time score both showed only a one-point difference between the teams. At half time, Maryland led, 19 to 18.

U.S. Hockey Team Beaten

Czechoslovakia Defeats Americans by 2-0.

By the Associated Press.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 16.—America's hockey team was beaten for the first time today in the world's amateur championships, bowing 2-0 to Czechoslovakia in the second round eliminations.

Czechoslovakia, which had survived the first round eliminations by tying Sweden and defeating Austria after losing to Canada, scored one in the first period and again in the third to trounce the Americans.

Previously the United States had whipped Germany, Latvia and Norway and deadlocked the strong English team 1-1 to remain in the running.

Canada overcame Germany's defense today, 3 to 2, and hung up its initial victory in the second round eliminations of the world championships.

Beathesda Beats Sandy Spring by 51-to-21 Margin

Sherwood High, of Sandy Spring, proved no match for the flashy Bethesda-Chevy Chase quintet yesterday at Bethesda in an intra-Montgomery County game, losing, 51 to 21.

The hosts doubled the score in the first half, 20 to 10, and added 31 points to their total in the latter periods, paced by Hayden, Sullivan, Fuller and Morrell. Bond led the losers with 9 points.

It was the third win against no defeats for the Bethesdans in county competition.

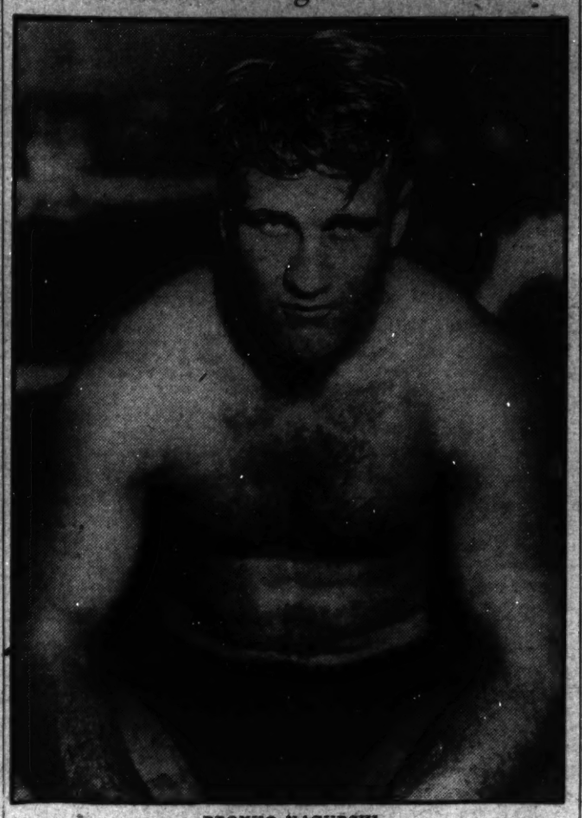
Headlines Tonight's Mat Card



BRONKO NAGURSKI.

Nagurski to Tackle Chawaki in Feature

Former Grid Ace Meets Indian at Arena; Detton Battles Periera; Minnesotans Will See 'Champ' in Action.

Tonight marks Nagurski's third defense of his championship here. A few months after inheriting the title, Nagurski beat Dynamite Joe Cox before 5,000 spectators at Griffith Stadium, and last month Bronko walloped John Sullivan at the Arena.

Oddly enough, the man who lost the worlds' title to Nagurski will be on tonight's card. He is Dean Detton, the Salt Lake City expert, who has been matched with Al Periera, the European title claimant, in a semiwindup match.

Detton, incidentally, is anxious for another shot at Nagurski. Twice he has lost to the former Minnesota All-American, and Promoter Joseph Turner will present such a match if Detton and Nagurski win.

In other 30-minute bouts Orville Brown, considered by Turner one of the best wrestlers in the world, faces Walter Podolak, the California health instructor, and Chief War Eagle, a newcomer, meets Joe Bonica, another newcomer.

Several hundred Minnesota followers of Nagurski have made reservations for tonight's title match. Dutch Bergman, Catholic U. mentor, who coached Nagurski at Minnesota, will be present with a party, as will the presidents of the Minnesota State and Alumni Associations.

Chewaki was disqualified last Thursday for strangling Dean Detton.

Women and children will be admitted for 40 cents plus tax.

Cochrane Definitely Through As Player; Foresees Pennant

Detroit Catcher to Retire After 13 Years in Major Leagues.

By the Associated Press.

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 16.—Manager Mickey Cochrane of the Detroit baseball club announced today he was hanging up his big mitt for goo, after 13 years as a major league catcher. At the same time he predicted the Tigers would knock off the Yankees "if we get the pitching."

Cochrane's playing career actually ends last May 18 when he was beaned by a fast ball pitched by Bump Hadley, of the New York Yankees. For weeks he was in a critical condition and when he recovered he went on the voluntary retired list.

"I'm all through," Mickey said. "I won't even get in there as a pinch hitter any more. I feel fine now, and I probably have some catching left in me, but I feel I could not do justice to two jobs—managing and playing.

Sorry He's Through.

"It makes me feel like the very devil. I've had a lot of fun as a ball-player and I'm sorry it's all over."

As for the Yankees:

"Somebody's going to knock them down eventually," Cochrane said, "and it may as well be us. We're in swell shape to do the job, if we get the pitching."

And what about the Tiger pitching?

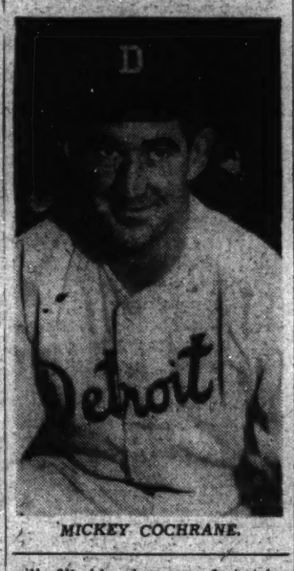
"Say!" Cochrane grinned, "I got 17 pitchers coming to camp at Lakeland and we ought to develop something out of the newcomers. I think Rowe may be all right this season. Then we've got Tommy Bridges and Eldon Auker as standbys. And Roxy Lawson—don't forget him. He just won 18 last season, and should be even better this year."

Benton Is Promising.

Mickey said Baron Poffenberger, who won ten and lost five in his first year up from Beaumont, shaped up encouragingly and another newcomer, Alton Benton, who won 16 last year for Memphis "looks like the real goods."

"Then," he said, "we've got Vernon Kennedy, whom we received in a trade from the White Sox this winter, who is a real pitcher. Yes, sir, it looks pretty good."

Cochrane said young Rudy York will fill his shoes as first-string catcher, with the veteran Ray Hayworth in reserve.



MICKEY COCHRANE.

Fort Myer's Boxers Win Match by 5-2

Knockouts were split two each last night as the Fort Myer boxers defeated the Fort Washington representatives, 5 to 2, in the Fort Myer Riding Hall.

The hosts won the first three bouts by decisions for a 3-0 lead, lost the next two by knockouts but scored K. O. victories in the final matches for the triumph.

C. U. Routed By Marshall Five, 65-43

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Union City, N. J., Feb. 16.—The jinx that has hovered over every District team assaying a victory in metropolitan competition, was out in full force tonight, and Catholic University's quintet bowed to John Marshall College, 65 to 43, in Thomas Edison High School's tight little hatbox court. Never once in the lead, the Cardinals made a game but futile battle of it and succumbed to a definitely superior shot making ability on the part of the Blue Devils of Jersey City.

It was the second defeat administered Catholic University by John Marshall this season. Last month the Blue Devils invaded the District precincts and handed C. U.'s quintet a 47-34 setback.

Wayne Ambrose, huskey blond C. U. junior, the District's scoring ace, led the Cardinals with ten points. Miller, substituting for Joe Guyon, tallied nine, and Frank Kratzell, eight. Ambrose was completely shackled during the first half and didn't score a single point. He broke loose in the second and kept the rim red hot with his over the head tosses, right to the final gun. He managed to sink five goals from the floor.

Johnny Killat, Marshall right forward who played with George Washington University's Tommy O'Brien as a schoolboy in these parts, was the game's high scorer with 14 points. His teammates, Mallon and Kellehre, each gained 10 points.

Irish Carroll, the most effective Cardinal operative in the first half, during which he scored seven points, was banished from the game at the start of the second half on personal fouls. John Marshall set a 28 to 14 pace at the half.

Catholic University is slated to play Long Island University in Brooklyn tomorrow night.

Youngsters Pace Golfers

Jacobs, Strafaci Advance in 'Champs' Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 16.—Two youngsters, both newcomers to the championship of golf club champions tournament, stood out today as the event moved into the quarter-final round.

Strafaci takes on I. L. Merrill, Jr., of Daytona Beach. The latter eliminated C. L. Hornung, Fond du Lac, Wis., 6 and 4 today.

The other quarter-finals will see Robert Lansdell, grey-haired golfer from Hackensack, N. J., playing Richard Chapman, Greenwich, Conn., youth, and William Holt, Syracuse, N. Y., pitted against J. L. Collins, of Canton, Miss.

Lansdell beat E. J. Rogers, Oklahoma City, today 2 and 1. Chapman advanced over the veteran Jack Ryerson, Cooperstown, N. Y., 5 and 4. Holt eliminated Robert S. Montague, Saginaw, Mich., 2 and 1. Collins ousted B. N. Coggin, Jacksonville, one up.

Joe Louis Fights Thomas-Adamick Winner April 8

The deal was closed at a conference between Mike Jacobs, head of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, who will promote the bout, and Julian Black, one of Louis' managers.

If Thomas beats the Detroiter, in convincing fashion, the title shot with the Brown Bomber will be held in the Chicago Stadium, where Nate Lewis, Thomas' pilot, says a sell-out will mean a gate of $250,000.

Purple Club Loses After Game Battle

By Jack Munhall.

St. John's Chicago-bound basketball band was nearly derailed by hidden dynamite last night as a vastly underrated Gonzaga team arose to abnormal heights to offer the city champions their stiffest battle of the season before bowing, 25-22, at Tech gym, in one of the wildest games of the season.

Fifteen hundred spectators, including some 500 young ladies who were all but hysterical as an unbelievable upset impended in the final quarter, watched the Johnnies call on every trick to eke out a thrilling victory in the last two minutes.

A long set shot by Albert Birch, a substitute who had just replaced Joe Gallagher, St. John's keyman who was lost via the foul route, was the clinching blow, for it staked the Cadets to a 23-to-22 lead with 1½ minutes to play. Even then it apeared for a time that Gonzaga was to emerge the victor, for Chip Collins, its little blond forward who played one of the greatest games seen all year, swished a field goal from sidecourt. The Gonzaga cheers, which burst like swollen waters through a dam, subsided in choked throats as the referee ruled Collins had double dribbled.

This unfortunate breach of the rules by the same lad who had led one of the gamest uphill fights of the season proved the blow that snapped Gonzaga's spirit, which for the best part of 40 minutes had kept it out in front of a much superior team.

Gonzaga Comes Back.

Beaten and almost disgraced in a previous meeting with the powerful Cadets, Orrel Mitchell's purple-clad lads came back last night and battled with a tenacity and perseverance that won the admiration of even St. John's rooters.

Entering the game a despised underdog pot conceded as much as a 10-1 chance to topple Gene Augustefer's Johnny team, which is being favorably compared with the greatest aggregations in the history of the small Vermont Avenue School, Gonzaga was in the position to spring a startling form reversal. It was the old story. Gonzaga had everything to gain, St. John's everything to lose and it was only by the breaks that it did not.

Gonzaga, flashing a far better brand of passing and shooting than it had yet shown, matched point for point in the first half, and to the utter surprise of the crowd, held a 14-12 advantage at the intermission due to a pair of set shots by Buddy O'Brien, whose ejection for personal fouls in the third quarter somewhat compensated for St. John's loss of Gallagher.

In the third period, the overconfident Johnnies lost their air of knowing superiority and settled down to humiliate the upstarts. With Jim Giebel, its brilliant center, leading a fast offense, St. John's warmed up and exhibited the play of which it is capable. But as hard as the Johnnies fought, so fought Gonzaga and the teams headed in the home stretch neck and neck, basket for basket.

Gallagher Scores.

Just before he sadly departed the game in the waning minutes of the third stanza, Gallagher boosted St. John's into a 21-18 lead on two swift baskets, but this advantage was short lived. The irrepressible Collins, a blond streak dashing all over the floor to bat down enemy passes, dropped in a lengthy pot shot and then sank a fowl to deadlock the count tighter than a hangman's noose.

With less than five minutes to play, Francis Smith, who had replaced O'Brien in the Gonzaga lineup, sent the Purple in the van by tossing in one of two free throws and Gonzaga led, 22-21.

Then it was that Birch, a rosy-cheeked kid who has seen little action for the Johnnies this year, took a pass from Francis Battiste and let fly from the foul line. The ball was wide of the basket and rebounded to where he stood. Again he let fly and this time the ball found the cords. Leading 23-22, St. John's tried to freeze the ball but the fleet little Collins grabbed the ball from a defender dribbled to sidecourt and rammed in a sensational shot that apparently won Gonzaga the decision.

The officials, however, made their crucial ruling and St. John's won in. Just before the final whistle which was unheard by the frantic teams, Giebel slipped in to push up a snowbird that removed the game from Gonzaga's reach.

Diana Fishwick Loses In Mixed Golf Event

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 16 (AP).—Diana Fishwick, former British women's golf champion, and Brig. Gen. A. C. Critchley, of London, were upset today in the quarter-finals of the Everglades Club invitation mixed foursome tournament.

Miss Fishwick and her partner were trounced, 5 and 4, by Mrs. H. D. Sterrett, of Hutchinson, Kans., and P. B. Lucas, of London, a member of the British Walker Cup team two years ago.

Drowsy, 5-1 Shot, Awakes to Win in Hialeah Park's Sprint Feature

This Morning

Nothing Written in 836 Words.

By Walter Haight.

I have watched the incoming mail all day hoping for a fan letter to use in this column. Here it is almost dark and none has put in appearance, so I'm going to write one to myself:

Mr. Walter Haight,
Sports Department,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

If you don't stop writing Povich's column I'm going to be forced to cancel my subscription. My house has been in an uproar ever since you began filling the space. I have a wife, two children and my mother-in-law lives with us. We fight and scratch every morning over who is going to be first to read your column. My mother-in-law is suffering from insomnia and it has proved an asset since the "Battle of First to Get Haight's Column" began. She listens for The Post carrier and when the paper comes she goes down and gets it. Then she takes it back up to her room and spends the rest of the morning giggling at or quoting from your column.

HAIGHT.

Last night I was determined that I would be first to read the Haight column this morning. When the others retired, I said I was going to sit up for a while and read over some of Haight's previous columns. The truth was that I intended to stay awake all night to guarantee my objective. However, I fell asleep. Sometime later I awoke with a start. The radio station had signed off and the thing was making a noise like a motorboat regatta. I heard footsteps on the porch. It was The Post carrier boy!

Here was victory within my grasp! I tiptoed out into the dark hall, leaned over to grasp the doorknob and—the whole family banged our heads together. I know it was the gentlemanly thing, but, thanks to my high school football training, I was able to carry the whole crowd out of play and squeeze through the door. With the clear field, it was a simple matter to pounce on The Post. As I did so, I heard a click. My wife and the rest of our gang had locked me out.

What did I do? Well, I sat down on the steps, opened the paper and used up a box of matches reading the Haight column. You would be surprised how well it reads under a flickering light.

I was locked out so long that I was late for work and the boss fired me. My wife has filed suit for divorce, my mother-in-law has sworn out a warrant for me for assault and battery. My children were late for school and the truant officer is after them. However, I consider my triumph a not too costly one.

Now, I don't know your salary, but whatever it is, the boss should give you a raise. Compared to you, that Povich is a tramp.

Yours until your column arrives tomorrow morning, even if it has to be pushed through the bars to me at the District Jail. I remain,

Your constant reader,
WALTER HAIGHT.

* * * *

Thanks a lot for those kind words, Mr. Haight. We of the press always like to hear from our millions of readers. We who pound the typewriter day in and day out often feel that we are nonproductive. Letters like yours give us a feeling of personal touch with our public. They make us realize that there is more in writing than simply arranging words and passing them to the editor.

I want you to feel that I am more than a columnist to you. Whenever you are downtown I want you to stop by The Post Building and see me. Now, do that and, remember, any time you want a couple of passes for the pigeon races in West Potomac Park, don't hesitate to give me a ring.

Filly Leads Sparta and Boston Pal

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 16. Form players continued in a daze here this afternoon. After the running of the featured sixth race, a grade "B" handicap of 7 furlongs for 3-year-olds and upward, not a public choice had been able to succeed. The Starmount Stable's filly, Catalysis, drew the bulk of the play and wound up fifth in the field of six. The lion's share of the purse went to Mrs. Payne Whitney's gray filly, Drowsy, which clicked by a length, to return $12.30 for $2. She ran the distance in 1:25 2-5.

Mrs. D. A. Headley's Sparta, after breaking last and circling the field was a game second, a length and a half clear of F. Magann's Boston Pal. Sparta, the second choice, is eligible for Saturday's McClennan Memorial, a $7,500 added event.

A. G. Tarn's Rushaway, only Widener Cup nominee in the field, returned to the races after a layoff since last October and tired to last place after moving up threateningly approaching the stretch.

It was Drowsy's first success in four winter outings.

Catalysis flattered her backers for about a half mile. Joe Renick broke her on top and the daughter Stimulus kept her head barely in front of Drowsy's until near the stretch turn. There, Porter Roberts clucked to the Greentree Stable 4-year-old. Drowsy bounded clear and opened up two lengths' lead. Catalysis finally faded out of it in the last furlong as Sparta closed like a wild horse on the outside. However, Drowsy was safely home before Sparta could become a menace. Boston Pal outlasted Great Haste for the show.

After failing to land in the picture in three previous trips to the post, Handiboy, under the veteran Charlie Landolt, crashed through to beat a dozen other juvenile platers in the first race. The chestnut son of General Lee, paying $30.80 for $2, drove into a clear lead after the run for positions and held on in a hard drive to score by a half-length. Polly Fair closed gamely and was wearing the winner down while placing by a head over the forward running Filandro. Friendly Paul and Clock Mouse, the "field" horses, were outrun all the way in the role of favorite.

Earl Porter came to life and won the second race by a head from Miney Myerson, the short-priced choice. Cosmic Ray, the early leader, faltered in the stretch and finished third, a length and a half back. Sammy Williams, the apprentice who rode four winners the previous day, did not put up his usual strong ride astride Miney Meerson. After his mount passed the wide-running Cosmic Ray straightening for home, the boy failed to get the most out of the 8-year-old gelding. Earl Porter, closing with a rush on the outside, got up just before reaching the wire to return $10.20.

Wayne Wright's followers collected in the third event when the Idaho veteran guided Debate, a $10.40-for-$2 shot, to a one-length triumph in the 6-furlong test. R. Pinchot staged a rousing stretch rally to gain the place, another length before Fair Time. Debate, well handled, led all the way. He first had to race Miss Chicro into submission, then moved away and had enough left to hold R. Pinchot under control. Sun Antioch, the favorite, never could seriously menace the leaders.

Dear Al: Selections at Hialeah Park.

Jake Jacobs, alias Jockey Noboy and Washington Jake, mourns the passing of Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson. Jake numbered "Th' Admiral," as he called him, among his topflight friends along with the late Vice President Charles Curtis. Admiral Grayson often called on the likable Washington handyman for errands and such. Jake, through his connections with photographers, obtained many pictures of horses for Admiral Grayson. Mary Hirsch, first woman trainer to be licensed by the Jockey Club, has added three horses to her Hialeah stable, sent here from Columbia, S. C., by her father, Max Hirsch, noted New York horseman. They are Night Intruder, Taut and Jest Once. The latter pair are juveniles. The Woolford Farm's Lawrin has returned to training after suffering a slight leg injury. He goes in the $20,000 Flamingo Stakes on February 26. The Greentree Stable has been hard hit. Tattered, its most important stake horse, went wrong last Sunday morning. Trainer John Gaver reports. Tattered was considered a formidable entry for the $50,000 added Widener on March 5. Now Mrs. Payne Whitney's stable will have to rely on Brush Hook. Jockey T. P. Martin, who rode here with moderate success, has transferred to Hot Springs, where he will pilot horses during the coming session. Most of the Charles Town jockeys and many of the horsemen will see action at Hot Springs, my operative tells me. Admiral Grayson's My Own was out of the mare Betty Landon, a winner at odds of 100-to-1 at the old Benning Track, writes "Old Timer."

BILL.

First race—Odessa Beulah appears to be headed for a victory in this field of juveniles. I'm giving her a slight edge over Sweet Patrice, one that should get home soon. Throttle Wide deserves a place in the money circle.

Second race—Sun Madras finds a field here that seems to suit the stable's purposes and I expect a lot of foot. Chronology is a fair sort and may cause the top one trouble. Time and Again deserves mention.

Third race—My We and Doggerel figure to battle it out for the main part of the purse in this field. Both are as fit as hands make horses. Town Car is improving and could surprise me.

Fourth race—Ethelmont has speed and appears to fit well in this company. A good, hustling ride would bring us a winner. Teddy Weed seems capable of holding Odessa Frank safe for the place money.

Fifth race—Black Mistress and Mixwell are a tight fit in this field. Both have trials and races that say "Yes." I'm going to take them in the order named. Erochigh should gain a place in the cash.

Sixth race—Mistall ran a powerful race to be second to Wise Prince last out and off that effort deserves the call here. Sketchbook goes well on occasions. Lawrin worked fairly well yesterday after that report of injury so I'm putting him third.

Seventh race—Ritz Brothers, a cheap one, may be ready to crack down among these. I'm going to take a chance. Martin Burton and Blind Brook will battle it out if the first one falters.

Best Bet—Mistall.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HANDIBOY, $30.80, $15.80, $10.20; POLLY FAIR, $5.80, $4.70; FILANDRO, $23.90.

HANDIBOY settled into his stride rapidly, drew into a clear lead in the opening furlong and responded with determination under vigorous urging and outlasted his opposition. POLLY FAIR broke well and was under interrailient punishment early to maintain her position and closed gamely when the final test came. FILANDRO, in third quarters between the leaders in the last furlong, made a bold effort, but could not get up.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:31. Off 3:39½. Winner, A. E. Webber's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EARL PORTER, $10.20, $4.90, $3.50; MINEY MYERSON, $3.50, $2.70; COSMIC RAY, $3.40.

EARL PORTER, running in greatly improved form, improved his position rapidly while circling the field in the last three furlongs and wore MINEY MYERSON down in the final drive. MINEY MYERSON, a fast contender all the way, saved ground entering the stretch, disposed of COSMIC RAY, but was unable to withstand the winner's challenge. COSMIC RAY, strongly urged, took command in the run down the backstretch, swung wide into the stretch, lost ground and faltered in the last furlong.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; allowances. Class C. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:31. Off 3:34½. Winner, S. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HI CLIFF, $19.00, $7.90, $3.30; BIRDLEA, $5.00, $3.80; IRISH MOON, $4.70.

HI CLIFF, going forwardly on the outside under light restraint until the stretch turn, drew clear with a rush and continuing with determination, outlasted BIRDLEA when the final test came. BIRDLEA, rated off the early pace until entering the stretch, moved up smoothly on the outside and made a bold effort and would have won in a few more strides. IRISH MOON, slow to get going, stole through on the inside in the last three furlongs and saved much ground, responded to punishment gamely and outlasted GANGPLANK.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,000. Grade C Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:01. Off 4:03½. Winner, M. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIME SIGNAL, $6.40, $2.80, $2.70; BLACK RIVER, $2.80, $2.40; DARK SUN, $4.00.

TIME SIGNAL, displaying his speed, took command in the opening furlong, was steadied in front while saving ground and had something in reserve when challenged and maintained his lead gamely to the end. BLACK RIVER, rated off the pace and going very wide on the final half mile, closed courageously when called upon, but could not overhaul the winner. DARK SUN, slipping through on the inside the entire trip, easily disposed of BLIND PIG in the stretch run.

SIXTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,200. Grade B Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:31. Off 4:34. Winner, Greentree Stable's gr. f. (4), by Royal Minstrel—Dear Susan. Trained by J. M.

Eastern Basketeers Check Rally and Wallop G. W. High by 45 to 30

Quantrille's 17 Points Top Local Attack

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 16.—Forced to perform at top speed in the final half, Eastern High School's crack cage squad staved off a late rally by the opposition to defeat George Washington High School in the G. W. gym here this afternoon. The final score was 45-30.

Clint Quantrille, with 17 points to his credit, paced the Eastern offensive, nosing out George Washington's Eddie Nowland for scoring honors by a single point. The D. C. ace dropped in six field goals and five foul shots, while Nowland, who appeared to be far off form in the first half, scored all of his 16 points in the final two periods.

Throughout the early stages of the game, it was all Eastern, and the Washingtonians walked off the floor at half-time on the long end of a 16-7 margin. They increased it to 22-7 before the slow-starting George Washington team came to life to score six straight points, and from then on, a fast and furious brand of basketball was produced.

The Presidents succeeded in matching their opponents point for point for the remainder of the game, but any efforts to close the breach between them were met with a hot Easter counteroffensive. The visitors led by ten points at the close of the third stanza.

Both teams speeded up their offensives in the final quarter, and the result was a rough exhibition that saw Ralph Matera, of Eastern, and Ed Snyder, of George Washington, go out of the game on excessive personal fouls. Every player in the game was guilty of at least two personals.

Matera's work in chalking up snowbirds from under the basket in the final half was a big factor in Eastern's favor, while Howard Hancock helped the cause along with eleven points, most of which were scored on pot shots from back of the 15-foot line.

Howard Five Bows, 39-37

Morgan Wins Thriller; Bison Eliminated.

A side-court shot in the final minute of play broke a 37-37 tie and sent Howard University's five down to a 39-37 defeat at the hands of Morgan last night before 1,900 fans in the Howard gym. The loss, Howard's fifth of the season, eliminated the Bison from the Colored Intercollegiate Association championship race.

Howard suffered a blow to its chances when Parker, high-scoring center, left the game early in the second half on personal fouls. The game was closely contested from the start with neither team having more than a 4-point advantage.

Hampton sank a goal to tie the count, but just as it appeared the battle might go into an extra period, Lampkins, Morgan center, came through with his sensational shot that decided the issue.

It'll Be Powell in Leftfield For the Yankees, Says Jake

Former Nat Gardener, in Town for a Visit, Is 'Fit as a Fiddle.'

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Alvin "Jake" Powell, who went from the sandlots to the Yankees, via the Nats, and two world series in approved Frank Merriwell fashion, is a current visitor in his old stamping grounds, Silver Spring, with the Missus and 5-year-old Joan Elizabeth. The Powells are now citizens of Dayton, Ohio.

Jake is fairly well known around town, since that Sunday afternoon several years ago when Clark Griffith visited the District Line field to scout a pitcher, who is now forgotten, and Jake knocked the ball out of Montgomery County every time at bat, and was signed on the spot.

Since then the swaggering slugger has made headline news with regularity. After several good seasons with the Nats he was traded to the Yanks for Ben Chapman, and made no bones about being in favor of the swap.

Series Hero.

With the Yankees he was the '36 world series hero, with a .455 batting average, and last year, despite an appendicitis operation and sinus trouble, made the headlines by crashing into Hank Greenberg, when the big Tiger first-sacker broke his arm, and later causing pop-bottle barrages here when he was mixed in a melee with Joe Kuhel and Walter Millies, with repeat performances in New York.

Fully recovered from the operation and apparently rid of the sinus, Powell in rarin to go after that leftfield post in the world's champions outfield. His competition includes Myrl Hoag and Rookie Tom Henrich, who Jake, confidently but not boastfully, figures he can displace.

The Yank fence-buster has made Dayton his home, and has spent the winter there connected with a clothing firm, hunting, playing golf and keeping in shape with workouts in a gym, aided by his own rowing machine, a recent purchase.

It'll be Private Powell on the Dayton Police Force when his ball-playing days are over, and that's another reason for settling in the Ohio city. Jake was offered a beat there before and the offer stands when he gets through patroling the outfields.

His contract was signed, sealed and delivered early last month, contrary to his 1937 tactics when he decided he was worth more money than Col. Ruppert thought, and was a holdout. But after appearing in only 57 games last year Jake lost little time in engraving the dotted line this year, a contract that called for approximately the same as last year, with a bonus clause.

Powell claims to be a peace-loving man, when queried on the Greenberg and Kuhel affairs and similar incidents that have dotted his big league career, but Jake wants a green light when he's running the sacks, and if he doesn't get it, he piles in. He doesn't hold any grudge against Kuhel or anyone else but if they get in the way again, one of 'em will go down again.

Tigers Tough.

The stock question of who'll give the Yankees the most competition brought a Western answer, Detroit, Chicago and Cleveland, with the Tigers the most feared. But Jake, like the law of averages, also figured the Red Sox might be due.

His golf scores have dipped from 90 to 80 and he claims a 69 on a par 71 course, "but it was just luck." Pro Gene Marchey and Bob Servis, former Miami-Biltmore amateur tourney winner, have been his links companions.

The Powell family will leave for Dayton Monday, to close up the house and head for St. Petersburg, where Jake intends to report with the pitchers for an early start on that leftfield post. He said that the Yanks would like to meet Brooklyn in the World Series. I guess he took the pennant race for granted, like the rest of us.

JAKE POWELL.

Table Tennis, Pro Basketball on Card

An added attraction on Sunday afternoon's basketball card at the Heurich gym featuring the Heurich Brewers and Hermie Schmarr's West Virginia Collegians, will be a table tennis exhibition match.

The match, scheduled for 3 o'clock, will be between Manny Moskowitz, New Jersey champion, and Elias Schuman, District of Columbia titleholder.

The professional game will start at 3:30, with a preliminary to be held at 2 o'clock.

ment. The story in a Washington newspaper touched Griffith. That afternoon, the widow and her flock were comfortably installed in the Griffith household. For a period of weeks, the three tots were daily visitors to Griffith's office, clambering over his desk, playing tag with his secretary, perching themselves on the club owner's lap, while he beamed. Until the mother could find office work, Clark Griffith met all expenses for the little family in the home which he obtained for them.

This, then, is the man whom unknowing and disgruntled Washington fans have attempted sometimes to picture as a close-fisted, self-centered individual—the man who could have pocketed most of $1,000,000 in profits during 1920-24 but chose, instead, to pour his earnings into the improvement of his ball park and his ball team.

Never did Griffith possess the wealth to gamble recklessly on expensive rookie talent, in the manner of club owners who were backed by unlimited resources. But, despite that handicap, he has given to Washington since 1912 a brand of baseball second in the league only to that of the New York Yankees. By wise purchases and canny trading, he has promoted three pennant winning teams for the Capital and, if the positions of his Washington Clubs at the finish of the past 26 pennant races are averaged, it will be found that only the Yankees have a better record in the league.

He won a pennant in 1924 by developing a ball club. And, nine years later, he was able to win a pennant by taking the opposite tack—by building a pennant winner out of veteran players acquired by shrewd trading.

He has found time to be an active Mason and a member of the Capital's Board of Trade. He has, on occasion, spoken from a church pulpit. He didn't take up golf until he was 51 but he can score in the seventies. He has punched cows in Montana and is at home in the saddle. He annually "suggests" that every Washington ball player enroll in the Professional Ball Players of America—a charity group—and then takes the contributions out of their salaries. He wants a 25-cent admission fee for children. He used to hate the National League, but now concedes it has a place in baseball. He doesn't want to win just "one more pennant." That sounds too much like finality. For Clark Griffith's face is still turned toward the sun . . . not the sunset.

The End.

Columbus U. In Ring Test

To Tackle Appalachian Teachers Tomorrow.

Columbus University's boxers, who meet three opponents in the next nine days, will entertain the Appalachian State Teachers mittmen tomorrow night in Turner's Arena, at 8:15 o'clock. Citadel here next Tuesday and Villanova away next Saturday are the other matches.

Undefeated since 1931, with only two draws to blot its record, the Explorers will meet a stern test in the Appalachian team, winners over North Carolina State and Tennessee while losing only to Duke.

The 8-0 rout of the DeSales punchers next week served notice of another undefeated season for the locals.

Industrial League Looking Forward To Banner Season

With five strong clubs already granted franchises, the Industrial Baseball League is looking forward to a banner season on the sandlots this summer. This will be the circuit's eleventh consecutive season in the field.

O'Donnell's Sea Grill, 1937 champion, Coffey Screen Co., Heurichs, National Savings and Trust Co., and Seven-Up Beverages have been granted franchises. Should some strong, well organized club desire to be affiliated, a sixth franchise may be authorized.

Present plans call for the opening game to be played Saturday, April 30, with following games on Monday, Tuesday Wednesday and Thursday of each week. A meeting of all managers has been called for next Wednesday at 8 p. m. Information concerning the league may be obtained by calling President Bill Flester at District 4089.

Blankens Trip Bergman Bowlers

Living up to their reputation as a menace to pace-setting teams, the seventh-place Blankens Restaurant rollers, paced by Perce Ellett's 400, Harry Wolfe's 378 and Earl Steele's 371 knocked the Bergman's Wildcats out of first place in the strong Recreation League last night, winning all three games. Sam Simon's 372 was high for the losers, which dropped them into third place.

The University Shop regained the lead by sweeping their set from Herzog's. Terry's Appliance moved into second place one game back of the leaders by taking a 2-1 decision from Marvins Credit Co. despite Lou Pantos' 374.

Marlboro Hotel, led by Earl Duncan's 397, Brad Mandley's 377 and Joe Harrison's 370 took the odd skirmish from Allied Roofing Co. Perce Wolfe's 389 was tops for the losers. The last place Cooke Press took a 2-1 decision from Blaydes Contracting Co.

Manhattan, N.Y.U. Relay Teams Clash

Fast Fours to Battle Saturday at Garden; G. W. Competes.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 16.—The mile relay teams of New York University and Manhattan, which have turned in the fastest time of the indoor track and field season, will meet Saturday in the feature race of the six college relays scheduled for the New York A. C. meet at Madison Square Garden.

New York University's quartet stepped the mile in 3:20.2 at the Millrose games 10 days ago after Manhattan's four had been timed in 3:20.4. Fordham, which did 3:24.9 at Boston, Columbia and St. John's of Brooklyn will complete the metropolitan field.

The fields for the other relays announced today are:

Mile—Georgetown, Pittsburgh and Holy Cross.

Mile—Princeton, Pennsylvania and Dartmouth.

Mile—Rhode Island State, Boston College and Colgate.

Two miles—North Carolina, Manhattan, New York University and Fordham.

Two miles—Dartmouth, Princeton, Pennsylvania and Columbia.

The pole vault and high jump also will bring together all-star fields. Earle Meadows of Southern California, Olympic champion and co-holder with Bill Sefton of the world outdoor record of 14 feet 11 inches, heads a field of eight in the pole vault.

Mel Walker, former Ohio State claimant of the world outdoor record of 6 feet 10 3-10 inches, tops the high jump field, which includes Les Steers, Palo Alto schoolboy and Art Byrnes of Manhattan.

Dunne Ready For Gevinson

Benny Leonard's Protege to Appear Hear.

Benny Leonard, who brings his protege Irish Eddie Dunne here to meet Lou Gevinson in the feature of next Monday night's fight card, claims that Eddie is ready to knock the ears off Matt Twomey's protege.

Leonard passed up a previous match for Dunne with Gevinson on last summer's kiddies free luncheon fund card for a larger purse than he will get next week, but evidently figured last year that his boy was young and needed a few more fights under his belt.

Dunne was signed when Leo Rodak, No. 2 featherweight challenger, pulled out of the Gevinson bout. Eddie Cool, Eddie Brink and others were under consideration for the bout when Dunne was signed.

Miss Miley Wins Match

Shows Way to Choices in Mid-Florida.

By the Associated Press.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 16.—Medalist Marion Miley of Fort Pierce, Fla., led the favorites today into the second round of the mid-Florida women's golf tournament.

She overwhelmed Mrs. F. W. Thomas, of Columbus, Ohio, 8 and 7.

Frances Owen of Jacksonville, former Florida champion, ousted Mrs. Peter Vredenburgh, of Montgomery, Ala., 5 and 4. In the day's closest match, Helen Sumpter, of Columbus, Ohio downed Betty Myers, of Covington, Ky., two up.

Betty Mackener of Chicago defeated Mrs. Reid McKenzie, of Gainesville, Fla., 4 and 3. Mrs. Lillian Zech of Chicago eliminated Mrs. Leon Soloman, of Memphis, Tenn., 5 and 3, in the nearest approach to an upset.

A 4 and 3 victory over Mrs. R. C. Coffey of Orlando advanced Mrs. Archie McLave, of Hastings-On-The-Hudson, N. Y.

Mrs. Myron Cook of Orlando won over Joy McCann, of Montgomery, Ala., 3 and 2. Mrs. Sam Byrd of Philadelphia turned in a 4 and 2 victory over Mrs. Jackie Fuller of Orlando.

Wheat Prices Advance With Foreign Sales

1,300,000 Bushels Are Reported for Over-the-Sea Purchasers.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—Much enlarged export business in North American wheat, totaling 1,300,000 bushels, helped the Chicago market score 1¼ cents a bushel maximum late advance today.

The advance came after an earlier setback of about a cent that resulted largely from continuance of rain and snow benefiting domestic crops Southwest and West. Promoting the late upturn of wheat prices was considerable notice taken of trade talk about inflation possibilities at Washington.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ¾@1¼ cents above yesterday's finish, May, 92⅞@93, July 88½@88⅝; corn unchanged to ½ higher, May 59⅛@59¼, July 60⅜@60½; oats unchanged to ¼ off; rye showing ⅝@¾ bulge, and provisions enhanced 10 to 20 cents.

Argentina Takes Lead As Plane Purchaser

By the Associated Press.

Argentina displaced China as the leading purchaser of American aircraft in 1937, the Commerce Department announced yesterday.

In spite of its defense needs because of hostilities with Japan, China reduced its American aircraft purchases from $7,185,556 in 1936 to $3,961,819 in 1937. Argentina bought $4,403,507 worth of airplanes and parts last year, nearly doubling its previous year's purchases.

Japan, fifth largest buyer of American airplanes last year, increased its purchases from $989,100 in 1936 to $2,483,946 last year. The largest increase was made by Turkey, whose 1937 purchases of $2,450,391 equaled 2.535 per cent of its 1936 purchases.

Cotton Declines With Selling

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 16.—Cotton was irregular today with March under pressure while later months ruled about steady. May, which had recovered from 8.86 to 8.92 late in the day encountered renewed selling and closed at 8.87, with final prices 4 points net lower to 1 higher.

Trade and commission house buying was attributed to Tuesday's late spurt in textile buying and statements attributed to the White House that prices were too low. March, however, was sold most of the day in advance of first notice day next Wednesday.

Futures Price Ranges.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil was strong and active today on renewed covering and commission house buying with most positions at new highs for the year and final prices at about the best of the session and 19 to 22 points net higher. The buying was promoted by the Administration's attitude on commodities, sales were 283 lots. Bleachable, spot, nominal; March closed 8.00; May, 8.10; July, 8.15; September, 8.22.

Curb Is Irregular In Light Trading

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—A few specialties and mining shares made slight headway in the curb market today against minor losses for leading oils, utilities and industrials.

Midwest Piping & Supply advanced 3⅝ points to 11¼, Pan American Airways was ¾ higher at 15¾ and fractional markups were shown by American Cyanamid "B" 24½, Consolidated Copper Mines 4⅛ and Teck highest 5⅝.

On the losing end fractions to around a point were Babcock & Wilcox, Aluminum Co., Cities Service, Gulf Oil, Creole Petroleum, Pantepec Oil, Electric Bond & Share, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and New Jersey Zinc. Transfers of 113,000 shares compared with 138,000 Tuesday.

Steel Prices Not to Decline, Survey Holds

Optimistic View Despite Recent Break and New Wage Agreement.

New York, Feb. 16.—Despite the widespread disturbance of market conditions caused by the break of $4 a ton in prices of cold rolled sheets, coming almost simultaneously with the wage agreement, there is no indication of a downward revision of steel prices generally, according to Iron Age in its weekly survey of the steel industry.

"The reduction in prices of cold rolled sheets was precipitated, it appears, by the offer of one mill to furnish hot rolled annealed, pickled and oiled sheets for certain automotive parts that had heretofore called for cold rolled sheets. This competitive situation was met by other steel producers in a reduction of $2 a ton on mill-run cold rolled sheets and the elimination of the $2 a ton oiling extra, a charge that had become superfluous on continuous mill sheets because of the oiling required in the rolling process. The price cut started with light sheets but has ben extended to heavy cold rolled sheets. A reduction in the price of hot rolled annealed sheets would seriously affect the non-integrated mills unless they, in turn, received lower prices on sheet bars.

"Although in the past a break anywhere in the steel price structure has often extended to other products, whether closely related or not, there is under present conditions of rigid labor costs and high-priced inventories surprisingly little sentiment in favor of general price revision either among steel producers or large consumers of steel. There is still the fear that price revisions would cause wide repercussions, affecting wage rates and bringing about a further downward spiral.

"In the present situation the steel consumer is sitting on the sidelines to an even more noticeable extent than during the past few months. Buying dropped perceptibly in many lines after the break in sheet prices, even in products where there has been no suggestion of a price change. Yet a clarification of the price situation may bring a mild improvement in steel buying, for unquestionably a good many orders have been held back during the past few weeks, some for known and definite requirements. However, automobile companies still have ample stocks of steel, sufficient for 30 to 60 days, depending upon production gains.

"Export business continues in fairly good volume while the Steel Export Association of America is trying to work out export quotas, in co-operation with the International Steel Cartel, covering about a dozen products in addition to pipe and tin plate, which have been "cartelized" here for some years.

"Scrap markets are weaker, No. 1 heavy melting steel having declined 25 cents a ton at Pittsburgh, bringing the Iron Age composite price down to $13.83, a decline of 17 cents from the January level. The European Scrap Cartel may not buy here for several months, reflecting an easing in the European steel situation.

Stocks Move Irregularly in Dull Trading; Government Bonds Firm, Wheat Higher.

New York, Feb. 16.—Dollars had another sinking spell, but United States bonds held steady. Commodities moved forward in orthodox fashion with the drive for inflation, but stocks were wary. At best the prices were only slightly higher and irregularity was the rule. Moderate buying toward the close lifted the price of several leading issues above the previous day's closing prices. Turnover again was around half a million shares. May wheat closed a cent higher at 92⅞ cents a bushel.

Many of the leading stocks opened a bit higher. Coppers were prominent, even though copper had been singled out by the President as one commodity which was not entitled to sell as high as it did last spring when an 18-cent level excited presidential disfavor. Copper shares along with others soon retraced the ground gained and fell below previous closing levels. In the late trading price changes were mostly fractional, and at the close the market was irregular.

Coppers Weaker.

Anaconda Copper was one of the most active stocks on the list. It opened a point higher, lost ground and then rallied modestly. Kennecott sank more than a point from its early high price. Phelps Dodge was hurt by a smaller dividend payment and dropped a point. Greene Copper fell 14 points on its first sale of the year. Steel and Chrysler were weaker toward the close. At their worst they were down about a point. Chemicals gave up 1 to 3 points in light dealings.

Railroad stocks were lower. Union Pacific and Great Northern sagged. Missouri Pacific issues under the threat of removal from the list slipped, the common selling at the lowest on record. American Telephone recovered an early loss of a point on declaration of the regular $2.25 a share dividend. Consolidated Edison gave up a fraction on plans to increase the capital stock and the holding up of the New York Steam consolidation operation. Tractions hardened. Westinghouse was jumpy in a 4-point range. Gold shares were steady. Dome stiffened.

Price Confusion.

It may have been called clarification of policies by those who exposed certain changes in "objectives," but the financial community concluded that the fog had thickened a bit in so far as the Administration's movements on money, prices, and other economic questions were concerned. It was especially difficult for Wall Street to see the practical connection between a change in the gold policy, which contemplated the ending of sterilization of incoming gold, but which did not actually add to money market ease, with a new policy to lift commodity prices.

It is confusing enough to learn last spring that, after four years of striving to restore the price level to that of 1926 (which, incidentally, was a period of peak prices for farm products but not for many other commodities), the President had decided that enough was too much and that prices should come down, especially copper. Whether the Administration thought it ought to have a cheaper market for the copper it needed for the navy or whether it had taken an especial dislike to the management of a few large copper producing companies was a matter of guesswork, and still is, but the President continues to talk down copper while now he is boosting other commodities.

Cart Before Horse.

Few will dispute at this stage the assertion that the Government intends to use its powers of spending and money manipulation to lift commodity prices, in the hope that a rise in prices will stimulate business. It will do no good to repeat the old economic maxim that rising prices follow instead of precede active business. It was easy to talk down prices last spring, especially with the help of a little whispering that the Treasury might cut the gold price.

Putting prices back again will be a shade more difficult, as Humpty-Dumpty could show. Demand for products will have to appear before cheap money will stimulate the upward price movement. Reopening the capital markets by repealing the undistributed profits tax, amending the capital gains tax, letting up on the utilities and the railroads, and giving more freedom to underwriting banks will do more to strengthen commodity prices than all the hocus-pocus with gold and credit that it is possible for the experts at Washington to conceive.

Listing.

The Missouri Pacific case is just another reminder of the great benefit that would flow to the Stock Exchange were it to adopt a rule for removal of stocks, instead of depending on its present hit or miss, last minute procedure. If, for instance, stocks of any company going into bankruptcy automatically were suspended from the trading list, a great deal of future trouble could be avoided, and while that might mean a poorer market for stockholders of record at the time of bankruptcy, after all the bankrupt companies were their own, and the interests of prospective investors deserve consideration.

Stock Seat $67,000, Advance of $2,000

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—New York Stock Exchange seat values today soared a further modest recovery over the 18-year low of $59,000 at which a membership was sold early this month. The latest proposed transfer involved a price of $67,000, a rise of $2,000 over a sale arranged a few days ago.

The high price for a seat since the start of the year was $75,000 in January.

Penn. R.R. 1937 Operating Net Declines 13%

Higher Costs and Freight Slump at End of Year Offset Early Gains.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 16.—Sharp declines in the freight traffic of the Pennsylvania Railroad in the last four months of 1937, together with steadily advancing operating costs, more than offset traffic gains made earlier in the year, so that results of the full year's operations show a decrease of $11,179,665, or 13.3 per cent in net railway operating income as compared with 1936.

The company's ninety-first annual report for the year 1937 made public yesterday reveals that operating revenues increased $14,508,320, or 3.3 per cent, while operating expenses advanced $23,873,592, due to higher wage scales, advancing costs of materials and fuel, and heavier expenditures for equipment and roadway maintenance in the spring and summer when traffic was moving in heavier volume.

Freight revenues increased 2.4 per cent and passenger revenues 8.1 per cent for the year. The net railway operating income of $73,000,927 represented a return of only 2.8 per cent upon the investment in road and equipment.

Baldwin Locomotive.

New York, Feb. 16.—Operations of the Baldwin Locomotive Works and subsidiary companies, including the Midvale Co., for the year ended December 31, 1937, resulted in a profit of $2,880,690 after provision for taxes, but before provision for depreciation and interest, as compared with a profit of $921,216 in 1936, according to the annual report made public today by George H. Houston, president. After provision for depreciation and interest, the net profit from the year's operations amounted to $407,376.

Consolidated sales for 1937, exclusive of intercompany transactions, totaled $36,586,461, of which sales of locomotive products amounted to $15,259,799. Of the total volume of business done, 58 per cent was outside of the locomotive field as compared with 82 per cent in 1936. Unfilled orders at the end of the year, without intercompany eliminations, totaled $24,583,345, as compared with $30,531,416 at the beginning of the year. Unfilled orders for new locomotives and tenders at December 31, 1937, aggregated $13,512,783.

Fiscal Fund, Inc.

Philadelphia, Feb. 16.—Total assets of Fiscal Fund, Inc., on December 31, 1937 were $1,997,824.79 and outstanding shares 734,877, according to the first annual report of the fund just issued. Of the asset total, $833,789.40 was applicable to 342,155 shares of the Bank Stock Series and $1,162,035.39 applicable to 392,722 shares of the Insurance Stock Series.

Income account shows distributable funds, after deduction for expenses, of $28,294.69 on shares of Bank Stock Series, and $36,727.63 on shares of the Insurance Stock Series.

Rubber Consumption Drops 42% in January

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—The Rubber Manufacturers Association estimated today crude rubber consumption in the United States last month amounted to 29,429 long tons compared with 50,818 in January, 1937, a decline of about 42 per cent. The total for December was 29,160.

Rubber imports were recorded as 42,135 tons against 68,305 in December and 32,820 in January, 1937. Domestic stocks increased to 269,078 tons from 256,818 in December and 204,201 at the end of January last year.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Feb. 16 (AP).—(United States Department Agriculture)—Most kinds of domestic wools were very quiet on the Boston wool market today. There was a little call for spot fine territory wools at around 60 cents scoured basis for average to short French combing wools in original bags. Around 62 to 63 cents scoured basis was the maximum that could be obtained for original good French combing length fine territory wools and demand was very limited at this price level.

A.T.&T. Quarterly Dividend Is Voted

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—Directors of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. today declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2.25 a share on the capital stock, payable April 15 to stock of record March 15.

The payment, aggregating about $42,000,000, will go to approximately 640,000 stockholders, scattered all over the world. The dividend is the same as has been paid by the company each quarter since 1921.

Libby-Owens-Ford.

Libby-Owens-Ford Glass Co. has announced a dividend of 25 cents a share on the common stock, payable March 15 to stockholders of record February 28. Last year, the company paid $1 in the December quarter, $1.50 in September and 75 cents each in March and June.

Mergenthaler Co.

Mergenthaler Linotype Co., of Brooklyn, deferred action on dividend payments due at this time. Last year the company paid four dividends of 50 cents each.

$50,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $50,000,000 or thereabouts. They will be 91-day bills and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders. Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks up to 2 p. m. Friday.

Gains for 5th Consecutive Year, but Is 18.7% Under 1929.

New York, Feb. 16.—Total farm cash income amounted to $8,521,000,000 in 1937 as compared with $7,920,000,000 in 1936, an increase of 7.6 per cent. Last year represented the fifth consecutive year of expansion, a period in which farm income practically doubled, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Income at the low for the depression, in 1932 amounted to $4,328,000,000. Farm income in 1937 was larger than in any year since 1929 but it was 18.7 per cent below the 1929 figure of $10,479,000,000.

The increase in farm income from 1936 to 1937 was more than sufficient to offset a rise in the prices of goods which farmers bought. The increase in the farmers' purchasing power, however, amounting to only 1.9 per cent, was at a much slower rate than in the previous four years.

Current evidence continues to support the prospect that farm income in 1938 will be substantially smaller than in 1937. The price indext of farm products dropped in January to a new low for the current decline and present weakness indicates a further decrease in February. The price level in January was 22.1 per cent lower than in the same month last year. This decrease was accomplished by a drop of only 2.1 per cent in the prices of goods which the farmers bought.

There is thus indicated not only a curtailment of farm income this year but a decrease in the farmers' purchasing power. A reduction in industrial activity is always a sequel to a curtailment of the farmers' buying power.

Local Banker Speaks At Taft Junior High

Richard Norris, assistant cashier of the Lincoln National Bank, will speak to the commercial department of Taft Junior High School tomorrow, Mr. Norris' talk has been arranged by the public education committee of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, and is the first in a series planned by the junior bankers.

The subjects chosen all deal with financial problems and procedure and have been designed to bring to the attention of the public various aspects of a financial career.

New Life Insurance Decreases 12% in Year

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—New life insurance for January was 12.1 per cent under the same month last year, the Association of Life Insurance Presidents reported today.

The association, in its monthly report to the Department of Commerce, showed new paid-for life insurance amounting to $589,165,000 for January, compared with $670,390,000 for the same month in 1937. The report includes 40 companies having 82 per cent of the total life insurance outstanding in all United States legal reserve companies.

Bob Burns Says—

Human nature is the same in all lines of business. I have found that the directors who are the most considerate of the extras and workers are those who have been extras or workers themselves.

One time a wealthy society lady who never had to work a day in her life come into a store where I was workin' and wanted a piece of linoleum. I showed her every roll we had and when they didn't suit her, I took her to the wholesale house and after lookin' at every roll they had there and not finding what she wanted, I showed her a catalogue.

Finally she picked a piece she wanted. When the roll came from the factory, I called the lady and she came right down and said that was exactly what she wanted. I says, "Well lady, how much do you want?" And she says "Oh, just a little piece for the bottom of my bird cage."

ROY POWERS, EAGLE SCOUT— The Watchman Is Fired! By Paul Powell

BURKE, WERE YOU GOING TO USE THAT CLUB ON THOSE BOYS?
UNCLE BOB! HEY! UNCLE BOB!
SO WHAT? DIDN'T YOU HIRE ME TO KEEP SUSPICIOUS PEOPLE FROM SNOOPIN' AROUND HERE?
ROY! WELL, WELL — I'M GLAD TO SEE YOU LAD! — THIS IS A VERY PLEASANT SURPRISE!
BELIEVE ME, IT'S A SURPRISE TO ME TO FIND YOU HERE — AND JUST IN TIME TO SAVE US FROM AN UGLY ROW — CHUNKY, MEET MY UNCLE, BOB BROWN
BURKE, IT SEEMS TO ME THAT A COUPLE OF SCOUTS COULD HARDLY BE REGARDED AS "SUSPICIOUS PEOPLE" I'M FED UP WITH YOUR BRUTALITY — YOU'RE THROUGH RIGHT NOW — I WANT A WATCHMAN, NOT A THUG
I'M FIRED AM I? — OKAY — BUT DON'T GIT NO IDEA I'M THROUGH — NOT YET I AIN'T — I'LL SQUARE THIS WID YOU — AND PLENTY, MR. BROWN!

WELCOME TO OUR NEW STORE, NED BRANT AND BUD SHEKELS!
WE SHOULD START IN BY GIVING THINGS AWAY!
WHERE'S FANBELT? I'LL BET HE'LL PUT OUT SOMETHING
THEY'RE OUR FIRST CUSTOMERS, JAKE — WE MUST SHOW OUR APPRECIATION — I'LL GIVE EACH A NICE TABLET!
THAT'S MORE LIKE IT, FANBELT — WE DO A LOT OF WRITING
THERE'S ONE FOR YOU, NED, AND HERE, BUD, IS ONE FOR YOU — TAKE BEFORE EATING
JUST FOR THAT I'LL TAKE MY CHARGE ACCOUNT ELSEWHERE

Should U. S. Send Arms to China?

Secretary Hull recently turned down a request from Geneva to aid League powers in arming China.

A recent survey by the Gallup Poll showed that American voters are predominately in sympathy with the Chinese. But, do voters agree with Secretary Hull's decision against aiding China with arms and ammunition? The Gallup Poll gives you America's answer . . . tomorrow.

Adm. Grayson To Get Military Funeral Today

President to Attend Rites for Red Cross Head in Arlington.

As messages of condolence continued to pour in, arrangements for the funeral of Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, personal physician to three Presidents and chairman of the American Red Cross, were completed yesterday.

Services will be held at 11 a. m. today in St. John's Church, Sixteenth and H streets northwest, followed by burial with military honors in Arlington Cemetery near the grave of William Howard Taft.

The Rev. Oliver J. Hart, rector of the church, will conduct the funeral, assisted by the Rev. Albert H. Lucas, headmaster of St. Alban's School, which has been attended by Admiral Grayson's three sons—Cary, jr., Gordon and William.

Roosevelt to Attend.

President Roosevelt, who had known Admiral Grayson since wartime, will attend the services and may go with the furneral cortege to Arlington.

The procession, after leaving St. John's Church will pass along H street to Seventeenth. Then it will proceed southward on Seventeenth street past the headquarters of the National Red Cross to Constitution avenue and across the Memorial Bridge to Arlington.

The international committee of the Red Cross, with headquarters in Geneva, will be represented by Marc Peter, the Minister from Switzerland. The League of Red Cross Societies, Paris, will be represented by Ernest J. Swift, vice chairman of the American Red Cross and former secretary general of the League of Nations.

Enlisted Men to Bear Casket.

Members of the central committee of the American Red Cross, of which Admiral Grayson was chairman, will attend the services. Present will be Mrs. August Belmont, New York; Miss Mabel T. Boardman; R. Walton Moore, counselor, Department of State; Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Associate Justice Stanley Reed; Maj. Gen. Charles R. Reynolds, Surgeon General, U. S. Army; Rear Admiral Perceval S. Rossiter, Surgeon General, U. S. Navy; Eliot Wadsworth, Boston; Lloyd B. Wilson, George Harrison, James L. Fieser, James K. McClintock and Ernest J. Swift, vice chairmen of the American Red Cross.

Designated as active pallbearers were Chief Pharmacist A. F. Schwartz; Chief Pharmacist G. A. Fox, and Chief Pharmacist Mates A. J. Winters, L. H. Morse, L. F. Curtis, N. J. Seamster, M. Wheeler and E. O. Hogan. Navy officers will act as ushers at the church services. Members of the family announced that it was the admiral's desire that every friend who attended the services should be considered an honorary pallbearer.

The District Society, Sons of the Revolution, of which Admiral Grayson had been first vice president for several years, will be represented at the funeral services by Dr. Thomas E. Green, Charles Colfax Long, Edwin S. Hege and William P. Meredith.

At the new gate to Arlington Cemetery, near the Virginia approach to the Memorial Bridge, a naval escort, under command of Rear Admiral Gilbert J. Rowcliff, judge advocate general of the Navy, will meet the funeral procession and the body will be placed upon a caisson. The Navy Band also will meet the cortege at the Arlington Gate.

Tribute in Senate.

Majority Leader Barkley and Senator McAdoo paid tribute in the Senate yesterday to Admiral Grayson.

Barkley commented that the Admiral's "heart was always in unison with the finest traditions and aspirations of the people," while McAdoo said he was a man of "outstanding character and ability."

Messages of condolence came from his friends in every walk in life yesterday. Red Cross Chapter officers all over the Nation expressed grief at the loss of their chairman. Cablegrams came from many nations, and the embassies and ministeries of many nations were represented through personal calls at the home.

Col. E. R. Bradley wired from Palm Beach: "I am very much grieved to learn of the death of Admiral Grayson for not only has the Nation lost one of its outstanding citizens but the turf has lost a gentleman and I have lost a good friend."

Other messages were from Joseph P. Widener and many other friends who loved good horses, including from Jesse Blair Webster, widely-known colored man in charge of field glasses at the Maryland tracks.

Among the Red Cross societies of the world sending messages of sympathy were those of San Salvador, Dominican Republic, Mexico, France, Costa Rico, Cuba and Peru.

Envoys Send Messages.

Messages were received also from the Ambassador from Japan, Hirosi Saito; the Ambassador from Russia, A. Troyanovsky; the Ambassador from Poland, George Potocki.

Others included:

Josephus Daniels, Ambassador to Mexico, who said: "My long and intimate association, official and personal, gave me insight into the nobility of a character to which the world looked for leadership in the amelioration of suffering. The world shares with you a sense of irreparable loss."

Daniel J. Doherty, National Commander, American Legion: "On behalf of the national organization of the American Legion I am conveying to you and your family the deepest sympathy in the death of your illustrious husband. Nearly one million legionnaires join me in acclaiming Admiral Grayson as an outstanding physician, humanitarian and patriot who served his country and fellowmen well. In his death our Nation lost a distinguished citizen and the American Red Cross a great leader. May the knowledge of our admiration for him and our country's gratitude for his services help to sustain you in his loss."

Dr. George Crile, chairman of the board of regents, American College of Surgeons, Chicago: "The officers and members of the board of regents of the American College of Surgeons extend to you and to your family their heartfelt sympathy. The medical profession has lost one of its most illustrious members of the world, a great humanitarian who could by the mere suggestion of needing or wanting them always summon a host of true and eminent friends to his side."

The Gorgas Memorial Laboratory, Panama, C. Z., Dr. Herbert C. Clark, director: "The Gorgas Memorial Laboratory extends deepest sympathy."

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor: "The Red Cross has sustained a very great loss. I share with you and all the admiral's friends the feeling of sadness you and they experience over his untimely passing."

Among the many hundreds of telegrams were messages from the Ambassador to Belgium, Joseph P. Davies; Alfred E. Smith, James A. Farley, Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring, Drs. Will and Charles Mayo, Senator Robert F. Wagner, Samuel G. Blythe, Senator Harry F. Byrd, Amon G. Carter, Norman H. Davis, Arthur E. Fisher, of Detroit; Hampson Gary, Mr. and Mrs. Will H. Hays, Thomas W. Lamont, Mr. and Mrs. Hanford Macnider, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mellon, the Right Rev. W. Coleman Nevils, S. J.; Herbert Bayard Swope, Louis Seibold, Thomas J. Watson, Mrs. Frederic W. Upham, of Chicago.

Cablegrams were received from Prince Tokugawa, president of the Japanese Red Cross; the Red Cross Society of China, Shanghai; New Zealand Red Cross, the German Red Cross, Berlin; the Hungarian Red Cross, Budapest; the Latvian Nurses Association, Riga; the Shanghai Internatoinal Red Cross and China Famine Relief Committee; the Greek Red Cross, Athens; the Siam Red Cross, Bangkok; the Yugoslav Red Cross, Belgrade; the Latvian Red Cross, Riga; the Florence Nightingale Foundation, London; The Netherlands Red Cross; Carl, Prince of Sweden, for the Swedish Red Cross; Sir Arthur Stanley, for the British Red Cross, London; the Lithuanian Red Cross; Peruvian Red Cross, Lima; the Red Cross Societies of the U. S. S. R., Moscow; the Albanian Red Cross, Tirane; the Estonian Red Cross; the Chilean Red Cross; the Russian Red Cross (Old Organization), Paris.

College to Pay Tribute.

Sewanee, Tenn., Feb. 16 (AP).—Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson's alma mater, the University of the South, will pay tribute to him tomorrow at the same hour funeral services are held in Washington.

A resolution of the board of regents will be read in which he is referred to as one of the university's "most illustrious sons and a genius for friendship."

Admiral Grayson was graduated from the university's medical college in 1903. The university gave him an honorary D. C. L. degree in 1936.

A big hug was ready for William Johns when he returned to his Knoxville, Iowa, home to the bedside of Marilyn, his seriously ill 7-year-old daughter, after he was released from a 10-year prison term for embezzlement. Doctors said worry over her father caused the child's illness.

Senator King Visions U. S. Under Dictator

Tells Ad Club Nation Is Headed Toward Totalitarian State.

The United States is headed toward a totalitarian state ruled by a dictator Senator William H. King, Democrat, declared yesterday.

Increased centralization of power in the Federal Government is robbing people of their rights, he told the Advertising Club at its luncheon in the Raleigh Hotel.

A renaissance of individualism is needed to halt the concentration of power in hands of a few people before all liberties are taken away from the masses, he said.

"Today the Administration has one program, and tomorrow it has another," the Senator said, "but always there are the same symptoms of a drift toward a totalitarian state with the Federal Government taking away more and more power from the State, city and county governments and the people.

Farm Bill Held Wedge.

"I am amazed that the American people so willingly abdicate their rights for which their ancestors fought to the Government.

"This monstrous farm bill which the Senate passed the other day is another entering wedge to telling the farmers and eventually all the people in the country what they can and cannot do.

"Unless the trend of centralization of power is checked, the people will get price fixing by the Federal Government.

"I predict that this session of Congress will appropriate between $8,000,000,000 and $9,000,000,000, of which $2,000,000,000 will be for salaries and there still will be a deficit. But people demand that the Government take away more of their rights and give them more money, even though they say they don't want more taxes.

Inflation Will Result.

"The result of piling up deficits will be inflation and then the dollar won't be worth a dam. That, too, will lead toward a totalitarian state."

He pointed out how the Federal Government was run for less than a billion dollars in the Wilson administration, while now more than $2,000,000,000 go to Government salaries, and there is a mounting deficit despite increase in taxes more than 500 per cent.

Denouncing the increasing appropriations he said, "You can destroy business by taxing people to death."

He added that as long as he is in public life he hopes to fight against concentration of power in the Federal Government, robbing people of their liberties as has happened in Russia and Germany.

4 Towns' Firemen Fight for an Hour, Fail to Save Home

Fire last night destroyed the home of William Hawkins on Twenty-seventh street in Leeway, Arlington, Va. Four volunteer fire companies poured water on the flames for more than an hour. Loss was estimated at $5,000.

Neither Hawkins nor any member of his family was at home when the blaze started about 6:30 p. m.

Firemen and neighbors dashed into the blazing two-story frame structure and saved most of the family's furniture.

Hose lines were stretched to the fire 4,000 feet from Lee Highway. Water pressure was maintained by pumping crews of the Ballston, Cherrydale, Falls Church and Clarendon fire departments.

'Tobacco Road' Played 1,800th Time on B'way

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—The curtain rose on "Tobacco Road" for the 1,800th time tonight. The play still has 732 performances to go to equal the all-time record set here by "Abie's Irish Rose."

Man Denies He Struck Wife; Is Held to Jury

Charged with striking his wife with a hammer as she sat at her desk in the Internal Revenue Department Monday, Thomas W. Blackstock, 42, pleaded not guilty in Police Court yesterday. Judge Walter J. Casey ordered him held to the grand jury under $3,000 bond.

Building guards found Mrs. Blackstock unconscious from a blow on the head and Blackstock standing over her body. Emergency Hospital physicians said the woman suffered a brain concussion. She lives at 1301 Massachusetts avenue northwest, and her husband's address is 1321 M street northwest.

G. O. P. Unit to Dance.

The Young Peoples Republican Club of Prince Georges County, Md., will give a dance at 10 p. m. Saturday at Holbrook Farm auditorium, Brentwood, Md.

State Won't Seek Death for 'Tarzan'

Philadelphia, Feb. 16 (AP).—The State will not ask death for Mary K. O'Connor—called "Tarzan" by some of her schoolmates—for slaying a child in a fit of rage.

Prosecutor Charles Gordon said, tonight, he would ask that the jury find the 19-year-old husky-built blonde guilty of second degree murder. This would carry a prison sentence of 8 to 12 years.

Botanist Speaks Tonight.

Dr. E. T. Wherry, associate professor of botony, University of Pennsylvania, will lecture on Colorado wildflowers in the National Museum auditorium at 8 p. m. today. There is no admittance charge and the public is invited.

Conservatory Recital Scheduled Tomorrow

Bernard Lee Mason, violinist, a graduate of Oberlin Conservatory, and Warner Lawson, talented colored pianist, will be presented by the Washington Conservatory of Music in a recital tomorrow evening at 8:15 in Asbury M. E. Church, Eleventh and K streets northwest. The program includes two sonatas for violin and piano (the F major by Handel and the D minor by Brahms), violin pieces by Vieniavski, Mendelssohn and De Falla, and piano compositions by Chopin and Debussy.

Dance Set for Tonight.

The Massachusetts Society of Washington will hold its Valentine dance tonight at the Wardman Park Hotel. The Glee Club of Georgetown University will sing several selections.

Norfolk Airmail Service Assured

Operation of an airmail service between Washington and Norfolk, Va., was practically assured yesterday when Second Assistant Postmaster General Harllee Branch told a delegation from Norfolk that the Post Office Department is prepared to start service on April 1 if the City of Norfolk completes arrangements with Pennsylvania-Central Airlines.

Norfolk's city manager, Tommy Thompson, said the city already had an understanding with the airline that service would begin as soon as the dunways at the new Norfolk Municipal Airport are ready for use.

The proposal calls for the extension of the present route 14 between Detroit and Washington to Norfolk. The Associated Press reported.

Zionist Will Discuss Future of Palestine

Maurice Samuel, Zionist and author of "Beyond Woman," "Jews on Approval" and other works, will speak at the Jewish Community Center tonight. He will describe recent developments in Palestine and evaluate possibilities.

His local visit was arranged by the cultural committee of the Zionist organization, of which Allan Fischer is chairman. Daniel Ellison, president of the seaboard region, Zionist Organization of America, also will speak.
